DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Gamwell House, built in the last years of the Victorian era, was designed by the architectural firm of Longstaff and Black, an eastern firm who had come from the Boston area to the Bellingham Bay real estate boom. The Gamwell House is probably the best example of the many fine Victorian homes that they designed in this area. It is a three story wood home with brick and concrete bulkhead, and has an extremely spacious interior, with only nine rooms within the three floors. The house took two years to complete, from 1890 to 1892, and was built with the best materials available. Plumbing, gas, electricity, and heating was installed.

The majority of the rooms had wood panelling in various hardwoods, and oak, mahogany, and redwood. The numerous fireplaces were flanked by specially designed mirrors. The central core of the house was the three story staircase, with beautifully carved ornamentation. Tall glass windows in the stairwell were set with colorful art glass patterns of floral arrangements.

The furnishings belonging to the Gamwells were mainly family heirlooms, so that the home was elegantly appointed with fine mahogany bookcases, gold leaf mirrors, Oriental rugs, and numerous other pieces. The home was occupied by the Gamwell family from 1892 until 1956, and they made very few changes to the house. The house is presently occupied by Mrs. William Vosti, and she plans to leave the home as unchanged as possible. Many of the original furnishings are still with the house, so that it retains the same character as it had when it was completed in 1892.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Roland Greene Gamwell was from a prominent New England family, and he had come to the Pacific Northwest in 1889 after taking an engineering degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1886. He had been employed to survey and extend the interurban rail system around Tacoma, Washington. There he met Nelson Bennett, a high financier with much interests around the Bellingham Bay area, and Gamwell was intrigued with the proposed development of the town of Fairhaven, now a part of Bellingham. Gamwell arrived in Fairhaven on August 15, 1889, and commissioned the Gamwell House to be built in 1890, by the architectural firm of Longstaff and Black, who had been partners since they had left the Boston area, and whose firm had been commissioned to design the fabulous Fairhaven Hotel and many other fine residences and buildings of the area. The house was to be one of the most elegant of the Victorian mansions built in the Pacific Northwest, and was of more progressive design, with extremely spacious rooms, a stairwell three stories high, lined with windows done in colorful Victorian "art glass" patterns, walls of fine wood panelling, and fancy gas lamps throughout the house. The large curving staircase was handcarved of hardwoods, and the Italian carvercraftsmen were brought from employment in Seattle, where they had been decorating the interurban railway stations with their art. Under the staircase, was built a niche with a raised platform, for the location of a string orchestra for private concerts.

The house took two years to build, and growing impatient, Gamwell returned to New England to marry his fiancee, Helen Thacher, and he soon brought her to Fairhaven. The young couple moved into the Fairhaven Hotel with all their family heirlooms, silver, linens, and fine furnishings, until the house was completed in July, 1892. They opened the house with the most elegant housewarming party that the area residents had ever seen, and thus began a period of dignified social life and refined culture that had been lacking in this area.

The Bellingham Bay area had been settled by men of the lumber, coal, and fishing trade, and had experienced real estate booms and busts, and gold rush fever. By the 1890's, the businessmen adventurers such as Nelson Bennett, James Wardner, and Peter Larson, were heavily invested in real estate in the area, and were seeking to bring the western terminus of several intercontinental railroads into the area. Along with these men, the waterfront along Bellingham Bay was home for men of less distinguished names, with Welsh, English, and Irish miners, with Scandinavians and Chinese laborers, with Indians and the "ladies" of the extensive red light district, and overlooking this mixed group of people, the Gamwell House stood on the hillside above the bay.

Mr. Gamwell founded the Fairhaven Yacht Club in 1894, sponsored a champion whist team that played up and down the coast, and began a number of men's clubs such as the Kulshan Club and a chapter of the Elks. The Gamwells held lawn tennis matches at their home, and people eagerly responded to invitations for cotillions and concerts in the Gamwell House. Mr. Gamwell brought about the establishment of the Fairhaven and Bellingham Public Libraries. He was also noted as a horticulturalist of new varieties of roses, and the home was surrounded by his rose gardens. Mrs. Gamwell was often the official hostess for any notables that passed through Bellingham and William Howard Taft and Samuel Clemens were guests in the Gamwell House. The Gamwells made a first and continuing contribution of an elegant and cultured social life to a boom town that sorely needed such an influence. This ended in 1944 when Mrs. Gamwell died in the house built for her, and in 1956, in his sixty-seventh summer, after a prominent business and social life, Mr. Gamwell passed away at the age of ninety-six.

The house was left unoccupied for awhile, and the present owner, Mrs. William Vosti, a librarian at Western Washington State College, is attempting with the encouragement of Mrs. Glen Hyatt of Vancouver, B. C., the only child of the Gamwells, to restore the house and all of the original furnishings, just as it was in 1892 when Roland and Helen Gamwell gave their first garden party to announce the arrival of a new social life to the raw little communities on Bellingham Bay.
