Describe The PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If More) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE Present property is primarily on the corner with a half acre strip across Peremus Road along the Saddle River bank. It is the last piece of untouched land left from Terhune's 200 acre farm cut from A. Zabriskie's patent holdings. Today it retains many large old trees. The owners have kept a semi-cover growth condition for protection and privacy. The dwelling, set back near the plot's center, is surrounded by its out-buildings. The present structure consists of two main frame sections of different periods, the two story section of the 1807-8 period and an older section of indeterminate age which was moved against the existing house possibly about 1830 and made into a kitchen and living quarters for the help. That this section with its fine kitchen fireplace and brick oven was set against the 1807-8 section is a fine example of the Fost Colonial or Federal Period with most of its original elements unaltered and outstanding examples of the period such as: doorweys, windows, mantels, stair railing and plaster_coves. Alterations are minor and consist of the addition of projecting dves and raked cornices and changes in the veranda on the exterior and dividing a large front room into two rooms in the interior. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This early patent land called "Old Paramus", owned by the Proprietors of East Jersey, apparently was acquired by Albert Zabriskie, Sr. in the second half of the 1600's. In 1707, a deed for 200 acres was given to Albert Terhune for 50 pounds New York Money, and grazing rights for Zabriskie's cattle. Paramus Road was practically an Indian trail going north and south.

The Terhunes (County Freeholders) were raided four times by the British. More history of the area is to be discovered for it sits on Paramus Road, used by Washington's forces. Lafayette was quartered within a short pace. Zabriskie's Mill, a center of Revolutionary action, is a mile south.

Termed a fine example of Federal architecture, the house was evolved from an earlier structure now, unfortunately, hidden and unresolved. In a section of fast disappearing old houses, this remains quite unspoiled, a combination of Dutch and 1807 "updating" by a wealthy New York City gentleman of English-American family. No expense was spared in its basic construction. If the house, buildings and site have suffered, it is primarily from wealth during the latter Gardner period to the 1930's.

7. Description (cont') Section 3

East Room: Simple ceiling with deep cove molding, matching medallion for chandelier; $l_{\frac{1}{2}}$ foot high fireplace, black marble mantel (may be altered as wide matching mantel top is in attic); flu blocked for oil burner; cabinet east side is missing; door on other side goes to old Section 2 stair landing; door north wall to hall; two mullioned windows, floor to ceiling, swing out to east porch.

Second Floor: 3 rooms, hall, bath, 2 fireplaces

- West Room: Originally a ballroom across front (west) of Section 3; floors reinforced by extra heavy oak beams; solid wood partition and ceiling molding now divide it to add room to northwest; fine ornate Adam woodwork around corniced doors and in mantel piece; inside double shutters on all five windows; ceiling and floor marks indicate original walls before minor changes.
- Northwest Room: Bad proportions but ceiling plaster molding remains; chandelier medallion and rest lost in 1945 repairs.
- East Room: Simple molding ceiling cove, two windows to east have inside shutters; fireplace wall (south) has original cabinet and window - now shallow closet with paneled doors and hidden small door with two steps up to south attic over Section 2.

Attic: 3 rooms and a second level

First level: Long enclosed stair leads to present open area to south and facing one of two high, palladian type windows (second in north end) flanked either side by quarter round windows. Two chimneys are inside south wall, one staggered. Old brick nogging and timbers (pegged) visible from floor to plate and gambrel roof. Floors double laid, plank on plank.
