Describe present and historic physical appearance.

The East Home Avenue Historic District is a collection of 60 primarily residential properties located on East Home Avenue from North Fifth Street to just east of First Avenue. The district contains 54 properties which contribute to the historic character of the district and 6 which are non-contributing. One property, the John L. Hart House, was listed individually in the National Register in 1983. The historic resources of the district date from c. 1840 to c. 1938. The majority of resources date from c. 1890 to c. 1938, a particularly significant period of development in Hartsville.

These properties generally conform to the descriptions of property types "Residences" and "Public Facilities." The contributing properties meet the registration requirements outlined under these property types.

1. 104 East Home Ave., Lawton Building, First Baptist Church: c. 1938; two-story, stuccoed building with raised basement and cross gable roof, classical influence.
2. 104 East Home Ave., First Baptist Church: 1908; designed by Charles Coker Wilson; temple-front Neoclassical church with symmetrical five bay facade. Stucco covered masonry construction. Engaged, full facade portico with six fluted Ionic columns. Central entry with elaborate pedimented surround. Starburst traceried windows. Side elevations feature large arched windows. This building was constructed to house the congregation of the Hartsville Baptist Church, established in 1850 and located on land donated by John L. Hart. It served as the sanctuary until a new facility was built in 1964 and has been used as a chapel since. Charles Coker Wilson (1864-1933) was a native of Hartsville and 1886 graduate of South Carolina College (now the University of South Carolina) with postgraduate study in civil engineering. His notable designs included many buildings for schools and colleges, such as Neville Hall at Presbyterian College (1907) and Davis and LeConte Colleges at the University of South Carolina (1908 and 1910, respectively). His other designs in Hartsville include the J.L. Coker and Company Building (1910), and Davidson Hall at Coker College (1909-1910), both of which were individually listed in the State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

The East Home Avenue Historic District is significant for its association with the residential development of Hartsville from c. 1850 to c. 1938; as a reflection of the diverse architectural styles and influences of that period; and for its association with the leading figures of the town's history. Home Avenue has historically been the major residential street in Hartsville since it was laid out and landscaped in 1890. This district specifically illustrates the residential and commercial/industrial growth of Hartsville for the period 1890-c. 1938.

One-and-one-half story, hip roof, hip dormer, engaged full facade porch with brick piers, stucco cladding, exposed rafters. A stuccoed garage is at rear. Built for A. Lee M. Wiggins (1891-1980), prominent Hartsville businessman, banker, executive, and public servant. Wiggins, a 1913 graduate of the University of North Carolina, was an officer of J.L. Coker and Company for many years, as well as Coker's Pedigreed Seed Company, and the Coker Cotton Company, and served as president of the Bank of Hartsville. He also served as Under Secretary of the United States Treasury 1947-48, and chairman of the board of the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railroads 1948-1961. (4)
16. 210 East Home Ave., James L. Coker, Jr., House: 1924; designed by J. Carroll Johnson; Italian Renaissance residence. Two-story, hip roof with red Spanish tile roofing (Ludovici Celadon), over-hanging eaves with exposed decorative rafters, structural clay tile construction with stuccoed exterior walls, symmetrical facade, central entry within arcaded loggia, balcony above loggia with decorative iron work, terrace across full facade, pergolas at each side elevation. Frame building at rear. Built for James L. Coker, Jr. (1863-1931), engineer and prominent local manufacturer. Coker, an 1888 graduate of the Stevens Institute of Technology, established the Carolina Fiber Company in 1890 with his father, Major James Lide Coker. He later served as its president 1918-1931 and was instrumental in the creation of the Southern Novelty Company (later Sonoco Products Company) in 1899, which is included as an individual property in this multiple property submission. (5) The house was designed by J. Carroll Johnson (1882-1967), prominent twentieth-century architect of Columbia. Johnson's other Hartsville designs included the J.B. Gilbert House (1929), an individual property in this multiple property submission, and Memorial Hall (1913), part of the Memorial Hall/General Service Building at Coker College, which was individually listed in the National Register in 1989. The house is located on the site of Major James Lide Coker's house, which burned in 1922.

17. 213 East Home Ave., David R. Coker House: 1915-1916; designed by Charles Coker Wilson. Two-and-one-half story, slate hip roof with wide eaves, gable roof dormer with flared eaves, asymmetrical facade, one-story, flat roofed porch across partial facade and left elevation, porte cochere, herringbone and diamond motif decorative brickwork below eaves. Built for David R. Coker (1870-1938), an 1891 graduate of South Carolina College (now the University of South Carolina) who undertook an extensive program of scientific research and development of new strains of cotton and other crops resistant to blight and vermin, extension services to tens of thousands of farmers, and pedigreed seeds. He established the Pedigreed Seed Company (later Coker's Pedigreed Seed) in 1914. The Coker Experimental Farms complex associated with these scientific developments was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1964.(6) The house was designed by Charles Coker Wilson, prominent twentieth-century South Carolina architect, whose other Hartsville designs include the First Baptist Church (1908), also part of this historic district.
18. 222 East Home Ave.: constructed 1908, integrity from 1934 remodelling probably designed by Willis Irvin. Two-story, brick veneer, Colonial Revival residence. Slate hip roof with lower cross gable, asymmetrical facade, projecting entry bay, modillion cornice, broken pediment door surround. Garage with living quarters. Landscape architect Earle S. Draper drew plans for this property in 1920. It is not known if this landscape design was implemented or is intact.
19. 303 East Home Ave., Walter F. Smith House: c. 1905; two-story, rectangular plan, frame residence with shingle cladding, showing Colonial Revival influence. Truncated hip roof with balustrade (balustrade lost in Hurricane Hugo, September 1989), interior chimneys with corbelled caps, symmetrical three bay facade, paired 16/1 double-hung-sash windows, central entry with fanlight and sidelights. Balcony above entry with balustrade, double doors, side lights and transom. One-story porch across full facade wraps to side elevations, simple tuscan column supports on pedestals,
