1. Airfield at Kodiak, used by both naval and army planes. Looking from Buskin Hill toward the naval operating base.

Photo by E.N. Thompson August 1983

2. One of two seaplane hangars at Kodiak Naval Operating Base. Note the control tower at left corner. The U.S. Coast Guard uses this hangar today for its search-and-rescue helicopters.

Photo by E.N. Thompson October 1982

3. Engine overhead and aircraft maintenance building at former Kodiak naval base.

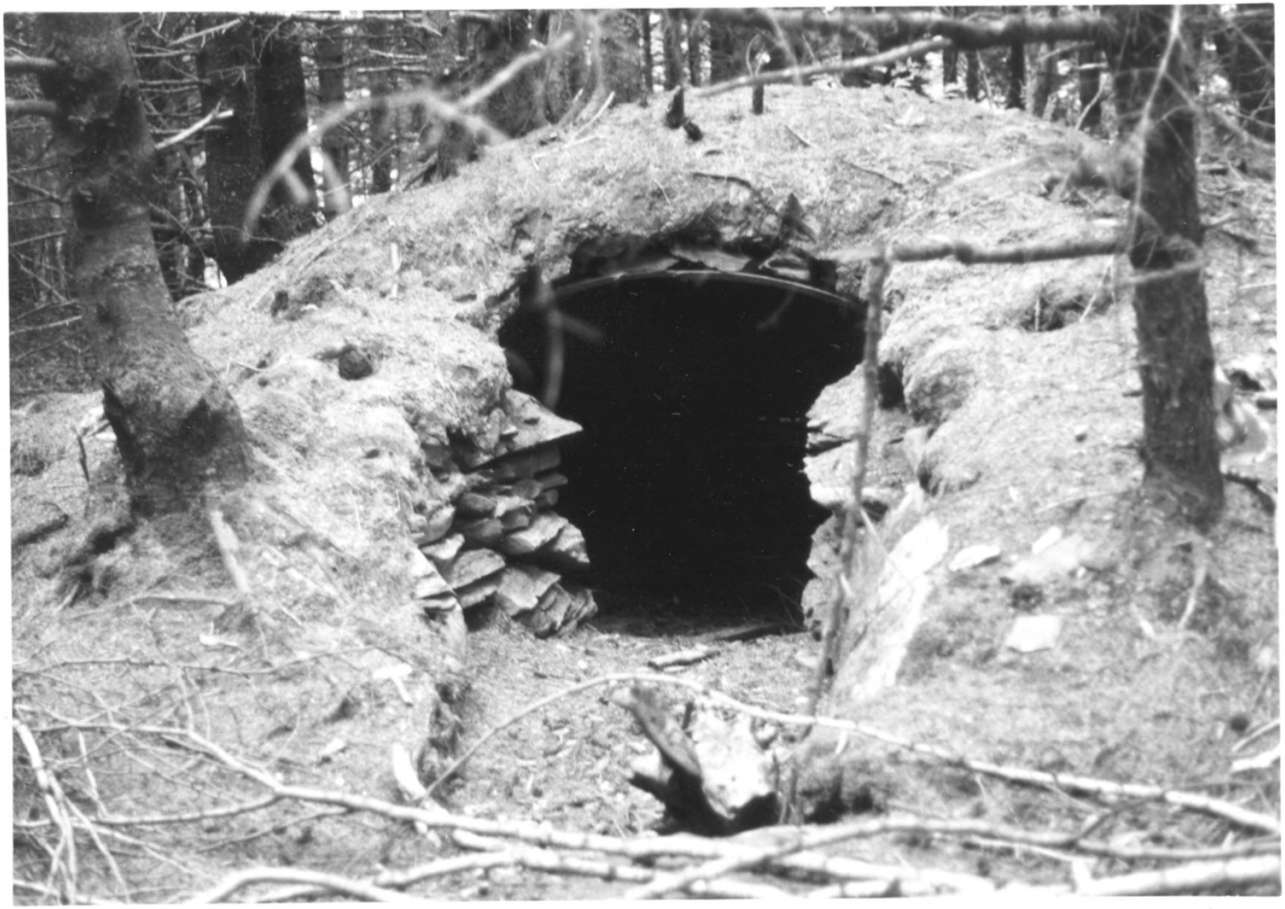
Photo by E.N. Thompson October 1982

4. Bombproof power plant at Kodiak Naval Air Station.

Photo by E.N. Thompson August 1983

6. Panama mount for a 155mm gun, one of four at a battery on Buskin Hill, Fort Greely, Kodiak. These guns protected the naval base.

Photo by E.N. Thompson August 1983



7. Personnel shelter, corrugated steel, rock, and earth. One of several in the vicinity of Artillery Hill, Fort Greely.

Photo by E.N. Thompson August 1983

9. An 8-inch gun tube at Fort Abercrombie. The gun emplacement is in the foreground. When the Army left Kodiak, it simply blew up its coast artillery positions, rather than removing the guns and carriages.

Photo by E.N. Thompson August 1983