The style of the building is commercial vernacular with classical detailing on the west (main) and north elevations. The building sits on a stone plinth course. The base of the building is defined by the plinth course and a sill course below the first-story windows. The northwest and northeast corners of the base have stone quoining. The basement windows have segmented brick jack arch lintels.

The fenestration is modern 1/1 thermal glass, with thin stone sills below each window and segmented brick jack arch lintels. The first floor lintels have a stone keystone. Between the top of the second-story windows and the cornice is a course of brick corbelling. A stone dentillated cornice sits below the top of a parapet capped by a stone coping.

The entryway in the west facade has a round-headed arched transom above a modern metal and glass door with sidelights and transom. The arch is of segmented brick with a stone keystone. Classical applied stone ornamentation surrounds the entry, composed of stone base blocks surmounted by a simple plinth which supports fluted pilasters topped by Roman Ionic capitals. The capitals support a frieze topped by a stone cornice. The west facade has intact cut stone historic signage with the legend "Telephone Company." The north and west corners have unsympathetic modern signage.

was the fine telephone exchange building of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange company, corner of Fourth street and Alpha avenue. This building also has a splendid location, opposite the First M.E. church and the new government building and close to the business center and the city's largest hotels. It is a handsome structure of brick and stone and is entirely occupied by the telephone company's offices, local and long distance operating rooms, repair departments, store rooms, etc. In addition to the building the company virtually rebuilt its exchange throughout, installing new switch boards and telephones throughout, and placing its wires in the central part of the city as far as possible in underground conduits and cables, the connection with buildings being made from poles in the alleys instead of from street wires as formerly. The company expended about one hundred thousand dollars in the erection of its building and in the installation of the new system here."

NOTES:

<sup>1</sup>City Assessor's Description #220.2 incorrectly identifies the building as of 1906 construction, but an engraving and description of it appears in the 1904 Silver Anniversary Edition of the Grand Forks Herald, June 26, 1904.
