The original furnishings were destroyed during the Civil War, but the house has been refurnished with antiques, and structurally is basically unaltered from its 1855 state.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Bragg Home is significant both for its owners and its architecture. The structure,which was the home of Judge John Bragg and subsequently his brother General Braxton Bragg, is one of the finest Greek-Revival mansions in Mobile and was designed and constructed by one of the city's outstanding architects, Thomas Simmons James./

The house was built in 1847 by William H. Pratt who has acquired the land within the year. A small house was already on the property and had served as the country home of Louis Judson from 1827 to 1837. Pratt hired Thomas Simmons James of Mobile to design the house. James, who also worked in Natchez, Jackson, and New Orleans was one of Mobile's outstanding architects. He is credited with having designed the City Hall, and the Madame le Vert House, as well as several other outstanding Mobile structures. Mobile historians Peter Hamilton and Erwin Craighead both concede to James the architectural credit for Barton Academy and the Government Street Presbyterian Church.

Judge John Bragg bought the house from Pratt in 1855 and during his occupancy the house was a meeting place for statesmen of the day. Bragg's brothers, Gen. Braxton, later to own the house, ex-Governor Thomas Bragg of North Carolina, Captain William Bragg, and Alexander Bragg were constant visitors

Bragg came to Alabama from North Carolina where he had studied at the University of North Carolina and had been admitted to the Bar in 1827. He was elected to the legislature of North Carolina in 1830 and was reelected for four consecutive terms. He arrived in Mobile in 1835 and shortly thereafter served as editor of "The Register" for a brief period.

In 1842 he was appointed by Governor Benjamin Fitzpatrick to fill a vacancy upon the circuit bench until a meeting of the legislature, at which time he was elected by a large majority for a six-year term. He was later re-elected by the people. In 1851, he was invited by the States Rights Democratic party to become a candidate for the United States Congress from the Mobile district and was elected. He served during the two sessions of 1852 and 1853 and then declined re-election. He retired from professional as well as political life and did not reappear in public until his election to the Constitutional Convention of 1861 as a representative of Mobile County. During the war he remained on his plantation in Lowndes County.
