Summary Paragraph

Located in the northwest portion of Keuka Lake State Park, the Beddoe-Rose Family cemetery is a settlement era burial ground containing the graves of fourteen members of the Beddoe and Rose families. The cemetery was part of the Chestnuts, a nineteenth century farm of Robert Seldon Rose, on land that was originally owned by his uncle, John Beddoe. The large farmhouse on the property was demolished in 1967 after it became part of Keuka Lake State Park. The cemetery is the last vestige of the farm and is off a hiking trail, up a rise opposite a picnic area on West Bluff Road. The cemetery is 51 feet by 23 feet on top of a rise and is divided into two sections. Locations of burials are known and observable even though most of markers have been broken or displaced. The Rose family section is marked by a low stone fence, which is a contributing feature. The burials in the Rose section are grouped around markers, most of them toppled and resting near the bases. In the Beddoe section, burials are indicated by the in-ground remnants of broken grave markers. Broken portions of the markers are propped against a tree. Most of these are slab type markers, two being early nineteenth century stones with curved shoulders. The haphazard appearance to the cemetery is the result of weather damage and vandalism. A local group has partnered with the park to research and document the site with plans to restore the markers. The group has also provided signage and information for local hikers about the cemetery.

Narrative Description

Keuka Lake is a Y-shaped lake in the Finger Lakes region of New York State, bounded on the north by Yates County and on the south by Steuben County. Keuka Lake State Park is located near the north end of the west branch on land that forms a peninsula between the two branches of the lake. The village of Branchport is at the north end of the west branch of the lake. Other nearby villages are Bluff Point and Keuka Park, both along the east branch with the village of Penn Yan further north. The Beddoe-Rose Family Cemetery is now part of Keuka Lake State Park in the town of Jerusalem in Yates County. The cemetery is about 1,000 feet from the western park road, occupying the top of a high mound of land between the ridges on either side. This area now features hiking trails, one of them being the White Trail that goes up the hill on the north side of the ravine past the cemetery. When hiking the trail, it goes past a large depression in the hillside where a low stone fence is visible. The fence is part of the cemetery, with the site occupying a flat section of a tall outcropping of land. A ravine to the south side is very deep and a ravine to the north is much shallower. The hillside is wooded with the dominant vegetation being oak, pine and hickory trees. The dense growth of the forest obscures the view of Keuka Lake, which may have been the reason for the Beddoe and Rose families selecting the spot for the cemetery. Today, the cemetery is only accessible by foot.

The Beddoe Rose Cemetery is 51 feet by 23 feet and was established circa 1815 as a place of interment for the members of the John Beddoe and John N. and Henry Rose families; the last burial took place in 1908. The low field stone fence is over four feet in height in some places and about two feet thick. It encompasses about half of the surface area at the top of the mound, enclosing the burial sites of the Rose family on four sides with an opening on the east side. A metal fence at one time did the same for the remainder of the cemetery, but it was removed at some unknown date. The Beddoe family interments occupy the other half of the surface area at the top of the mound with fieldstone boundary markers placed on two sides (the north and west). There is no apparent placement of stones on the east and south side of this area, which may be the result of erosion over the years or the fact that they were not placed initially due to the steep drop off of those sides.

Members of the Beddoe family were interred in this cemetery from 1815 to 1908. The John N. and Henry Rose family burials took place during the years of 1841 to 1891. The grave marker of John Beddoe is typical of the early nineteenth century, being a large carved stone slab with a center top curve and curved shoulders. It is larger than the other grave markers within the Beddoe family section. Its size and height reflects the importance of the person. The other gravestones are slab style sandstone or limestone, also of the period. The markers for John N. and Henry Rose are more representative of the mid- to late nineteenth century, being obelisk-style markers with family inscriptions surrounded by foot or headstones. The shafts of the markers have been toppled, resting near the bases. There is no funerary art associated with the markers except for the inscriptions and two with verses. The gravestones have been documented as much as possible through photography and transcription of marker texts, such that each stone can be associated with a specific grave. The following are the names of the deceased, relationship, years of birth and death, and age at the time of death. Specific composition and condition of the gravestones for these two families is included in a separate chart.

Current Condition/Integrity

This cemetery has a sign noting its history on the trail before the steep incline up to the site. Its isolated location creates the potential for vandalism, which began occurring after Keuka Lake State Park was established in 1964 and resulted in several gravestones being pushed or falling into the ravine. In addition to vandalism, there has been natural deterioration of the low stone wall around the cemetery and of the gravestones. Two large pine trees in the cemetery area have roots that have dislodged some grave markers. Nearly all of the slab stones markers are broken and the larger obelisk style markers are off their bases. Many of the gravestones of the Beddoe portion of the cemetery are leaning against a large pine tree. Some of the smaller remnants of the markers were removed by park staff and are being stored for safe keeping.

During December of 2011, several of the members of the Jerusalem History Club with permission of the NYS Office of Parks, Recreation and Historical Preservation began to clear the cemetery of overgrowth and debris. During this process, a cap stone was retrieved from the ravine and one stone from the trail side. Remnants of a larger fallen tree were removed and the underbrush and wood debris cleared as well. In spite of the condition of the markers, the burials themselves are undisturbed and the locations are known and observable. This fact, combined with the history of the family's role in early settlement, are the key factors in establishing the significance of the cemetery.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance and applicable criteria.)

The Beddoe-Rose Cemetery is a small, settlement era cemetery containing the graves of fourteen members of two of the area's earliest and best known families. In the late eighteenth century, the rights to buy and sell lands were being acquired by speculators who formed land companies with the purpose of selling large plots to those willing to seek their fortunes in western New York. One such company was formed by Oliver Phelps and Nathaniel Gorham, whose large land holdings in the Finger Lakes area attracted the attention of retired sea captain John Beddoe. In 1802, Beddoe purchased over 7,000 acres of land in Yates County, which he subsequently divided into lots for sale or lease, encouraging early settlement in the region. He also was active in politics, being one of the founders of the town and serving on more than one occasion as town supervisor. In 1815, Beddoe selected a small piece of his land that overlooked Keuka Lake for a burial ground and later sold this parcel and a roughly 350 acres of surrounding land to another early settler, Henry Rose. Henry Rose and his brother, John, were early farmers in Yates County, who bought large tracts of land near Keuka Lake from Beddoe. Being remote from any sizable village, the Beddoe and Rose families continued to use the small parcel for burials until 1908. Its age as an early settlement cemetery in Yates County makes it significant under National Register Criterion A and Criterion Consideration D, as does the importance of the family and their association with the region's early history. Although the cemetery was omitted from the multiple property document The Historic and Architectural Resources of Yates County, New York (1994), it meets registration requirements described for cemeteries as being "significant for their association with the county's social and cultural development, and in many cases, for significant local residents who are buried there." In spite of damage to the stones, the cemetery's intact and discernible interments, fencing and surviving markers clearly indicate its age and function. A local history group has partnered with Keuka Lake State Park (current location of cemetery) to assist with documenting, restoring and informing the public about the history and significance of the Beddoe-Rose families and the cemetery.

Developmental history/additional historic context information (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Historical Context

Yates County's early development is well documented in the multiple property document The Historic and Architectural Resources of Yates County, New York (1994). Yates County is located in the Finger Lakes region of New York State with an area of roughly 400 square miles. At present the county is still largely rural with much of it related to a growing wine industry along Keuka Lake at the county's south end. The wine industry has its roots in the mid to late nineteenth century and continues to be a mainstay of the local economy. Part of this is due to the topography of gently rolling hills and valleys that have elevations that reach up to 900 feet above sea level.

As lands were marketed in the region after the American Revolution, the heavily wooded terrain of hills and valleys with few passable roads resulted in sparse settlement. By 1790, the largest concentration of population was in a place known as City Hill, in the present day town of Torrey, that was settled by Jemima Wilkinson and her followers. With a community based on Quaker ideals, Wilkinson called herself the Universal Friend and chose Yates County to establish a “new city on a hill” based on equality of the sexes and total sexual abstinence. The town of Jerusalem had its name bestowed in deference to the Friend and her society.¹ Her followers established farms, as did many of the early settlers in the county, and over the course of the nineteenth century, agriculture shifted from small mixed-grain and subsistence farms to large scale production of fruits, vegetables and dairying.

One of the first settlers in the area was John Beddoe. Originally from Wales, he was a sea captain, sailing for the East India Company, traveling many times to China. The wealth he accrued from his travels allowed him to “retire” to America where he could set up his own country estate. Hearing that land was for sale in Western New York, he purchased roughly 7,000 acres in 1798 around the west branch of Keuka Lake in the southern section of the county, which in part prompted a period of development of the area as he divided his holdings into lots for sale. Shortly thereafter, brothers John and Henry Rose purchased land from John Beddoe in 1838-1840 and moved to the area to build homes. These two brothers were sons of the Rose family of Geneva and their efforts, combined with those of John Beddoe, encouraged further settlement and the establishment of large farms in the surrounding area, along with related agricultural industries (milling, processing of products, machinery, etc.). John Rose established a large farm he called Esperanza and Henry Rosel a large estate that he called Hampstead.² Henry Rose oversaw the building of a plank road in 1849 which greatly improved overland transportation between Penn Yan and Branchport.³ John and Henry were able to sustain their farms through the difficult years of the Civil War by selling supplies to the Union Army and John eventually became the town’s wealthiest citizen. John Beddoe and John N. Rose were active in local town politics as they both served terms as town supervisors.⁴ Some members who married into the Rose family were decedents of Phillip Livingston, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and a member of the first and second Continental Congresses.

Henry Rose was also a physician but chose to make his living as a farmer, raising merino sheep, at one time having two tenant houses and four barns for his nearly 1,000 sheep. Rose was reported to have made a handsome profit from selling wool to the federal government that ended up as Union Army uniforms during the Civil War. He also grew fruit, including grapes, and was credited with being the first to cultivate Delaware grapes in the region (1861). When he died in 1881, his farm property passed to his nephew, Henry Sill, who continued the vineyard and orchard operations and was instrumental in bringing the railroad to the region. Henry Sill was one of the directors of the Penn Yan, Keuka Park and Branchport Railway Company (1897). Only one member of this branch of the Rose-Sill family was buried in the Beddoe-Rose Family cemetery, that being Frederick Sill, the adopted son of Henry, who died in 1858 at age nine.

Another Rose family member established a third well-known farm, known as The Chestnuts. Robert Rose bought 362 acres of land along the north end of the east branch of Keuka Lake around 1840. He bought the land from his uncle, John Rose, who had originally purchased it from John Beddoe. By the time Beddoe sold the land, a small burial ground was established on a bluff overlooking the lake. This was necessitated by the death of Catherine Beddoe, wife of John Beddoe, who died in 1815. This small parcel was remote from the three estates, but close enough for the families to bury other deceased family members in a peaceful, scenic spot. John Beddoe was buried in the cemetery in 1834.

Brothers John and Henry Rose were also buried there after their deaths in 1870 and 1881 (respectively). The last family member to be buried in the cemetery was John Beddoe Stafford, the grandson of Captain John Beddoe, who died in 1908. The property was still owned by the family as late as 1938 and was being used by the family of Dr. J. H. Rose as a summer home. In the 1950s, the state of New York was investigating establishing a state park in the Finger Lakes that included the Rose family property. After several lengthy discussions and public hearings, a plan was submitted to Governor Thomas E. Dewey for approval and the allocation of funds for land acquisition. By 1961, the new park, known as Keuka Lake State Park, was under construction and officially opened to the public in 1964; in 1967 the park demolished the farm house. A hiking trail was constructed south of the cemetery, designed to avoid the burials but were still accessible by foot for those venturing from the path.

In June 2012, the Jerusalem History Club, with the support of the Keuka Lake State Park, placed a sign at the entrance to the cemetery, which contained a small wood box with laminated printouts of the history of the cemetery and a guest book. Since placing the guest book at the site, the signatures, comments and addresses of about 800 entries have filled several pages. The entries include visitors from all over the United States, Canada and Europe as well as numerous local visitors.

With the support of the Rose Family and the state park, the Jerusalem History Club continues to assist with maintaining the cemetery and documenting its history. The club has also been seeking out sources of funding for the restoration and continued interpretation of the site and additional recognition will allow access to additional funding sources. The New York State Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation (owner of the site and park) is in the process of a review and revision of the master plan for Keuka Lake State Park. During the fall of 2013, the agency held a public informational meeting to discuss the park and obtain input for the plan. The Jerusalem History Club continues to attend these meetings to ensure that provisions are made for the continued care of the Beddoe-Rose Family Cemetery.

A photograph of a wooden signpost in a forest. The signpost consists of two vertical wooden posts. A horizontal wooden sign is attached to the top of the left post, with the text "BEDDOE - ROSE CEMETERY" engraved in gold letters. A small, dark wooden box is attached to the right post, positioned lower than the sign. The forest floor is covered with dry leaves and a dirt path leads into the background. Sunlight filters through the trees, creating dappled light on the ground.

Dear Ms. Bartos

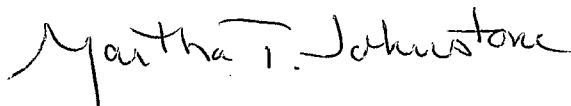

The Board of Directors of the Bluff Point Association supports the application of the Beddoe-Rose Cemetery for listing on the National Register of Historic Places. The cemetery, located on the Bluff above Keuka Lake within the Keuka Lake State Park, is a place of great historical significance to our area.

The Bluff Point Association is currently engaged in a project to place interpretive signs at a scenic overlook above the west branch of Keuka Lake near the State Park. One of these signs, the "history of the people" sign, refers to pioneers John Beddoe and brothers John N. and Henry Rose and to the Beddoe-Rose Cemetery where they and their families are buried.

The addition of the Beddoe-Rose cemetery to the National Register of Historic Places will enhance the cemetery's significance and will honor the legacies of the earliest settlers to our region.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,

Martha T. Johnstone,

Dear Ms. Bartos,

I am writing to convey the Schuyler County Historical Society's support of the nomination of the Wayne Baptist Church for listing in the State Historic Register. The 1848 Greek Revival-style structure is by itself worthy of historic designation and preservation, having been a center of community activity for over 165 years. Today, it is again the focus of activity, attracting the non-denominational support and efforts of people and organizations from around the area (like the Corning Museum Of Glass, which is assisting with restoration of stained glass windows). This kind of support gives an indication of how important historic designation is to those in the area who view preserving their heritage as a worthwhile responsibility.

The Constitution of the Schuyler County Historical Society includes a mandate to assist and cooperate with other organizations in Schuyler County and adjacent counties, in their efforts to preserve and disseminate local history. Support for historic designation of the Wayne Baptist Church, as well as for the efforts of the Town of Wayne History Group, falls under that mandate.

Thank you for your assistance.

Dear Ms. Pierpoint,

The Dundee Area Historical Society, formed in the early 1970s, exists not only to collect and preserve local history, but to keep it alive by displaying and sharing it with people from around the world. We use our historical records and collection to educate today's and future generations about the area's past history and events that have shaped our lives today. We also maintain the Old Schoolhouse Museum, a two story building built in 1891, for use as a grade school, along with the Hoyt Coal Weigh Station.

We are writing to support the nomination for the Wayne Baptist Church listed above to the National and State Registers. We believe that the quality of significance in American history, architecture, archeology, engineering and culture is definitely present in this property. The church was built in the mid 19th century Greek-Revival style architecture which is significant for the area.

Such a designation would likely be the first step in the beginning of the community looking at other very old buildings in the hamlet where the church was once a centerpiece and inspiring them to maintain them as additional examples of the early history and architecture. Early settlers of the area are buried in the cemetery next to the church.

Thank you for your consideration!

Sincerely,

Sue Lange
