SUMMARY

The Globe Downtown Historic District encompasses a group of commercial, religious, and governmental buildings related to the status of Globe as the economic and governmental center of Gila County. Globe was designated as the County Seat of Gila County and grew into the primary economic and commercial center of the Globe mining region. The district also includes three prominent churches and the Globe Post Office and Courthouse, indicative of the area's being the core of civic life in the community. Primary growth of the community occurred between 1880 and 1935, which is considered the period of significance for the district. The district is considered to be eligible for the National Register under criterion A for its association with the economic, civic, and governmental development and functions of Globe, and criterion C as a cohesive grouping of early twentieth century commercial and civic architecture.

The following discussion of significance is based on the full analysis of Globe's development provided in the nomination of the Globe Civic and Commercial Multiple Resource Area, submitted concurrent with this document. This narrative is provided to describe briefly the historic contexts pertinent to the Globe Downtown Historic District.

HISTORIC CONTEXTS

The District can be viewed in relation to three historic contexts: the role of Globe in Arizona copper mining from 1870-1935, government and politics in Gila County after 1900, and architecture in Globe from circa 1900-1935.

The Role of Globe in Arizona Copper Mining, 1870-1935

Since 1870, copper mining has been a dominant economic force in Arizona. The Old Dominion Mine in Globe was one of the major copper strikes made in Arizona in the 1870's, along with mines in the Clifton area, Bisbee, and Jerome. In the early twentieth century, additional copper mines were opened in Ajo, Clarkdale, and cornice. On the adjacent corner stands the one story Panel Brick building of the Arizona Silver Belt Newspaper (GCBD-99). Among the earliest buildings in the district, it was constructed circa 1880 and altered to its present appearance in 1912.

To the east of the Courthouse, Broad Street slopes downhill towards Pinal Creek. The lower, eastern end of the street is dominated by the Romanesque/Mission Revival design of the Holy Angels Church (GCBD-19A, NR 12/1/83) which is constructed of local dacite stone. It is noted for its original stained glass windows. Directly across the street from the Church are the three buildings which historically formed the Southern Pacific Railroad Station complex (GCBD-109 A,B,C). Designed by the El Paso, Texas, firm of Trost and Trost, these three brick buildings all feature concrete window trim and bracketed pressed metal cornices.

South of the depot are two poured concrete bridges (GCBD 112-113) dating from 1915. One was built for pedestrian access to the downtown from the neighborhoods to the south. The Tebbs Street automobile bridge is of similar design and is integral with a concrete retaining wall which extends eastward along both banks of Pinal Creek.

The Old Dominion Commercial Company Warehouse (GCBD-111) marks the extreme eastern edge of the district. This is a one-story warehouse building constructed primarily of rusticated concrete block in 1908. Located at a bend in Broad Street, this building effectively forms the visual terminus of the streetscape.

The northern perimeter of the district is formed by a row of buildings along Hill Street, which runs parallel to Broad Street at a slightly higher elevation on the hillside. Prominent buildings include the 1928 Neo-Classical Revival Globe Post Office and Courthouse (GCBD-1, NR 12/3/85) and the First Baptist Church (GCBD-2), a Gothic Revival tufa stone building dating to 1917. St. John's Episcopal Church (GCBD-9, NR 11/22/77) stands diagonally across the corner to the southeast.

The eleven noncontributing buildings in the district do not constitute a serious intrusion into the historic character of the district. The facade of the Globe IOOF Lodge Hall (GCBD-103), opposite the Gila County Courthouse, still shows evidence of its Neo-Classic design. Although the upper story infill has caused a major loss of integrity, some of the changes may be reversible. The Mine Supply and Hardware Building (GCBD-105) is a 1915 two-story structure presently concealed by contemporary sheathing. This building has resortation potential if the sheathing were removed. Another noncontributing building with rehabilitation potential is GCBD-4, modified by metal sheathing and window infill. Although a noncontributor because of a 1940 remodeling, GCBD-3 is a noteworthy local example of the Art Deco style. The Pay 'N' Takit Building (GCBD-21) and the Globe Theater (GCBD-31) are noncontributors because of major alterations.

Five buildings are noncontributors because they were constructed beyond the historic period. Directly across Oak Street from the Courthouse on the north side of Broad Street is the Valley National Bank Building (GCBD-26), one of only two new structures within the core of the historic district. The second new structure is the Mountain Bell Building (GCBD-33), an equipment facility located away from prominent view of the district. There are two other new intrusions, GCBD-5 (ca. 1975) and GCBD-110 (ca. 1981), but these are located outside of the core area. The fifth building constructed beyond the historic period is a modern commercial structure built ca. 1945 (GCBD-27).

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION:

The boundaries of the Globe Downtown Historic District were drawn around the concentration of unaltered commercial and civic buildings at the core of the historic commercial district. Boundaries were drawn to eliminate all noncontributing structures at the edges of the district and to exclude streetscapes that have been substantially altered over time. To the south, the boundary follows the Southern Pacific railroad tracks. To the north, the boundary is drawn at the transition between residential and commercial development. The western boundary is based on building integrity and is drawn to include the ca. 1880 Arizona Silverbelt Newspaper Building and the 1919 Dodge Brothers Motor Car Company. The eastern boundary is drawn at the end of the commercial core, as well as where the street curves to the north. The boundaries form a visually cohesive and contiguous unit that follows the topographical configuration and setting of the hillside district.

Douglas. By the 1920's, Arizona was the greatest copper producing state in the nation. Copper mining began in Globe in 1878, and a copper smelter was erected by the Old Dominion Copper Mining and Smelting Company in the early 1890's. Since 1895, when the Old Dominion claims were purchased by the Lewisohn Brothers of New York, the economy of Globe was fueled primarily by the profits of the Old Dominion Mine and the United Globe Mines owned by the competing Phelps-Dodge Company. The two companies merged in 1917 and continued to be the primary force in Globe's economy until the copper vein was exhausted in 1931.

Development of the commercial center of Globe parallels the production of the mines. By 1910, Globe had grown to be the fourth largest city in Arizona with a population of 7,000. In 1920, Globe was producing more than thirty percent of Arizona's total copper production. It was in the period from 1900 through 1920 that the majority of the commercial buildings in downtown Globe were constructed. Within the Downtown Historic District these include the Old Dominion Commercial Company Office and Warehouse (GCBD-100, GCBD-111) and several smaller commercial buildings such as the Amster Building (GCBD-104) and the Hamill Building (GCBD-102). The complex of Arizona Eastern Ralroad Company buildings was constructed in the district in 1916 and is indicative of the volume of commercial activity related to the shipping of goods to and from Globe during this period. Numerous other buildings stand in the blocks adjoining the Downtown Historic District in the Commercial and Civic Multiple Resource Area, further attesting to the extent of commercial activity occurring in Globe. The construction of these commercial buildings is directly attributable to the growth of copper mining in Arizona from 1870 to 1935.

Government and Politics in Gila County after 1900

Gila County was established by an act of the Arizona Territorial legislature in February of 1881, with Globe designated as the county seat. Land for the original Gila County Courthouse was purchased in 1882, but the initial structure was not constructed until 1888. Due to the growth of Globe as a result of the copper industry at the end of the nineteenth century, the county government sought authorization of funds to construct a new facility to meet the expanded needs. Funding was secured for a new courthouse in 1905, and the Gila County Courthouse was constructed in 1906-7. This building served until 1974 as the primary focus of Gila County government.

Construction of the Gila County Courthouse was an outgrowth of 1871 territorial legislation that required each county to construct a courthouse and maintain a jail facility. Both were deemed necessary in order for county officials to execute their designated functions. Globe had been selected as the permanent county seat in 1881 when Gila County was split off from the larger Maricopa County. As the center of trading and mining activity in the region, Globe presented a logical choice for the county seat. The initial courthouse was constructed in 1888. Pressures to expand the original building were voiced as early as the 1890's when mining activity expanded. Under authorization from the territorial legislature, county bonds in the amount of $40,000 were approved by voters in 1905, and construction on the new building started on the same site the following year.

Concerns about adequate county courthouses and facilities were a major issue throughout the territory at the turn of the century because of the subdivision of Arizona into fourteen counties out of the original four. In the years between 1885 and 1918, ten Arizona counties erected new courthouses to expand on earlier facilities. The construction of these courthouses reflects the increasing political maturity of the territory and the individual counties at a time of major economic growth. Prior to Arizona's receiving statehood status, the county governments were closely affiliated with the territorial legislature and were responsible for land records, including the numerous mining claims. The construction of the second Gila County Courthouse correlates with this political growth as well as the economic responsibilities of the county during the period of Globe's mining boom. This status is clearly reflected in the monumental architectural design of the courthouse.

The most prominent political figure associated with Gila County politics and the City of Globe is George W. P. Hunt. He served as Mayor of Globe after the city was incorporated for the second time in 1900. A Missouri native and former resident of the Gila County town of Superior, twenty miles west of Globe, Hunt was affiliated with the Old Dominion Commercial Company. His involvement with Arizona political affairs led to his being elected the first state Governor in 1912. He served until 1918, and again from 1923-1929 and 1931-33. During this period, Hunt was influential in political affairs as well as the development of many policies that affected mining in the state. Politics and the mining industry were closely related in Arizona. This close interaction is evidenced by the political success of Governor Hunt, who began his career in Globe politics.

The economic and political status of Globe eventually led to the construction of the permanent Post Office and Courthouse building by the Federal Government in 1928. Pressures to build a Federal building in Globe had existed since 1910 when Globe was the fourth largest city in Arizona. Funds were appropriated several times, often related to appropriations for other cities such as Douglas, Prescott, and Tucson. In 1926, passage of the Public Buildings Act by Congress authorized funding for post offices nationwide. Fortunately for Globe, the funds were secured and the building constructed prior to further delays of funding caused by the Depression.

The presence of both the County Courthouse and the Federal Post Office and Courthouse in the center of Globe is indicative of the prominence of Globe as the political nucleus of a prosperous mining region. The construction of these buildings in 1906 and 1928, respectively, also evidences the major period of political influence and economic development in Globe and approximately correlates with the age and identified period of significance of the Downtown Historic District (1900-1935). The monumental nature of these governmental facilities, both of which are important and substantial contributors to the Globe Downtown Historic District, is illustrative of the important role of government and politics in Gila County.

Architecture in Globe, 1900-1935

The Globe Downtown Historic District features a distinctive collection of properties dating from the early phases of Globe's development in the late nineteenth century through the end of Globe's major growth period in the 1930's. Within the Globe Downtown Historic District, the primary resources reflect the various stylistic trends of early twentieth century civic and commercial architecture. The primary period of extensive building was from 1904-1920, and, as a result, Globe possesses a cohesive assemblage of buildings expressing the Classical Revival period with several variations of Neo-Classical design, eclectic examples of Romanesque Revival, and influences of the Gothic Revival and Mission styles that were common in this period.

The architecture within the Globe Downtown Historic District is distinguished by the extensive use of tufa stone or locally quarried dacite, both volcanic stones indigenous to Arizona. The extensive use of stone is related to the construction of Roosevelt Dam outside Globe. The largest masonry dam in the world when completed, it was constructed by European stonemasons between 1907 and 1911. While the growth of Globe was assured by the mining of both silver and copper during the late nineteenth century, the dam also had a major impact on the town which is reflected in the city's architecture.

Many of the stonemasons from Roosevelt Dam worked on the major buildings in Globe during the construction of the dam and settled in Globe when the dam was completed. The major stone buildings in the district are the second Gila County Courthouse, constructed of dacite in 1905-6; the Old Dominion Commercial Company, a Romanesque Revival building completed in 1905; St. Johns Episcopal Church, constructed in 1907; Holy Angels Church, 1916-18; and the First Baptist Church, 1917.

The work of three architectural firms is evidenced within the Globe Downtown Historic District. The firm of Lescher and Mahoney from Phoenix designed the Old Dominion Commercial Company building which was among the earliest designs of a partnership that would later become Arizona's major architectural firm in the 1920's. Phoenix architect W. R. Norton, principal architect of the Phoenix Carnegie Library, designed both the Gila County Courthouse and the Trust Building, two of the most prominent structures within Globe. Finally, the influential southwestern firm of Trost and Trost designed the three buildings of the Arizona Eastern Railroad complex.

The 1920's was a slower period of growth in Globe, but several significant structures within the district were constructed at that time. The most notable are the U. S. Post Office and Courthouse and St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church. The Post Office building, designed by the Federal government under Supervising Architect James A. Wetmore, is a significant example of the Georgian Revival style. The Spanish Colonial Revival style emerged as the dominant architectural style in Arizona during the 1920's. The only major example of that style in Globe is St. Paul's Church, constructed within the historic district in 1928.

The cohesive grouping of the Globe Downtown Historic District provides a clear architectural statement of the factors influencing the growth of Globe in the first decades of the twentieth century. It is also evidence of the dramatic influence that the construction of Roosevelt Dam had on the city, as well as evidence of the prevailing architectural trends within Arizona at the time. As suggested by Globe and its contemporary cities such as Bisbee and Douglas, the mining towns in Arizona tended to be quite sophisticated architecturally due both to the constant contact with the Eastern mining investors and the tremendous wealth resulting from the profitable copper industry.

DISCUSSION AS REQUIRED:

The earliest organization established in Globe was the I00F Lodge No. 6. It received its charter in 1885. Until about 1910, the building was the center of social activity in Globe. The fraternal, charitable organization continues to serve the community. Until their own buildings were built, the Elks, Masons, Knights of Pythias, Pythian Sisters, Rebekah Lodge, and Globe Miner's Union also met in this hall.

ADDITIONAL DESCRIPTION/ANALYSIS (annotated form): This ca. 1900 residence was originally a one-story bungalow with a SW corner porch. Ca. 1910, the NW room was removed, and the porch was expanded to form a verandah. At that time, the street grade was lowered as well, but no corresponding change was made to the building. Between 1911 & 1929, the storefront was added and the porch was enclosed.

DISCUSSION AS REQUIRED:

Early in 1880, Globe's first church was established by Rev. J.J. Wingar, a Methodist-Episcopal minister. In 1927, the first church building, constructed in 1880, was demolished. The cornerstone for the original building was laid for this 1928 church by Gov. George W.P. Hunt. The original church bell was also salvaged and installed in the 1928 church belfry. The bell had served Globe not only to call worshipers but also to warn of fires, floods and other impending dangers; it is known locally as "God's Alarm Clock."

DISTRICT/STREETSCAPE CONTRIBUTION The Van Wagenen/Fiske Building makes an important contribution to the historic streetscape.

DISCUSSION AS REQUIRED:

The building was constructed by Garrett S. Van Wagenen, one of Globe's first businessmen, who served as Gila County Treasurer and tax collector during 1885-86. His wife Jane Van Wagenen, founded the first hospital in Globe, ca. 1880. In 1887, the Gila County Board of Supervisors took over the operation of the hospital.

Applied Ornament: Cast iron pilasters and denticulated cornice at storefront, glass block panel at SW corner of kick plate, leaded glass transoms at 2nd and 3rd floor windows, metal cornice and brackets between 2nd and 3rd stories.

Windows: Facade: 1st story--display windows; 2nd & 3rd stories--wooden single-hung with leaded glass transoms and concrete lintels and sills. Other elevations: wooden double-hung 1/1, some with leaded, beveled-glass upper sashes and leaded, beveled-glass transoms; concrete lintels and sills.

Entry: Recessed central entry; two wooden doors (one to each store) with glass panels.

Porches: 2nd story loggia; wooden floor, large semi-circular arched openings at facade, rectangular openings at N and S elevations, brick balustrade with concrete caps.

Notable Interior: Outstanding Craftsman interior. Leaded beveled glass in all windows, with geometric patterns. Dark-stained oak window and door surrounds, baseboards, and picture molding. Dark-stained oak room divider between parlor and dining room. In dining room, dark-stained oak ceiling beams and breakfront with leaded, beveled glass. Original hardware and fixtures in bathroom.

Alterations: Metal awning, enclosed rear porch at 2nd story, wood shingled roofing replaced.

Additional Description/Analysis: Originally 2-story Van Wagenen residence, built ca. 1905. In 1910, the building was elevated, the street grade was lowered, and the storefront was added. At that time, other changes were made as well. The original house had an arched porch at the SW corner. When the building was remodeled, the porch was expanded across the entire 2nd story, removing a room and adding an arch. At the 3rd story, an arched porch at the SW corner was infilled, and a window was added. (It is possible that the location of the NW window was moved slightly to the S at the same time.) Additionally, the building was entirely faced with brick, making the building appear to be brick.

DISCUSSION AS REQUIRED: In 1898, the Gila Valley & Northern Railroad was extended to Globe. Prior to that time, access to Globe was relatively difficult. The coming of the railroad brought both economic and population growth to Globe. In 1910, the railroad was acquired by the Arizona Eastern Railroad. In 1916, Arizona Eastern replaced the modest depot building with this vernacular Neoclassical Revival edifice. The railroad became part of the Southern Pacific system in 1924.

Outstanding (and only) local example of Beaux-Arts Classicism. A contemporary account in the Arizona Silver Belt reported that the building was designed by an (unnamed) Chicago architect and that the terra cotta was produced in Chicago.

The Gila Valley Bank & Trust in Globe was the fourth branch of the bank, which in 1922 became the Valley National Bank, now Arizona's largest financial institution.

Applied Ornament: Main building: Elaborate terra cotta ornamentation. Entire main building faced with terra cotta. Entry framed by a semicircular arch, supported by pilasters, with elaborately decorated shafts and Corinthian capitals. The intrados of the arch is ornamented with large acanthus flowers set in blocks; the edge of the extrados is lined with a continuous leaf-and-dart molding. The spandrels are ornamented with olive branches. Spanning the arch at the impost is an elaborate entablature and pediment, enriched with bead-and-reel and leaf-and-dart molding, an elaborate frieze, and an olive tree. The tympanum of the 2nd story pediment is ornamented with pearl, leaf-and-dart, and egg-and-dart moldings and dentils. Scrolled brackets support the pediment. The raking cornice is supported by brackets with rows of egg-and-dart molding and dentils below. Pairs of Corinthian Order pilasters with elaborately enriched shafts are found at the building corners and between windows.

Rear building: Brick ornamentation includes string courses between the two stories and below the brick entablature. The entablature, supported by corbeled modillion blocks, is enriched with brick fretwork.

Windows: Main building: large, fixed, semi-circular windows divided into three sections by mullions. Rear addition: 2nd story-wooden, double-hung 1/1 with flat arches. First story--metal-frame louvered windows.

Notables Interior: Entryway has original gray and black mosaic tile floor. Original two-story ceiling intact. Very ornate plaster ceiling and upper walls echoes facade. Ornamentation includes interlocking circles set with large acanthus flowers, and egg-and-dart, leaf-and-dart, and bead-and-reel molding. The skylights and original light fixtures are also intact. The original doors, now in storage, are to be restored.

Architectural Significance: The Gila Valley Bank and Trust Building, built in 1909, is architecturally significant as Globe's most representative example of NeoClassical style architecture, and for its terra cotta exterior sheathing. The building represents the earliest extant, and known, use of glazed terra cotta in the state. Ornamental terra cotta did not come into widespread use in Arizona until the late 1910's. The other comparable facades are the First National Bank of Glendale, 1918, and the Grand Theatre, 1919, in Douglas. The Gila Valley Bank and Trust Building is a notably earlier use of terra cotta, a fact attributable to the economic prominence of Globe at that time and the building having been designed by a Chicago architect.

Applied Ornament: Cast iron entablature at 1st and 2nd stories. At 2nd story, architrave enriched with egg-and-dart molding. Cast iron pilasters with simple capitals at corners.

Alterations: New store front added ca. 1950. Center cast iron piers, originally engaged to display windows, replaced with sheet metal piers. Mosaic tile added at kick plate.

Discussion as Required: An outstanding local example of use of dacite in commercial architecture. The Old Dominion Commercial Company was, in its heyday, Globe's largest department store and second largest bank.

Organizer of the company, in 1891, was Alonzo Bailey, one of Globe's first businessmen. Bailey was a member of the 1891 State Constitutional Convention and served in the Thirteenth Arizona Legislature. He later served as Clerk of the District Court and was an active promoter of the railroad. Bailey retired from the company in 1905.

In 1900, Bailey was succeeded as president by George W. P. Hunt. Hunt served as Globe's first mayor after it was incorporated in 1900 and served one year as Treasurer of Gila County. He was a member of the Arizona Territorial Legislature for seven terms between 1892 and 1910. In 1910, he served as President of the State Constitutional Convention. In 1912, Hunt became the first Governor of the State of Arizona. He served as Governor until 1918, then again from 1923 through 1929 and from 1931 until 1933, making him the longest-serving Governor in the nation.

Ca. 1928, the Old Dominion Commercial Co. was replaced by J. C. Penney Co.

DISCUSSION AS REQUIRED: The Arizona Silver Belt was founded in May, 1878, by Aaron H. Hackney soon after his arrival in Globe. Hackney is credited with naming Silver City and Grant County, New Mexico. With other businessmen, he organized the Globe-San Carlos telegraph line, which linked Globe with the rest of the world. He was also a principal promoter of the construction of a railroad line to Globe. The Arizona Silver Belt, Globe's first newspaper, is still published today. William Ryan, who arrived in Globe in 1881, founded a general merchandise store in 1904, which developed into the Ryan Drug Company. Ryan served two terms on the Gila County Board of Supervisors.

When rebuilt that year, the walls were reutilized, but the second story was not replaced. At that time, the building was refashioned in the Art Deco style for Woolworth's, which remains as the occupant. Modifications to the entry & display windows have been made since that time.

Continuation Sheet
GCBD-122

Applied Ornament: Decorative brick lintels above E and W entries at facade, compound arch at main entry, decorative brick recessed panels, parapet with brick coping.

Windows: Wooden, double-hung 1/1 in round-headed openings, brick sills, grouped in 3s and 4s as well as singly. Facade: 2nd story--wood casement with sidelights, 3-light clerestory; 3rd story--wood casement with sidelights and fanlight, set in round-headed openings with projecting brick keystones.

Entry: Entry altered. Central entry--semi-circular brick compound arch with projecting brick keystone; arch ends with stylized cross. Doorway infilled with stucco and a flush wood door added. Off-center entries on either side of main entry feature decorative lintels: E entry--wood 1-panel door, operable transom; W entry--~~wood~~ wood double-doors, operable transom.

Notable Interior: 2nd floor--large hall doors, coved ceiling, crown molding, brick fireplace with decorative brickwork repeating motif in recessed panels at main facade and brackets supporting mantle, rustic pine bar, and pine floor. 3rd floor--original Craftsman furniture, orig. lighting fixtures. Windows feature pediments and are divided by pilasters with recessed panels. Coved ceiling and painted ceiling beams.

Alterations: Cast iron, bracketed cornice removed, orig. wooden balconies replaced with continuous wrought iron balcony, two pair of double doors removed from main entry and entry partly infilled. 1963, reinforced concrete addition with metal screen over windows added.

Historic Associations, Discussion: The Elks Building was home to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Knights of Maccabees, the Knights of the Royal Arch, the Loyal Order of Moose, and the Woodman Circle, as well as the Elks (organized 1899). Fraternal organizations played an important social role in Western communities by providing formal social events and linking Western communities with the social mores of the East. Moreover, lodge halls were often the site of important political and business transactions.

Furthermore, the ground floor of the Elks Building initially served as the Iris Theater, which featured live performances. Throughout its history, the building has been a major social center in Globe.
