DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Hampton-Pinckney Historic District comprises some forty-seven structures dating primarily from the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The district, one of the city of Greenville's oldest existing residential neighborhoods, also contains three church structures.

The historic district includes most of a two block area of Hampton Avenue from Butler to Lloyd Street. All of the structures located on Pinckney Street from Butler to Lloyd, with the exception of a modern office building on the corner of Pinckney and Butler, are included within the district. 213 Butler, which is located on the corner of Pinckney is also included.

Although the area is surrounded by commercial and low income housing, the district is intact with no modern or commercial intrusions. The tree-lined streets still reflect the atmosphere of the early 1900s and shield the district from the surrounding areas. Due to the efforts of the city of Greenville's Community Development Program, each of the houses has recently been brought up to meet housing standards, and a process of area revitalization has begun. The city has designated this area as the Hampton-Pinckney Restoration Area, and a neighborhood association has been formed.

Structures within the historic district include:

1. J. M. Geer House (309 Hampton Avenue). Constructed ca. 1894 by J. M. Geer. In 1898 sold to G. Heyward, mayor of Greenville. 2½-story structure features turret with conical roof, 1-story porch and 2nd story balcony. The Queen Anne style house has been covered with asbestos shingles and turned wooden columns replaced with wrought iron.
2. Ragsdale House (321 Hampton Avenue). Constructed ca. 1890 on property owned by T. Q. Donaldson. Purchased by John Ragsdale in 1907 and is today owned by his daughter. 2½-story frame structure in Queen Anne style with a 1-story porch on two sides. Other features include many gables with imbricated shingles, 2-story octagonal bay, and 2/2 windows with blinds.
3. Matoon Presbyterian Church (415 Hampton Avenue). Constructed 1887. 2-story handmade brick structure is the oldest black church building remaining in Greenville. The sanctuary is located on the second floor; ground floor houses children's day care center (originally housed parochial school, grades 1-9). Front entrance is double door with transom surmounted by hood with brackets and gingerbread frieze. Front facade features 3 windows: central window is tripartite with fan motif; 2 smaller windows on either side have hooded fan-light. Walls are supported by buttresses.
4. F. B. McBee House (402 Hampton Avenue). 2-story Italianate-style frame structure was home of Frank Butler McBee, Vardry McBee's grandson. House features a center front gable and bracketed cornices with dentil detailing. Pedimented windows are 6/6. Doorway has transom and sidelights. Existing 1-story porch is not original.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Hampton-Pinckney Historic District is one of the oldest existing residential neighborhoods in Greenville, South Carolina. Architecturally it is representative of various styles and stages in Greenville's development. Historically it is an area in which prominent local community leaders have lived. The area, designated a Restoration Area by the city of Greenville and the recipient of Community Development Funds, is today experiencing a period of revitalization.

Around 1815-1816 Lemuel Alston sold over 11,000 acres of land to Vardry McBee, Sr. From this transaction the area which today comprises the city of Greenville, with the exception of a few lots, became the property of a man who was to play a significant role in the city's development. Called by some the "Father of Greenville," Vardry McBee was involved in all aspects of community life--industry, commerce, agriculture, education, and religion. Before his death McBee sold or donated most of his property. The remainder of the McBee estate passed to his son, W. P. McBee (who lived at 21 Pinckney Street).

The W. P. McBee estate was divided among his four children, Frank Butler McBee (402 Hampton), Vardry Echols McBee, Malinda P. Landrum (314 Hampton), and Loula M. Briggs (326 Hampton). They sold the property in lots to create this early subdivision in Greenville.

Architecture: The Hampton-Pinckney Historic District reflects several stages in the architectural growth of Greenville. With the exception of the W. P. McBee House (ca. 1835) development first began on Hampton Avenue around 1890. The introduction of Victorian architecture can be traced from its origin in earlier styles (such as the Greek Revival of the W. P. McBee house) to the development into several vernacular styles (such as the Queen Anne of the Geer House (1) and the Italianate of the F. B. McBee house (4)). The second stage of development on Hampton Avenue occurred from 1900 to 1910. Eclectic architecture was dominant then and is exemplified in the Prairie Style of the Gallivan and Briggs houses (7,5), and the Neo-Georgian Style of the Landrum House (6) (remodeled in 1910).

Development on Pinckney Street did not begin until after 1902 and its major period of growth occurred from 1904 to 1915. Eclectic architecture again being in vogue, new building materials were incorporated such as red and tan bricks, and red tile roofs. Traditional architectural features such as 2/2 windows, delicate porches,

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

The southern boundary begins at 309 Hampton Avenue and extends northwest, following property lines along Hampton Avenue to Lloyd St. From this point, it runs northeast along Lloyd St. to the north side of Pinckney St. From there, it follows the property lines behind those houses fronting on Pinckney Street to No. 6 Pinckney. The boundary then passes on the east side of No. 6 Pinckney and south around 213 Butler Avenue. It then passes south along the east side of 308 Hampton Avenue and across the street to 309 Hampton.

5. Briggs House (326 Hampton Avenue). Constructed ca. 1905. Originally home of Loula M. Briggs (Vardry McBee's granddaughter) and Henry Briggs (mayor of Greenville). 2½-story Prairie-style tan brick structure features lead mullion and cut glass windows, brick quoins, bracketed cornices, 1-story porch with entrance pavillion and porte-cochere. Interior is completely intact with gas chandeliers and porcelain bathroom fixtures. Smoke house, carriage house and barn are also located on property.
6. Landrum House (314 Hampton Avenue). Constructed ca. 1890 by Chevis Montgomery Landrum and Malinda P. Landrum (granddaughter of Vardry McBee, Sr. and sister of Loula M. Briggs). Remodeled in 1910. This 1½-story Neo-Georgian Revival structure features gambrel roof, bay window, large central dormer with decorative fan over tripartite window. Front entrance characterized by pilasters and semicircular fanlight. 1-story porch with grouped ionic columns on brick pedestals.
7. Gallivan House (308 Hampton Avenue). Constructed ca. 1904-1909 by James Gallivan, an engineer. When purchased in 1960 by Andrew Bywnn Chapter of Knights of Columbus, 2nd floor converted into ballroom; however, present owners are in process of re-constructing original floorplan. 2½-story Prairie-style brick structure features octagonal bays, gable with palladian window, bracketed cornice, brick quoins, and a 1-story porch on two sides.
8. Rickman House (17 Pinckney Street). Constructed 1908 by J. P. Rickman, bank president. 17 room Neo-Georgian frame structure features gambrel roof, portecochere, multi-paned windows, 1-story porch on 3 sides with corner gazebo and clustered columns.
9. W. P. McBee House (21 Pinckney Street). Constructed ca. 1835 in Greek revival style by W. P. McBee, son of Vardry McBee, Sr. Extensive alterations over years include rooms on 2nd floor, the front porch, lowered ceilings, and covered floors.
10. Paul Hayne Houston House (26 Pinckney Street). Constructed ca. 1904 by Paul Hayne Houston of Charleston. 2-story frame structure features bay window, 1-story porch with pediment, and boxed cornices.

and gabled roofs were replaced with multi-paned windows, wide porches with coupled columns, portecocheres, hipped roofs, and shed dormers. Architectural development on Pinckney Street continued through the mid 1940s with the introduction of the Bungalow and Neo-Classical Revival Styles.

Equally significant are the interiors of the houses. Many of them have remained intact and house such features as mahogany woodwork, gas chandeliers, stained and beveled glass, and porcelain bathroom fixtures.

EDUCATION/RELIGION/BLACK HISTORY: There are three churches located in the historic district: Central Baptist (1904), Bible Presbyterian (1919), and Matoon Church (1887).

Matoon Church is the oldest remaining black church building in Greenville. Organized in 1878 the church structure was erected in 1887 and is still in use today. The ground floor of the church was originally used to house a parochial school, grades 1-9. According to community leaders, the school at Matoon Church played a significant role in the cultural life of blacks in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Around 1929 the Board of Missions discontinued the program. Today a children's day care center operates here.

POLITICS/GOVERNMENT: The influence of those who lived in the Hampton-Pinckney Historic District on the politics and government of Greenville was evident from the time of Vardry McBee, Sr. through the 1920s. Heyward Mahon (309 Hampton Avenue) and Henry Briggs (326 Hampton Avenue) both served as mayor of Greenville during the early 1900s. T. Q. Donaldson who owned property in the area served as state senator from 1872-1876.
