Description

During the Boom and Bust Era (1914-1939) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. The Albert Whisinant House is a prime example of this. It is the only extant example of a one-story triple-entry house in the county. The building is of frame construction and the walls are clad with novelty siding. This house has a hipped roof that is covered with corrugated metal and the entire structure rests on stone piers.

The Albert Whisinant House is located on the north side of State Road 16 one and one-quarter miles northwest of Mountain Home. This house was built c. 1920 and is in fair condition. Its main, or south elevation is dominated by a porch that extends across virtually the entire facade of the structure. The hipped roof of this porch is supported by wooden box columns that rest on concrete blocks. Single symmetrically arranged doors access each of the three rooms of the structure. Fenestration of the structure consists of single, symmetrically placed, one-over-one double-hung wood sash windows. A single, symmetrically placed door relieves the north elevation of the building.

Significance

The Albert Whisinant House is being nominated under Criterion C with local significance because it is an unaltered example of a unique house type. Most vernacular houses in White County are accessed by either single or double front doors on their main elevation. The Albert Whisinant House is the only known extant example of a house that is accessed by three front doors. Because of this, it is significant for its contribution to the study of vernacular architecture.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.
