Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Salvation Army Women's Home and Hospital at 1471 W. Como Avenue is located on a large lot in a primarily residential area, west of Como Park and east of the Minnesota State Fairgrounds. Though built for an institutional purpose, architecturally the building resembles a stately mansion. This large two and one-half story Tudor Revival style building is constructed primarily of brick, with half-timbering on parts of the second story wall surfaces. The building is rectangular in shape and has a gabled roof with its gable ends perpendicular to the street. It has a three story square brick tower with crenelation and buttresses toward the west side of the main facade. This tower has paired windows at the 2nd and 3rd stories which have concrete hoods with label molding, and quoinlike surrounds. The tower has a stone Tudor arched doorway which was originally the main entrance. At the opposite (east) end of the main facade is an intersecting half-timbered end which projects slightly over the first floor. Immediately to the west of this gable end is a large exterior brick chimney with two tall octagonal brick chimney stacks. The roofline is enlivened by gabled dormers which have simple bargeboards and pendants like those on the projecting gable ends. Most of the windows in the building are 9/9 and 8/1 double hung sash with new aluminum storm windows. The windows on the brick portions of the wall surface have brick header lintels, and concrete sills, while those on the half-timbered portion of the building have wood lintels and sills. The side walls of the building are not as ornate, but also feature brickwork and half timbering. A large one story concrete and metal panel addition was made to the east side of the building in 1977. This is now the main entrance to the building. Though this addition is contemporary in design and built of new materials, it does not seriously detract from the architecture of the original building.

8. Significance

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph) Builder:

Builder: George Grant

The Salvation Army Women's Home and Hospital (now Salvation Army Booth Brown House Services), built in 1912 and designed by Clarence H. Johnston, Sr., is architecturally significant as a sophisticated design by one of Minnesota's most prominent architects, and is historically significant as a long standing charitable institution, which has provided services to women and children in the community since the turn of the century.

The Salvation Army was founded in London in 1865, and established its first American mission in 1880. Its militaristic version of humanitarianism reached St. Paul seven years later when the "Citadel" opened its doors at 10th and St. Peter in Downtown. In 1890 the Salvation Army opened a second outpost which is now known as the St. Paul Temple.

Twelve years after a rescue home for women was opened in Brooklyn, New York, the St. Paul chapter of the Salvation Army established the Women's Home and Hospital. Shortly thereafter, Joseph and William Elsinger provided funding for the construction of a new building to house the facility. This building was completed in 1913 at a cost of $45,000. By 1923, the programs had expanded to such an extent that a three story addition was required to house recreational and post-natal facilities. From 1913 to 1971 the house served as a home and hospital for unwed mothers and their children.

In 1971, the facility became known as the Salvation Army Booth Brown House Services and its focus changed to a treatment center for young women with behavorial or emotional problems. The facility still serves this purpose and is still operated by the Salvation Army.

Clarence H. Johnston, Sr, the architect of the Salvation Army Women's Home and Hospital, was one of the most prominent and successful architects in the State. He employed academic styles with a certain inventiveness and adaptability depending on the situation. He was born in Minnesota in 1859, attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and travelled in Europe briefly before returning to St. Paul. After working with A.M. Radcliff and E. P. Bassford, he opened his own architectural practice in St. Paul in 1883. He was a very prolific architect, and designed buildings of all types and sizes throughout the State, including many public buildings and a number of hospitals. His experience and reputation must have led to his commission to design the Salvation Army Home and Hospital. His choice of the Tudor Revival style seems well suited to the religious and charitable purposes of the facility. The setting of the building on a large landscaped lot give it a feeling of isolation, while the architecture provides it a certain air of domesticity, which together give the building a much more pleasing character than much institutional architecture. The building is one of Clarence H. Johnston, Sr.'s most convincing essays in the Tudor Revival Style.
