Barnes, Bernard, -Wellford, Elizabeth, House. 66 Abney Circle

CONTINUED

The Barnes residence is smaller than the Merrill house and is more of a cottage than a manor design, which is the style of the Merrill house. Bernard Barnes was an executive in the Pennsylvania Life Insurance Company. He originally owned all the land on Barnes Place, which he later divided and sold. Landon C. Wellford and his wife Elizabeth bought the home in 1951. Mrs. Wellford resides there today.

1. Name(s) Historic/Common:

Barnes-Wellford House (South Hills Multiple Resource Area) Kanawha County West Virginia

#7. The Barnes-Wellford House is one of West Virginia's finest examples of early 20th-century traditional revival architecture in the English Romantic manner. It accupies a sloping lot in a wooded section of South Hills off Abney Circle North. The structure is entirely stuccoed with a light tan coloration that blends handsomely in the rustic setting. Brown-painted trim accents the windows, doors and eaves.

Steeply-pitched roofs are punctuated with gabled dormers and are slate covered. The roof ridges are divided at three points above three blocks of differing heights that form a rambling plan along the sloping lot. Each elevation features expanses of stuccoed wall surface within which casement and double-hung windows are placed. The nearly flush eaves greatly emphasize the scale and texture of the walls.

The studio building, like the parent structure, is built on a sloping site, and like the house, features three distinct divisions in its roof plan. This multiple gable effect, above stuccoed walls, is a clearly picturesque mode adopted by the architect to complement the main house. The studio building contributes to the significance of the nominated site; it has been used for guests' housing, storage, and for an artist's studio.

#8. The Barnes-Wellford House is significant as one of the most distinguished examples of English Romantic-style revival architecture, of the early 20th century, in West Virginia. The residence is noted for the excellent execution of detail that "authenticates" the English countryside atmosphere in which habitations were finished in or constructed of half-timbering, nogging or brick infill. The dormered roofs extend away from and below the dormer faces in the manner of thatched roofs. Architecturally, the building is also noteworthy as the work of architect Fred Crowther, a prominent professional architect who practiced in Charleston, West Virginia in the 1900's and 1920's. Mr. Crowther was English-born. His best known Charleston residences are those found in a grouping of six along the Manor Place cul-de-sac in Charleston's East End Historic District. These structures also are of the English cottage style and rank among the finest examples of this genre in West Virginia. Crowther is known to have been published in Pencil Points, an early professional journal; he eventually moved to Detroit, Michigan.
