DR. VOLNEY L. MOORE HOUSE (307 E. Main Street)
Intensive Survey Form - Continuation Sheet (1)

ARCHITECTURAL STATEMENT:

Description: Dominating the design of this cream brick, Italianate style house, is a three story tower which adjoins the main cube of the building. Constructed at a cost of approximately $4500 in 1877, the Moore house remains as an impressive example of the style. The main block of the house rises two stories and features two segmentally arched windows (with stone keystone and imposts) on the first story, and three round headed windows on the second (also with stone imposts and keystone). The entrance, located east of the two first story windows is also covered by a segmental arch, however, this is partially obscured by a shed roof porch addition. Adjoining the house to the east is the massive tower, which repeats the arched window motifs, however, the arches are enlarged to accommodate pairs rather than single windows. Extending the plan to the west is a two story rectangular bay window.

Significance: The Moore house is architecturally significant as an example of the Italianate style. Although a number of Italianate style residences remain in the City, this is the only example which includes a massive tower in the manner of the Italian villa. The Moore house dates from 1877 and occupies a middleground between the restrained Italianate designs such as the Martin Brown house (816 N. East Avenue Wk 2/18) and the later more exuberant Victorian Italianate designs (Street-Waite House 348 Wisconsin Avenue Wk 4/24).
