DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

EXTERIOR

This stone house dates from around the period of the Revolution. The rough cut quarry stone is laid in coursed rubble. Stones are squared at the corners of the structure and squared for the flat arches over the door and window openings. The house is two stories, five bays with a center hall. The window sash are 9/6. A lastory stone kitchen wing extends off one side. The front of the house is on the down hill side allowing for a walk in cellar. A porch extends across the entire front permitting access to the higher level first floor, and shelters the cellar entry. The present gable roof is slate probably replacing an 18th century shingle roof.

INTERIOR

This house has a center through hall plan with two rooms on each side of the hall, both 1st and 2nd floors. A kitchen wing extends off one side several steps lower. There is a large cooking fireplace with a removed bake oven. A winder stair on the fireplace wall leads to the loft above.

The main section of the house has four fireplaces on the first floor. These are back to back on the gable ends; three are corner fireplaces. There are three corner fireplaces on the second floor above those on the first. The cellar foundations for these three sets of corner fireplaces are corbeled out from the stone wall. The fourth fireplace is supported in the cellar on stone piers with a wood platform. All mantels are late 18th century except two on the first floor which have 19th century mantels and coal grates.

The open stair case is to the rear of the hall with a landing. The newel post is turned as are the balusters on the second floor; on the first floor the balusters are square, probably replacements. Many of the original 6 panel doors remain. Much of the hardware is replaced. The wide board floors are in good condition. The structure is presently in good preservation.

ARCHITECTURE

The Roseberry House is an excellent example of Revolutionary stone architecture and is in good condition. Most importantly, it is probably the oldest structure existing in Phillipsburg. The house is of substantial size even by today's standards. Much of the interior detail, such as the mantels, fireplaces and doors, is original, but most of the hardware has been replaced.

SOCIAL, HUMANITARIAN

Colonel Daniel Coxe, of the West New Jersey Proprietors, originally owned the area which is known today as Phillipsburg along with thousands of other acres of land. Colonel Coxe, apparently, lived and administered his enormous land holdings from Trenton.

Daniel Coxe divided his land in the Phillipsburg area between several of his relatives in 1745.

John Roseberry, Sr., one of the original settlers of Phillipsburg (he is mentioned in one of the Coxe's deeds of 1765), purchased the Coxe land in 1787 at a sheriff's sale.

The Roseberry House was either built at this time or a few years earlier.

Until 1852, when the New Jersey Central Railroad was completed in Phillipsburg, the area was virtually a rural farming vicinity. Once the railroad was completed Phillipsburg became a city. In 1853 the Phillipsburg Land Company purchased about 300 acres in Phillipsburg from a Roseberry to build houses. Most likely this land was just north of the John Roseberry House.

Since 1852 Phillipsburg grew very rapidly into a booming industrial city. And today little remains of the original farms built in the 18th century and operated into the 20th century. The John Roseberry House being the exception.
