Built in 1914, this large masonry building displays some of the characteristics associated with the Neo-Classic Revival. Chronologically, the building dates from the period when this style was popular for government buildings, courthouses and structures of higher education. The main facade of the Centro Asturiano is characterized by a five-part composition, slightly in antis, with monumental Doric columns projecting and rising the full distance from the stylobate to the cornice, thereby dividing the building vertically. It is important to note at this point, that although the afore stated are features more commonly associated with Beaux-Arts Classicism, the overall feeling of the building is more in keeping with the Neo-Classic. The building is constructed on a tall granite base, the windows of which are partially below ground and have radiating voussoirs. This base takes the form of a stylobate; the bases of the columns rest on it and the wide sweeping stone stair rises to the top of it. The main entrance is a pair of double doors with glazed panels and it is flanked by two pairs of double-hung sash windows with transoms. Five flat terra cotta panels with bas relief design are located between first and second floors and between columns. Above them are the five roundarched windows with keystones which admit light to the second floor. There are six small eyebrow windows in the architrave which is surmounted by a plain wide cornice and the flat roof is surrounded by a stone balustrade which runs between piers. Identical treatment is given to the north and south elevations as is seen on the west front. Both sides are interrupted at their midpoints for an entranceway with wide curving stair. At the extreme rear of the building is a four-story section which is devoid of any exterior decoration and has only two single sash windows per floor on the east, north and south.

The building occupies a very prominent open position on one of Tampa's busiest streets and is kept in very good condition.

The Centro Asturiano of Tampa was formed as a social and civic club in the fall of 1902 as a branch of the Centro Asturiano de la Habana, the largest Cuban centered men's club. The club serviced in its peak years over 3,000 men of predominately Spanish-Cuban ancestry although the center was open to any white males. A key role of the club was the La Beneficencia Asturiana which provided complete medical care to some 7,000 family members. The club operated the famous Centro Asturiano Hospital (recently torn down) on Bayshore where until 1945 doctors worked on a straight salary basis.

The club has had two main clubhouses in its history. Α wood and brick structure built in Ybor City in 1908 burnt down and was replaced by the present structure on Nebraska Avenue The present structure was designed by Tampa's in 1914. leading architect of the period, F. Leo Elliott. The latter club became the center of an active Spanish theatre and opera, exchanging numerous special events between Tampa and Havana. Funds for these events often went to finance such things as a cemetery, a sanitarium in Monte Narance, Spain, and complete family services for the needy. Its school for English acquainted some 4,000 Latins with North American customs and language. Architecturally, this building successfully combines the dignity of Neo-Classic emphasis with Beaux-Arts elements.
