A black and white photograph of the entrance to a Carnegie Library. The building is constructed of brick and features a prominent portico with two large, fluted columns supporting a triangular pediment. The words "CARNEGIE LIBRARY" are inscribed in a stone tablet above the entrance. Two spherical light fixtures are mounted on the brick walls flanking the columns. The entrance is reached by a set of three steps. The building has multiple windows on both floors, some with decorative lintels and sills.
