DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Danish West India and Guinea Company Warehouse and related outbuildings occupy an irregularly shaped city block bounded by King Street on the north, Hospital Street on the east, Company Street on the south and Church Street on the west. The grade falls approximately eight feet from the southwest to the northeast corner. The main structure is "L" shaped, consisting of a two-story, hip-roofed south wing running the full length of the southern property line adjoining Company Street, and a story and one-half, dormered, mansart-roofed west wing running along a portion of the western property line adjoining Church Street. An iron gate and alley to an inner courtyard separate the north wall of the west wing from a one-story kitchen, which in turn adjoins an above-grade cistern which extends to the northwest corner of the property. Two additional above-grade cisterns adjoin this cistern and extend east on the north property line and terminate in an exterior stair leading to the covered cistern roofs. A second onestory kitchen building and outside oven is located in the northeast corner of the property. A wall joins the southeast corner of this kitchen and the northeast corner of the south wing of the main building, thereby completing the enclosure of the courtyard. This wall contains an iron gate opposite the gate and alley to the west. An exterior monumental stair from courtyard level to the second floor of main building is located in the angle of the "L", and rises through a portion of a fourth cistern.

All courtyard and building walls are stuccoed imported Danish "ballast brick" masonry and rubble construction. The exterior faces of main building walls are increased several inches in thickness from grade to approximately three to eight feet above grade to form a stylobate. The horizontal line thus formed establishes the height of courtyard walls and serves as a strong unifying element. First floor windows of both wings have stucco surrounds; second floor windows of the south wing have none. A stucco string course is just below second floor window sill level of the south wing, and the parapet of the north wall of the west wing has a decorative stucco coping. This is also the only wall of the complex with stucco quoins at its corners. The eastern stuccoed masonry gateposts are quoined and capped with decorative pediments with dentils below; the western gateposts are flanked with decorative arched niches and support a decorative coping. Plain stuccoed surfaces are painted yellow; stucco trim and woodwork are painted white, except shutters are painted green.

The corrugated iron roofs of the main building wings are of recent origin; original roofs were probably wood shingle. Rainwater from the main building roofs is conducted by gutters and leaders to the cisterns, which remain in use. The shed roof of the northwest kitchen is probably flat brick on purlins and joists with galvanized metal overlay. The northeast kitchen has a gabled galvanized metal roof on wood frame construction. The northeast kitchen has an interior fireplace and brick chimney; the large brick exterior oven at the northeast kitchen is protected by a flat brick roof supported by wood purlins and beams. 7. Description dormers are shuttered; however, nuts, bolts, screws, frames, sash, doors and shutters are of recent manufacture.

The interiors of the main buildings have been extensively remodelled, and early construction cannot be visually determined.

The general decor is simplified Renaissance with traces of Baroque, and reflects the influence of the French Ecole des Beaux-Arts through the Danish Academy. West Indian influence is evident in the monumental exterior stair, the absence of fireplaces and chimneys in living quarters, second floor location of living quarters above first floor warehouse and office space, and the probable original use of wood roof shingles, storm shutters, and louvered ventilating shutters. Originally constructed ca. 1750 and remodelled in 1838 and 1939, the early basic shell of the building remains intact.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

St. Croix was the most prosperous island in the Danish West Indies, and during the 18th and early 19th centuries extremely productive and wealthy. The Danish West India and Guinea Warehouse in Christiansted was the center of the colony's commercial activity during the 18th century. This fact alone establishes unusual historic significance for this building. It continued as an integral part of the city's commerce through the 19th century, at one time housing a Panama Telegraph and Cable Company office, and now containing a U. S. Post Office substation on the first floor and U. S. Customs on the second floor.

Although documentation has not been completed, it is certain that most exterior masonry walls are original or of early date. Exterior renovations have been limited to normal maintenance items, and the general configuration of the building has not been altered since the early 19th century.

The building is of architectural significance not only as a representative example of colonial Danish West Indian architecture and West Indian Architecture generally, but also as part of a unique townscape bearing comparison to European Court Towns of the 18th century. This significance was recognized in 1952 when this building was one of six included within the Christiansted National Historic Site.
