LIV Story

The Henry Champion Pouse is an unusual house set back from the road behind a large stone wall with iron gates, well protected by trees. Its gambrel roof has a long clope to the rear, extending to almost a lean-to incorporating an autached shed on the north side. There is a one and a half stor ell to the south side in tle rear to which is attached a more modern conservatory or solarium with long windows and a delicate balustrade on its flat roof. A tall brick chimney rises from the far end of the ell. / Massive twin brick chimneys arise from the ends of the house proper, giving balance to the large house. The three dormers of the ell resemble those on the front of the main part of the house, but are lacking their elaborate detail. Those on the front roof have triangular pediments with mutules on raking and return cornices. entry portico is similar, with triangular pediment and mutules, but here there is a substantial frieze. The whole portico is supported on Ionic columns. The wide door, perhaps double-leaf but covered by a storm door, is flanked by double-hunc sidelichts. The windows at the first floor level on the facado and at both levels of the ends reflect the detail so readily found elsewhere, with mutules and dentil work. They have flat pediagets and a frieze. Sash is proper twelve over twelve arrangement throughout the main portion; an occasional window in the ell is nine over nine.

The roof has wood shingles; the foundation is of stone. In 1966 when the property was surveyed the roof was set off by a delicate balustrade such as that on the roof of the conservatory; it has since been removed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICAN	NCE		SILLIA

Colonel Henry Champion had this house built for his son, General Henry Champion, in 1790, in that part of Colchester known as Westchester. The architect was William Spratywho also designed the Epaphroditus Champion House in East Haddam and the Deming House in Litchfield, both also architecturally important houses in Connecticut.

The Colonel (1723-1797) was an active man during the Revolution, was a deputy to the general assembly, and was deacon of the Westchester (Colchester) Church. His son, General Henry, followed his father in many ways. Borm on March 16, 1751, he served his country at an early age, being present as an ensign at the Lexington Alarm. He was continuously and quickly promoted, fought at Bunker Hill, and on January 1, 1776, was made adjutant on the staff of Colonal Sammel Tvllys. Because he was an acting major of the First Battalion, Light Brigade, at the capture of Stony Point, Long Island, he always celebrated Stony Point Day, July 16, at his Colchester home.

In addition to being a military figure of some note, he was an important man in his community. He was a deputy to the general assembly in 1789, 1793-98, 1800-1805, and an assistant from 1806 to 1817. He was a deacon of the Mestchester Church from 1813 to 1828. As a financier, he was involved in the amount of $85,000 in the Connecticut Land Company, and helped to obtain a charter for the Phoenix Bank in Hartford. As a result of his work in land settlement, Champion, New York and Champion, Ohio, were named for him.

His epitaph is as follows:

The patriotism of General Champion early led him to join the army of the Revolution. He was a brave and efficient subaltern officer at the battle of Bunker Fill. He shared in the perilous retreat of the American troops from Long Island. The rendered essential services under Kosciusko in constructing the defences at West Point. He led the First Battalion of Connecticut Light Infantry at the capture of

Stony Point. Subsequently he filled many offices of honor and trust in his native State. By his talents and influence he promoted the welfare of the community where he resides. He died cheered by the hope and sustained by the promises of the Cospel, leaving a memory respected by his friends, cherished by his family, and honorable to the place of his birth. I
