The integrity of this residence seems unaltered although there seem to have been some changes and additions to the building itself. The house appears to have originally been a five-room Victorian cottage with large rooms, a wide central hall between the front four rooms, and an ample stoop at the front door. The large hand hewn timber joists and sills and the crude floors in the "L"-shaped original part of the house seem to all be of the same era. The exterior eaves and siding also seem to indicate that this "L" shape was original; however, the roof over the fifth room (still original house) at the rear is inferior to the quality of the front "fourroom cottage" portion of the roof. The roof over the present guest room (an obviously added part of the house on the west corner behind the room now used as the kitchen) is shed-type and was added to the adjacent roof when this area was added to the house, probably in the early 1900's.

The added "wings" to the porch follow the original styling closely; however, where brick joints are wisible at the north corner of the main house, the joints do not exactly match. Also, the moldings at the eaves of these "wings" do not exactly match the nice classical moldings used on the original building where the ones on the central original stoop do match exactly. It appears that the original stoop had the gingerbread on it, and the "wings" were made to match; however, it is possible that the filligree, gingerbread, and brackets were added to the original stoop when the wings were added. The glass in the windows is hand poured and beautiful irridescent colors can be seen in the glass if the light is caught at the right angle.

The south east wall of the original hall has been removed between the hall and the front left room, forming a spacious Living Room which you enter from the porch. To the right as you enter the front door are built-in storage cupboards with bookshelves about 3' to about 7'. The cupboards are built deep enough to accomodate the door leaves in the open position; due to the bookshelves not being very deep, the original wall (on the Dining Room side of the cupboard) remains visible to the ceiling inside these cupboards, all the way to the original plaster ceiling. The three remaining fireplaces (the one in the Kitchen has been covered up) are attractive carpenter-built Adams style mantles with monalithic white marble hearths. The ceiling in the front four rooms is 10'-$" high.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

This little cottage was built about 1857 by Nathaniel Campbell Munroe. The building site was on High Street immediately across from the cottage where the poet Sidney Lanier was born in 1842. The original owners of property on this street were leading citizens; i.e., mayors, legislators, doctors, financiers, railroad builders, and bankers, who helped to build Macon in its early days.

One of these homeowners, N. C. Munroe, figured very prominently in Macon's early history. He served as secretary of the Board of Health and of the Macon Lyceum and Library Society, as director of the Macon and Western Railroad Company, and of Macon Manufacturing Company. But all was not business: he was a warden of Christ Church, trustee of the Georgia Academy for the Elind, and a great contributor to the cause of the Confederacy.

Mr. Munroe sold his property in 1862, and from then till 1930 most of the owners rented out the property. One of the owners was Captain Samuel S. Dunlap who organized the Bibb County Cavalry and was severely wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg. Mr. Dunlap opened the first hardware store in Macon in 1866. In 1903 the house was occupied by relatives of Mr. Peter J. Bracken, engineer for the famous locomotive "The Texas" in April, 1862, when he drove it in reverse in the dramatic railroad chase of "The General." Mr. Bracken died while staying at this home.

The deed to the property has been conveyed to several families during this century, and it is now in the hands of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Snow who maintain the house and grounds in a most attractive way - it is a credit to them and to the community.
