

Seaplane ramp no. 1 which leads into Kaneohe Bay. Former Kaneohe Naval Air Station is now a Marine Corps air station.

Hangar No. 1 in foreground and a portion of the aircraft parking area, Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station. A Japanese bomb set the hangar on fire, December 7, 1941. All the naval amphibian aircraft on the ground were damaged or destroyed.

Interior of Hangar No. 1 from the aircraft parking area,
Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station.

Burnt-out Hangar No. 1, Kaneohe Naval Air Station.
Cleanup activities already underway.

Aerial of Kaneohe Naval Air Station following the Japanese attack. Hangar No. 1, at top of photo, was burned out. The small structure immediately below it was later replaced with Hangar No. 2. Hangar No. 3 appears not to have been damaged. Hangar No. 4, at the bottom of the photo, was still under construction.