Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph

(Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.) (Refer to photographs)

This documentation is presented to remove the Water and Eva Burgess Farm in the Macomber Corner vicinity of Dover-Foxcroft, Maine from the National Register of Historic Places.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Walter and Eva Burgess Farm (NR: 97000312) was listed in the National Register of Historic Places on April 14, 1997 in recognition of its agricultural and architectural significance. Comprised of a main house and barn erected in 1914 as well as 206 acres of largely open agricultural land, the Water and Eva Burgess Farm was a good example of an early twentieth century farmstead. The four-square house and large gambrel roofed barn were built to replace a set of nineteenth century buildings that were destroyed by fire. Unfortunately, ninety-nine years later another fire burned the house and barn to the ground.

This additional documentation is submitted in order to remove Walter and Eva Burgess Farm from the National Register as per 36 CFR 60.15 (a)(1) because "the property has ceased to meet the criteria for listing in the National Register because the qualities which caused it to be originally listed have been lost or destroyed...". A copy of a newspaper article recording the fire is enclosed.

BURGESS, WALTER AND EVA, FARM

PISCATAQUIS COUNTY, MAINE

The Walter and Eva Burgess Farm is comprised of a two-and-a-half story frame "square house" whose one-story rear ell extends to a large gambrel roofed barn with shed additions, as well as a 206 acre parcel of land. The farm is located in the southwestern part of rural Dover-Foxcroft near the Sangerville town line.

Facing southwest, the front elevation of the house features a shallow hip roofed porch spanning the facade (and carrying along the southeast side elevation) and a dormer on the high hipped roof. The porch roof is supported by four Tuscan columns on the front and six along the side. It shelters a central door that is flanked to the west by paired one-over-one double hung sash windows, and to the east by a single one-over-one as well as a third angled window located at the southeast corner of the first story. There is a single window in the center bay of the second story, and paired windows in the outer bays. The hip roofed dormer also contains a pair of one-over-ones.

The porch on the southeast side elevation shelters four asymmetrically placed one-over-ones in the main block of the house, as well as two windows and a door in the ell. A more symmetrical fenestration pattern prevails on the second story with a central pair of one-over-ones flanked by single one-over-ones. A chimney punctuates the roof on this elevation. In addition to the two windows and door under the porch, the ell contains a shed roofed dormer over the porch as well as two additional windows and a double door in the woodshed section. A brick flue rises through the rear (northeast) slope of the main roof at about the point where it meets the ell roof. The northwest side elevation features a three sided bay window, door, and short porch at the northeast corner, as well as a window at the southwest corner. There are two widely spaced windows on the second story. The ell has two windows of unequal size and a door on the northwest elevation, as well as three windows on its rear wall.

In plan, the house features a central stair hall that extends through the first story to the relatively narrow kitchen that is located across the entire back wall. To the right (east) of the hall is a double parlor separated by pocket doors, and to the left (west) is a bedroom, bathroom, and dining room. The second floor contains six rooms. Wood trim throughout the house is varnished, and the lone fireplace is located in the front parlor.

The barn is connected to the ell at its northeast corner. Its broad front elevation has a symmetrical fenestration pattern comprised of a pair of large centrally located track mounted doors flanked by single six-over-six double hung windows (a third window at the southwest corner is a later addition). There are two additional six-over-sixes high in the hay loft, and a large louvered vent in the gambrel peak. A shed roofed addition with five windows extends across about three-quarters of the southeast elevation. It is joined to a gable roofed shed at its southwest end, and a shed roofed addition that was attached to the rear elevation of the barn in 1986. This shed partially obscures the original fenestration pattern which was virtually the same as on the front elevation.

Additional buildings on the farm include the aforementioned shed connected to the barn, and an equipment shed that stands farther to the southeast. There was also a much smaller barn and an L-shaped gable roofed wing attached to the rear of the main barn (apparently replaced by the present shed).

BURGESS, WALTER AND EVA, FARM

Comprised of a main house and barn erected in 1914 as well as 206 acres of largely open agricultural land, the Walter and Eva Burgess Farm is a good example of an early twentieth century farmstead. The existing "square house" and large gambrel roofed barn were built to replace a set of nineteenth century buildings that were destroyed by fire. This property is eligible for nomination to the Register under criterion A for its association with early twentieth century patterns of agriculture in Dover-Foxcroft, and criterion C for its representative farm architecture.

In 1834, William Burgess (1802-1883) acquired 100 acre lot number two in the third range of lots in Perham's survey of Dover, upon which he established his farm. Tradition holds that he initially occupied a log cabin until he could erect a frame house. Burgess sold one-half interest in his "Homestead Farm" to his son John O. Burgess (1831-1916) in 1860, and the remainder in 1877 with the provision that he and his wife would be cared for by his son during the remainder of their life. John Burgess continued to farm this property with his wife Betsey Ann (Merrill) Burgess until its operation was assumed by their youngest child Walter H. Burgess (1867-1964).

The Agricultural Schedules of the 1850, 1860, 1870, and 1880 census provide important information about the Burgess family farm in this period. In 1850 it was reported that the farm was comprised of seventy acres of improved land and fifty-five acres of unimproved land. Burgess owned 1 horse, 4 milch cows, 2 oxen, 7 other cattle, 2 swine, and 17 sheep. Subsequent census figures reveal significant changes in the type and amount of grain that was raised, butter and cheese produced, acreage (up to 223 by 1880), and the size of the herd of sheep (34 in 1860, 21 in 1870, 45 in 1880). The Burgess farm illustrates the importance of sheep to the nineteenth century rural economy. As the number of woolen textile mills increased, the local market for raw wool stimulated the growth of sheep herds. In the nearby village of Dover-Foxcroft, for example, the first woolen mill was erected in 1836, two years after William Burgess purchased his farm.

It is uncertain whether the original dwelling and outbuildings erected by William Burgess were still in existence at the time that his grandson acquired the farm, although it is likely that some or all of them were. In any event, on the afternoon of December 23, 1913, the complex appears to have been completely destroyed by fire. In its December 25, 1913, edition The Piscataquis Observer (Dover-Foxcroft) reported under a headline titled Farm Buildings Burned:

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places
Continuation Sheet

BURGESS, WALTER AND EVA, FARM

The farm buildings of John O. and Walter H. Burgess at West Dover were entirely destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon, causing a loss of three horses, six hogs, 12 or 14 head of stock, 1700 bushels of potatoes, the grain from 25 acres and a large amount of hay. Considerable of the furniture in the lower part of the house was saved but that in the upper part was burned.

The Observer has heard no estimate of the loss, which is heavy as the buildings were finely equipped. There was some insurance. Great sympathy is felt for the family in their misfortune and particularly for Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Burgess who had lived on the farm so long. The fire started in the barn from some unknown cause.

As reported in the Piscataquis Observer, reconstruction of the Burgess farm began with the addition of an ell to the blacksmith shop where the family would reside until a new house was built (1/22/1914). On April 30, 1914, it was reported that "C. B. Brann is working at West Dover, helping build a barn for Walter H. Burgess." Finally, in its May 21, 1914, edition the Observer noted that "C. B. Brann and F. E. Sands are building a house at West Dover for Walter H. Burgess." Burgess and his wife Eva Leah (Pratt) Burgess (1865-1940) subsequently occupied the family farm until their deaths.

The new buildings erected by the Burgesses in 1914 reflected both the popular fashion in farmhouse architecture as well as modern ideas about barn design. The dwelling fully illustrates the characteristics of the "square house" or "foursquare" with its nearly square footprint, two-story height, hip roof with a dormer on the front elevation, and the double-pile arrangement of the interior. The immense gambrel roofed barn represents a design that emerged at the turn-of-the-century and whose chief benefit was the increased hay storage in the upper level. In Maine, such barns are relatively scarce due to the fact that few farmers could justify the expense of replacing their nineteenth century barns at a time when agriculture was in steep decline.

Walter Burgess' choice of design for his new barn indicates the substantial change that had occurred relative to the farm's focus in the early twentieth century. The hay storage area and the incorporation of milking stanchions in the lower level reveals that a shift to dairying on a large scale was underway (it had probably already begun as a dozen or more head of stock were lost in the fire). This was a pattern repeated throughout the central and southern areas of the state in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries as demand increased, dairy herds were improved, and advances in processing and transportation made it possible for a farmer to market his product. Although little specific information has been uncovered about the size and nature of the Burgess dairy operation, the investment made in the buildings underscores the significance of this agricultural activity.

DOVER-FOXCROFT, Maine — Every available firefighter in the region rushed to a fire at a historic 1914 farm on Shaw Road on Sunday afternoon, but nothing could stop the fast-moving flames, Fire Chief Gerald Guyotte said.

“It’s burned flat,” the chief said of the fire at 257 Shaw Road, which leveled the 50-foot-tall barn and the adjacent house. “It was one of the old barns.”

Karen and Fred Cookson own the farm and were unloading a truck in the barn when something under the truck, possibly hay shavings, caught fire, the fire chief said at about 7 p.m.

“They drove the truck out [of the barn] and looked back and the whole barn was on fire,” Guyotte said.

The fire station is 6 miles away and by the time local firefighters arrived around 3 p.m., the entire place was burning, the chief said.

“They lost two cows, 100 chickens and a cat,” Guyotte said. “Everybody else got out.”

Around 100 firefighters from 11 towns fought the blaze, and some were treated for heat exhaustion at Mayo Regional Hospital, he said.

The Cooksons ran a working farm, Guyotte said.

“They raised beef cattle — farm-fresh beef — and they had horses,” the fire chief said. “They’re farm people and worked the land. I called the Red Cross, but they’re staying with friends in Dexter.”

Shaw Road is located off Route 7 near the Garland town line and is approximately 2 miles long.

The family is grateful to have escaped the flames, the fire chief said.

Fred Cookson told the chief he is upset about his loss, but added, “There are people worse off than me,” Guyotte said, recalling his conversation with the farm owner.
