Physical Description

The Craftsman aesthetic predominates in this large but plain and unassuming rectangular two-story house designed by Charles Thompson in 1914. With a stucco front elevation and brick sides, the house is capped by a slate clipped gable end roof. Three gable roofed dormers with half-timbering effects crown the three groups of casement windows and form the single distraction from the otherwise horizontal emphasis. The dominant feature is the wide full-length porch covered with a shed roof and supported by sturdy brick piers with cast stone copings and partially enclosed by low brick walls. This spacious porch lends an air of shady seclusion to the house. The centrally located doorway features a multi-paned window and is flanked by a grouping of three sash windows of nine-over-one lights. The house is located on a modest size lot in a residential neighborhood in Little Rock.

Statement of Significance

In 1914 Charles L. Thompson designed a group of rent houses for Mr. R. E. Farrell in the 2100 block of Louisiana. These three houses are solid and sturdy Craftsman designs which are all basically the same scale. An innovative use of a variety of materials and earthy textures gives each of these houses a distinctive character not usually associated with rental property. The Farrell House at 2111 Louisiana differs from the other two in several ways. The front of the house is covered in stucco; the sides are brick. Topped by a slate clipped gable roof, the house features three gable roofed dormers on the front (west) elevation. These dormers feature a half-timbering effect above their casement windows. The dominant feature of the house is a full length porch across the front elevation. The firm's creative energy is clearly in evidence in the Farrell houses; each is an individual entity sharing common characteristics with the other two.
