DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Melwood Park, located on the north side of Maryland Route 408 (Marlboro Pike), approximately one-half mile east of its intersection with Mellwood Road, was built circa 1729. There have been later additions. This house, built of brick laid in Flemish bond, is approximately 64' by 20'. The front (south facade) and gable ends have been covered with stucco scored to resemble stone. The south facade of seven bays is 2 1/2 storys. However, the roof ridge is not centered and the steep rear roof pitch makes the north (rear) elevation 1 1/2 storys.

On the north, there was a large rear wing which has been removed. When this was done, the central portion of the wall was finished with clapboards. The remainder of the wall is of Flemish bond brickwork with glazed headers and has not been stuccoed. Now, there is a one-story frame addition with small central chimney.

At each gable end is an external shouldered chimney. Melwood Park has a water table with a rectangular profile and a belt course three courses wide at the second floor level.

The central main entrance has paneled reveals and a narrow transom. The double hung windows have twelve over twelve lights on the first floor, and those of the second, which are not vertically in line with the first, have nine over nine lights.

The windows of the front facade do not align vertically because Melwood Park was originally a 1 1/2-story house. Its first floor, plan and woodwork, are original. On the first floor there is a central hall with one room on each side, but the plan of the second level is different. The quarter-turn stair against the rear wall of the central hall was a Victorian addition. However, the six-panelled doors to the side rooms, the beaded architraves, the cornice, the chair rail and the panelling underneath it in the hall are original. There is no panelling along the rear wall since it must have been removed when the stair and rear rooms were added. The hall's deep cornice is noteworthy because of its complexity. It is actually an exterior type with a drip. The western room has a chair rail but no cornice. The east room is completely panelled with one large panel above the chair rail extending to the ceiling and one below extending to the floor. Here there is a Victorian mantel with fluted columns. However, the east room has a gray marble fireplace surrounded by a Victorian mahogany architrave and mantel shelf above. Above the shelf is some original panelling which is about 15 inches high and is divided into two horizontal panels.

The windows throughout the first floor are splayed. In the east room and the hall there are three panels on each side - a small panel over two longer ones. In the west room, the small panel is between the longer ones.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Melwood Park is significant because of its early owners, some of the most prominent men in all phases of the life of colonial Maryland. The building is also interesting because of the asymmetry of the windows on the main facade which may indicate that the building was at one time a 1 1/2-story structure later enlarged to a full two storys on the main facade.

Melwood Park was patented in 1672 to Robert Carvile for 1050 acres. Carvile sold it in 1684 to John Darnall who died the same year, leaving the land to his widow and his nephew, Henry Darnall, Jr. The latter's father was Colonel Henry Darnall, Lord Baltimore's agent in the province. The younger Darnall sold his share of 550 acres to William Digges in 1729. It is generally believed that Digges, a merchant and a gentleman, built the house soon after he purchased the land. Digges and his descendants lived in the house for nearly one hundred years.

William Digges was the second son of Colonel William Digges of Warburton Manor on the Potomac and the grandson of Governor Edward Digges of Virginia. His mother, a stepdaughter of Lord Baltimore, was Elizabeth Sewell. William Digges of Melwood Park married Eleanor Brooke, daughter of Major Thomas Brooke and Eleanor Hatton Brooke, and the widow of Philip Darnall, son of Colonel Henry Darnall. Digges' will was proved in Prince George's County on August 28, 1740, and in it he devised to his wife Eleanor, "... my dwelling plantation ...," and to his son Ignatius Digges at the death of Eleanor, all that tract "... whereon I live, Melwood Park ..."

Ignatius Digges married twice, first Mrs. Elizabeth (Parnham) Craycroft, and second Mary Carroll, daughter of Daniel Carroll of Duddington. There were no children by the second marriage and by the first only one child, Mary, who married Thomas Sim Lee, later Governor of Maryland (see below). In his 1785 will, Digges devised Melwood Park to his widow Mary during her lifetime and then to his grandson, Ignatius Digges Lee. The will also mentioned the private Roman Catholic Chapel at his home. Mary Carroll Digges survived her husband by forty years, dying in 1825. It was she who entertained General Ross in 1814 when he was leading his troops to Bladensburg and on to burn the public buildings in Washington.

Ignatius Digges Lee predeceased his grandmother, Mary Digges, as did both of his parents. The real estate of Mary Carroll Digges was disposed of by appointees of the Court and Melwood Park was sold to William Pumphrey

Pumphrey died intestate in 1877, and his son Robert H. Pumphrey, sold the house, barn and stable (on lots #1 and #5 of Melwood) to John Traband in November 1883. Traband's descendants owned the old mansion until 1963, although they had not lived there for many years. A deed dated September 18, 1963, transferred this location with other adjoining land to Robert W. Amman, Henry Nicowski and his wife Margaret, and John P. D'Angelo and his wife Kathryn H. The house has been occupied by a tenant for many years.

Thomas Sim Lee was born in Prince George's County, 29 October 1745, the son of Thomas Lee and Christian Sim (daughter of Dr. Patrick Sim of Sim's Delight, now Bellefields, National Register). Thomas Sim Lee was the Clerk of the County Court at Upper Marlboro before the Revolutionary He married Mary Digges at Melwood Park on October 27, 1771. He was the second Governor of the State of Maryland from 1779 to 1782, and served in this office again from 1792 to 1794. He died at his home, Needwood, in Frederick County, in October 1819. He was buried at Melwood Park but his remains were moved to Mount Carmel Cemetery near Upper Marlboro in 1888. During the Revolutionary War, while her husband was Governor, Mrs. Mary Lee enlisted the aid of the women of Maryland to furnish clothing for men in the army. She received a letter of thanks for this aid from General Washington. She was well known to him for Washington had visited her father's home, Melwood Park, many times. In 1932 the Washington Bicentennial Commission placed a marker where the lane from Melwood Park meets the Old Marlborough-Washington Turnpike (now Maryland Route 408). It lists some of George Washington's visits here between 1771 and 1773.
