A black and white photograph of a forest path. The path is narrow and appears to be made of dirt or grass, leading into a dense forest of tall trees. Sunlight filters through the canopy, creating dappled light on the path. On the right side of the path, there is a wooden sign supported by a post, which is partially obscured by a large rock. The sign has two lines of text: "THIS ROAD USED" and "DURING WAR 1861-65". The sign is weathered and the text is in a simple, hand-painted font. The overall scene is quiet and somewhat somber due to the monochrome palette.

A black and white photograph of the entrance to Jefferson Davis Memorial State Park. A wide, light-colored gravel or dirt path leads from the foreground towards a white building with a portico in the distance. The path is flanked by two large, light-colored stone pillars. Each pillar has a circular hole and is topped with a small square cap. A white picket fence runs along the base of the pillars. The background is filled with tall, dark pine trees under a bright sky.
