Description: This is a seven bay, two-and-one-half story brick store and dwelling built around 1910 on the site of an earlier store. It is an L plan building with a hip roof on the rear section and a gable roof on the front section. The rear section contains a center interior chimney and interior chimneys in two cross gables to the west. A hip roofed dormer with two one-over-one, double hung sash windows is also in the rear section. The brick arched second story windows are regularly spaced. In the front section are the original showcase windows with a recessed doorway between. The rear section contains two doors and a one-over-one, double hung sash window which is larger than the ones on the second story. At the back of the rear section is a protruding cross gable with a window on the second story and a door on the first story facing High Street. A hip roofed porch with columns on brick piers wraps around the rear portions. The original iron fence is in front of the east portion of the building.

Significance: This building is significant because it is typical of the stores with attached dwellings that were located along High Street. Before the present building was constructed around 1910, there was a store on the same site where a tinshop, specializing in stoves and tinware, was located. Later this same early building housed a dry goods and grocery store and a Chinese laundry. The new building has always been a store, used for diverse functions and a dwelling.
