STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The chief significance of the church itself is architectural, as it was the product of an international master of the Gothic Revival (early), and added to by another master who happened to be also a parish member.

The church - always referred to as the House of Prayer, is justly famous in its own right - as distinguished from its adjoining Rectory - which is the Plume House, built c. 1710 and probably the oldest building in America's 3rd. oldest major city. The house (Rectory) aside from its identification with the Revolution was the scene of a variety of scientific experiments, notably in the attic-observatory used by Rector - Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, inventor of celluloid photo film which made moves possible; the historic site should, therefore, include all buildings of the Parish group, but the processing of voluminous history on the Rectory is being delayed. Frank Wills, architect, iwas second to none as a master architect of churches in the U.S. and Canada, in the middle of the early Gothic Revival. By 1849, he was brought to New Jersey by American Protestantism's foremost hierarchical art patron and moving spirit of the EcclesiologicalMovement toward "proper" English Parish Gothic - the Bishop of New Jersey, Doane, doing also Christ Church, Newark in the same 1849-50 Likely no one other than Frank Wills could have competed on equal period. or even superior terms with the greatest architect of the day - Richard Upjohn,. It was Wills, not Upjohn, who was Official Architect of the New York Ecclesiological Society - a counterpart of the London Eccles. Soc. and the spearhead of most-skilled architects, church professionals and Protestant hierarchy who were the most influential Gothic Revival force in America.

On the front, Broad St. facade, which is also for reasons Wills explains, uniquely the altar or "east end" as well, is carved in stone in sizable letters (Old English lettering) just below the "east end" windows filled-in by Wood's later flush reredos) the relevant inscription "My house shall be called the house of prayer". The relevance of Parish out reach has also been pronounced, - in the 19th Century when the Church pioneered in social outreach work in the nearby (then-Old First Ward) neighborhood, and again in recent years, when, with its nearby constituency largely lower income and now ethnically modified, it has reached out principally to blacks - with socially and artistically elevating programs.

House of Prayer Church & Rectory 7. Continued - Description New Jersey: Code 34 Essex: Code 013

recess formed in north Chancel wall surmonted by a carved canopy, is to be the Bishop's stall. All the windows are to be filled with painted glass, executed by Mr. Bolton. All the seats, pulpit; Altar-rails, lectern, etc., are being executed in black walnut - the open roof of pine. The contract for this Church, including every thing, is about $13,000.00"

The Rectory (Plume House) is constructed of native sandstone from neighborhood quarries. It has broad and thick panellings, hand hewn beams and flooring, and deep window sills characteristic of the domestic architecture of the period.
