DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Reverend Dudley Moore House is situated approximately 600 feet east of Kentucky Highway 425, four miles south of Lawrenceburg, the county seat of Anderson, and less than a mile north of the Bluegrass Parkway. This dwelling, built ca. 1850, occupies a small rise that slopes gently to the southeast, and a complex of buildings mostly contemporary with the house is located on the incline (see site location map).

The dwelling is a central hall frame "I" house with a two-story ell (see photos 1 and 2). The facade faces west and is of slightly asymmetrical arrangement. An exterior brick chimney is at either gabled end of the main block which is 46 1/2 feet wide, and a one-story porch spans the front's three bays. Another one-story porch runs the entire length of the ell's north. The rear room of the ell's lower level is of log construction. It was weatherboarded and converted into a kitchen with the erection of the frame house, but a centered stone chimney remains. Its smokestack was transformed to brick with the addition of a second floor to the ell in 1900.

The interior of the block contains a central hall with an enclosed staircase. On either side of the hall is a square parlor with ceilings less than eight feet high. Each parlor has a chaste Greek mantel (see photo 3), and all flooring and other interior fittings of simple character have been retained. The first floor of the ell contains a dining room in addition to the kitchen. A small storage room was appended at the southwest corner in 1900, at which time the interior walls of every room excepting the parlors were covered with clapboarding.

The second floor, also reached by an enclosed staircase leading from the dining room (see photo 4), contains four chambers and a hall. The fireplaces of these rooms have been covered, but mantels remain (see photo 5).

A fine collection of nineteenth-century and early twentieth-century outbuildings accompany the house (see site location map). A spring mound and house are in close proximity to the northeast (see photo 8), and a board-and-batten cattle barn and storage shed are to the far southeast (see photo 6). There is also a log crib with half-dovetail notching (see photo 7), and other outbuildings, all of frame construction, include a carriage house, a hen house, a laundry house, a wood house, a privy, and several storage sheds. All components of the complex are in either good or fair condition.

The nomination involves a rectangular lot of ten acres to include all the outbuildings. The house and its appurtenances have a pleasant setting on a gently rolling knoll, and many mature trees--mostly maples, surround the residence. The lawn of the house is bordered by plank fencing.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Reverend William Dudley Moore House, located four miles south of Lawrenceburg in rural Anderson County, was the lifelong home of the county's most well-known and most-beloved minister. During his long career spanning half a century, Brother Moore, as he chose to be called, performed 928 marriages, 1400 funerals, and over 1,000 baptisms.

Architecturally, the Reverend Moore House is notable in being a frame "I" house-with-ell, unaltered since 1900. Along with the house is an amazingly intact complex of eleven outbuildings, all frame and all apparently of no later construction than 1900.

Dudley Moore was born on June 9, 1856 on the farm in rural Anderson County where he spent his entire life. He was the only son of Hamilton G. Moore and Lucy Ann Search Moore. Both of his parents were descendants of Revolutionary soldier of Anderson County, his father being a grandson of Daniel Plough and his mother was a great-granddaughter of Richard Searcy. His father, who died in 1857, was a veteran of the Mexican War and saw action at Buena Vista (Forest Shely, His Leaf Shall Not Wither, p.1; Lewis McKee, A History of Anderson County, p. 83).

The Moore farm was acquired by his grandmother, Sallie Morton Searcy, and his mother, Lucy Ann Searcy, in 1849 from the Thomas McCall heirs (Anderson County Deed Book G, pp. 368-369). The two-story frame "I" house was constructed ca. 1848-50, and it is uncertain whether it was built by the McCall or Searcy family.

Young Moore received his education at the one-room rural school close to his home and later at the Lawrenceburg Seminary. After completion of his studies at the Lawrenceburg Seminary, he attended Georgetown College in Kentucky (Shely, p. 1).

In 1886, after several years of supply preaching, he made his decision to devote his life to the ministry, and in May of the same year was ordained at the Salvisa Baptist Church in Anderson County. For the next forty-nine years Brother Moore served as minister in several local Anderson, Jessamine, and Mercer County churches, including over thirty years at both Old Goshen Church and Shawnee Run Church (Ibid., pp. 2-3).

During his many years as a minister, Reverend Moore became a well-known figure to the citizens of Anderson County, officiating at countless baptisms, marriages, and funerals. Many a young couple were married in the parlor of his house which Brother Moore aptly called the "Marrying Room."

In addition to his religious career, Brother Moore also served as Superintendent of Anderson County Schools from 1891 to 1901 (Ibid., p. 6).

Reverend Moore left an indelible mark on Anderson County. Following his death in 1935, approximately 4,000 people attended his funeral held at the old farmhouse (Anderson News, August 8, 1935, p. 1). So great was the people's affection and esteem for Brother Moore that half the population of Anderson County came to his funeral (Kentucky Department of Commerce, Kentucky Deskbook of Economic Statistics, p. 3). It was said that his was the largest funeral ever held in the county.

The frame house holds architectural interest in being an unaltered frame "I" house-with-ell. The only modern convenience is electricity installed in the 1960s. Plumbing has never been provided.

In 1900, a second level was added to the ell, a frame room was built at the southeast corner of the house, and all rooms excepting the parlors were clapboarded on their interiors. The farm includes eleven frame outbuildings, none of which appear to be later than 1900. Among the outbuildings is a log crib, and two board-and-batten farm buildings. The house and its appurtenances combine to represent a self-sufficient farm--an entity capable of providing all its daily needs.
