When St. Patrick's Catholic Church at Damariscotta Mills was built in 1807 it resembled very closely some of the Colonial brick churches in Tidewater Virginia. St. Patrick's stands out as an excellent combination of Colonial and Federal styles. St. Patrick's was consecrated in 1808. The spire was not added until 1866 and an old photograph of the church shows that the original belfrey had a hip roof.

St. Patrick's was designed and built for solidity and endurance.

The walls of the church are one and a half feet thick and are solid brick.

The bricks were made on the opposite shore of Damariscotta Lake and hauled across by oxen during the winter of 1807.

The church as no cellar and is set on granite blocks. Limestone was imported from Ireland and made into mortar on the spot. Apparently the great limestone beds of Maine were unknown to these early settlers.

The entrance to the church is a pair of simple doors. The massive original key is still used. Above the doors is a lovely fan with a small delicate cross at the center. Above this is a beautiful round stained glass window depicting the figure of Christ. The ten arched windows on the sides of the church at one time were shuttered. Now they are memorial stained glass windows.

The original wooden altar, made in the shape of a tomb, is still in use. The original floors of the church are still intact and two of the original pews, large plank benches, are still in use. The railings of the stairway leading to the curved ceiling choir loft are also original struction. The doors within the sanctuary are engraved with the harp of Ireland and a sprig/of leaves.

A Paul Revere bell still calls the congregation of St. Patrick's to worship. The bell was donated by Matthew Cottrill in 1818 and is engraved with his name. The bell is one of 93 known to exist and is one of the last bells cast by Paul Revere, Sr. As far as can be determined, St. Patrick's is the only Catholic Church in New England to possess a Paul Revere bell.

St. Patrick's Catholic Church at Damariscotta Mills is not only the oldest Catholic Church in Maine but is the oldest surviving Catholic Church in New England.

The parish was founded in 1796, mainly through the efforts of James Kavanagh and Matthew Cottrill, two merchants who settled at Damariscotta Mills in the late 18th century.

The first church erected at the Mills was Our Lady of the Mills Chapel, a wooden structure. As there was no priest to say mass, it was used mainly for prayer.

The first mass said in the District of Maine was in the summer of 1798 by Father Jean Louis Anne Madgalene Lerebvre de Cheverus. After his missionary work among Maine Indians, and administering to the few Catholics who had settled in Maine, Father Cheverus was made the first Bishop of Boston in 1810. Some time later he was recalled to France by Louis XVIII and in 1823 made Bishop of Mantauban. In 1826, he became Archbishop of Bordeaux and a few months before he died in 1836 he was created Cardinal.

The first priest to actually administer to the Catholics at Damariscotta on a somewhat full time basis was Father Romagne. He was brought to Damariscotta by Father Matignon, another missionary to the Indians of Maine. Father Romagne agreed to spend the winters with the Kavanaghs and return to his missionary work with Father Cheverus when the latter made his journeys to Maine during the summer months.

Father Cheverus had always wished for a priest to be in residence at Damariscotta Mills, but when the hour finally arrived in 1817, one Father Ryan, was sent to Whitefield, and Damariscotta remained a mission church. Father Ryan was the first priest to be ordained in New England.

It was not until 1932 that St. Patrick's had a resident priest when Father Charles F. Bennett came to Damariscotta. In 1933, Father Edward F. Lynch was appointed Pastor at St. Patrick's.

James Kayanagh and Matthew Cottrill came to Damariscotta after landing These two enterprising men very soon made their fortune in lumin Boston. ber and shipbuilding. Their prominance and success attracted other Irish immigrants to the area from Boston and the Maritime Provinces.

Edward Kavanagh, the eldest son of James, had a most successful career as a lawyer and merchant. He turned to politics and was U.S. Minister to the Court of Lisbon, Portugal. In 1843, he became the first Catholic to become governor of Maine as well as the first Catholic to hold office in any New England state. He is buried in St. Patrick's cemetery beside the church at Damariscotta Mills.

The architect of St. Patrick's was one Nicholas Codd, who some (See Continuation Sheet)
