A black and white photograph of a house's front entrance. The central feature is a white door with a large glass panel in the upper half, a screen door, and a transom window above it. The transom window is semi-circular with a fan-like pattern of muntins. The door is flanked by two narrow, multi-paned glass windows. The entrance is reached by a set of four wide, brick steps. On either side of the steps are black wrought-iron railings. To the right of the door, a white pillar supports a circular house number '332'. The house has horizontal siding, and the porch roof is visible at the top. A white picket fence is partially visible on the right side.
