National Register of Historic Places Registration Form

This form is for use in nominating or requesting determinations for individual properties and districts. See instructions in How to Complete the National Register of Historic Places Registration Form (National Register Bulletin 16A). Complete each item by marking "x" in the appropriate box or by entering the information requested. If any item does not apply to the property being documented, enter "N/A" for "not applicable." For functions, architectural classification, materials, and areas of significance, enter only categories and subcategories from the instructions. Place additional entries and narrative items on continuation sheets (NPS Form 10-900a). Use a typewriter, word processor, or computer, to complete all items.

Historic Residential Suburbs in the

7. Description

The Park Hills Historic District (Photos 1-35; Figs. 1-6) consists of a mid-nineteenth- to mid-twentieth-century largely residential concentration of 243 acres located northwest of the Dixie Highway (U. S. Routes 25, 42, and 127) within the city of Park Hills, in Kenton County, Kentucky. Park Hills lies in northern Kentucky immediately south of Covington, which is on the Ohio River opposite Cincinnati. The district contains a total of 719 resources, nearly all of which are single-family residences. The single-family houses are joined by some original duplexes, one church, and two suburban trolley waiting stations. With respect to the resource count which appears in Section 5, smaller dependencies, such as sheds and a diversity of small garages, are treated as uncounted landscape features. The district's various public roadways and the masonry retaining walls found throughout the district's rolling terrain are each counted collectively as two contributing structures (KEPH-747 and KEPH-748, respectively); two pairs of stone entry portals (KEPH-745 and KEPH-746) are counted as four contributing structures. A small lake (KEPH-742) behind properties facing Cleveland Avenue at the north end of the boulevarded Park Drive is counted as a contributing site and the boulevard itself (KEPH-741) as a contributing structure. Scattered throughout the district are 36 vacant lots, none of which have ever been built upon; these are treated as contributing sites within the context of the district as a whole. Of the 719 resources in the district, 599 (83%) contribute to the character of the district and 120 (17%) are non-contributing. Most noncontributing properties are so designated because they post-date the period of significance; only a few historic properties have been insensitively altered to the extent that they no longer retain sufficient integrity to be considered contributing. Approximately 90% of the properties in the district were built between the mid-1920s and 1950.

The district as a whole retains integrity in all of its composite qualities and stands as a strong, physically-cohesive concentration of individual buildings, generally of identical historic and current function, located within a geographical area whose boundaries can be readily defined by the character of the properties found within. The installation of non-historic siding or replacement window units does not necessarily preclude a property's being deemed contributing within the character of the district. When major alterations to the fenestration are evident or when major significant changes to the surface texture have occurred (e. g., the installation of perma-stone or its equivalent), or when a major non-historic addition has been constructed on a principal elevation, an evaluation of "non-contributing" is rendered. Such has occurred only in fourteen instances in the Park Hills Historic District. Integrity is most closely evaluated according to National Register Bulletin No. 15, How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation, which states that integrity remains "if the significant form, features, and detailing are not obscured." The test of integrity also relies to a degree on the standard argument which poses the question, "If individuals from the past were to return and view the property, would they recognize it?"

The district is confined to that portion of Park Hills between the City of Covington's Devou Park on the north and northwest, additional portions of Covington on the east, the commercial area along the Dixie Highway on the southeast, and Sleepy Hollow Road, the municipal boundary between Park Hills and Ft. Wright on the west. The section of the city lying southeast of the Dixie Highway is not included within this district.

since the Dixie Highway consists exclusively of non-historic properties and constitutes such a clear and definable boundary; the eligibility of that portion of Park Hills southeast of the Dixie Highway has not been determined by the SHPO.¹

The area that would become Park Hills lay along the Covington-Lexington Turnpike, which is discussed more fully in Section 8. However, the pre-development physical appearance of the nominated area was likely wooded and essentially undeveloped due to the steep terrain. A historic atlas indicates that a scattering of buildings lay along the turnpike and a few homes existed both to the northwest and southeast; no historic images of the area have been found.

The Park Hills Historic District consists of a series of interconnected residential streets, some of which intersect the Dixie Highway, which, as noted above, is a major commercial thoroughfare which bisects the city and is not included within the nominated area. The streets in the district lie northwest of the Dixie Highway and meander in a picturesque manner through the undulating terrain of the community. Included within the district are St. James Avenue, Arlington Road, Aberdeen Road, Old State Road, Hamilton Road, Terrace Drive, Amsterdam Road, Altavia Avenue, Alhambra Court, Coram Street, Emerson and Lawton Roads, Rose Circle, Audubon Road, Park Drive, Jackson Road, Breckenridge and Emerson Roads, Parkvale and Morgan Courts, Cleveland Avenue, Terrace and Park Drives, Locust Street, and Sleepy Hollow Road. Parkcrest Lane, a comparatively new street, contains a series of 1970s-1980s condominiums which by far constitute the district's largest concentration of non-contributing resources; they are clustered on a single parcel and do not materially detract from the district's otherwise strong integrity and little-altered historic character.

Rights-of-way vary throughout the district. Park Drive enjoys a 150' right-of-way at its intersection with Amsterdam Road; this expanse accommodates a landscaped boulevard (KEPH—; Fig. 4), providing an impressive entrance to that portion of the district which is characterized by significantly larger lots and more substantial homes than are found elsewhere in the district, where rights-of-way are forty to fifty feet in width.

The Park Hills Historic District is laid out in an irregular pattern, and lacks the rectilinear grid appearance which characterizes many neighborhoods. Instead, the district embraces the rambling character of the picturesque residential suburban subdivisions of the 1920s. The streets are platted without alleys, all are paved, and most have concrete curbs and sidewalks. Parking is permitted on most streets and street lighting employs cobra-head devices mounted on wooden poles with overhead wiring. A small lake (KEPH-742), less than two acres in area, is at the head of Park Drive, characteristic of the planned picturesque character of this residential suburb.

¹The area southeast of the Dixie Highway outside the proposed district includes the campus of two parochial schools and a residential neighborhood dating from the 1930s and after. The proposed Park Hills Historic District was the focus of a SHPO- and City-sponsored intensive-level cultural resource survey in 2007; the area southeast of the Dixie Highway has not undergone such an evaluation.

As with the rights-of-way in the Park Hills Historic District, the dimensions of the building lots vary widely. Some of the estate-scale homes along streets such as Park Drive, Cleveland Avenue, and Emerson Road occupy significantly larger tracts than do the cottages and other small houses along streets such as Aberdeen Road, Old State Road, Altavia Avenue, and St. James Road. The cottages and American Foursquares along St. James Road, for instance, have lot dimensions of 50' × 140'. Likewise, lot frontages range upwards from 40' and depths from 100' to both frontages and depths of hundreds of feet. Some of the original lots in the district have been combined and otherwise subdivided over the decades since the area was first platted, but these changes generally have occurred within the period of significance.

The Park Hills Historic District is densely built-up with very few vacant lots. Those parcels which are vacant typically occupy hillside sites and are overgrown. On nearly every street, houses exhibit a similar front yard setback. Vegetation in the district consists of lawns, mature deciduous and evergreen trees, and domestic landscaping of a nearly universal high caliber.

The topography of the Park Hills Historic District is characterized by rolling, sometimes steep, terrain throughout. The district rises significantly from the northern edge, at the foot of Montague Road at the Park Hills-Covington city line, to the area of Emerson Road, near Devou Park. In The Green Line: The Cincinnati, Covington, and Newport Railway, authors Terry Lehman and Earl Clark noted that the Green Line traversed a 3,500' 6.5 percent grade in its climb along Arlington Road from Covington to Park Hills (Fig. 3).²

In addition to the hundreds of residences in the district, one church and a former waiting station for the trolley are along Amsterdam Road, and the former Park Hills Elementary School (non-contributing because of alterations) is at the east end of Old State Road. The vast majority of buildings in the Park Hills Historic District are 1½ to two stories in height. Many are of balloon frame construction and are veneered in brick, while others are of solid masonry construction and are finished in brick, stucco, and half-timbering, and occasionally are trimmed in stone. The earliest foundations are of stone, primarily found in that section of the district at the east end of Amsterdam Road, in the nineteenth-century Amsterdam neighborhood. Most twentieth-century foundations within the district are of poured concrete, finished smooth; a small percentage are of rock-faced concrete block. Roof forms are divided evenly between gabled, hipped, and pyramidal; both front-facing and laterally-oriented gable roofs appear. Dutch Colonial Revival-style homes have the distinctive gambrel roof which typifies the style. Roof cladding is nearly exclusively of asphalt shingles, although a few tile roofs are found within the district and a fewer number of roofs are finished in slate. The flat-topped window form is favored throughout the district, with one-over-one or multi-light sash; some Tudor Revival-style houses employ casement windows.

The properties in the Park Hills Historic District represent a variety of styles of design, spanning the decades which correspond to the Period of Significance. Some buildings reflect vernacular³ adaptations of formal styles and others were erected without reference to any particular architectural style. Some of these vernacular properties are unadorned cottages and other representatives of the 1920s “small house” movement discussed in Section 8, while others borrow minimally from the form and finish of more formally-designed domestic architecture, such as the stylized half-timbered finishes which hint at the Tudor Revival style but which are applied to the pediment of a porch of an otherwise undistinguished cottage. While the work of no specific architect has been identified in Park Hills, the sophistication of design in many of the homes, notable those along Park Drive, Cleveland Avenue, and Emerson Road, is indicative of the obvious formal training of their designers.

Most of the homes in the district are single-family residences. Interspersed with these are duplexes which, along with a variety of repetitive house types, suggest a healthy tradition of speculative building early in the district’s history, led by the speculative initiatives of the original developers themselves.

The earliest section of the district, dating from the middle decades of the nineteenth century, is found in the area of lower Amsterdam Road southwest of Montague Road, along the Park Hills-Covington municipal boundary. This area, which developed as the unincorporated village of Amsterdam, appears as a separate community in the D. J. Lake 1883 Atlas of Boone, Kenton, and Campbell Counties, Kentucky⁴ and was eventually absorbed into the City of Park Hills. It consists of nineteenth-century houses built only on the northwest side of Amsterdam Road; the opposite side of the street is vacant due to the rugged and sloping terrain. Here are several early brick and wood houses, including one with an Eastlake-style double-gallery porch on the facade, and an Italianate-style brick house, also with a double-gallery porch.

Another nineteenth-century section in the district is found along Old State Road, which predates the twentieth-century development of the majority of the district. Several vernacular houses are found along this portion of Old State Road, interspersed with domestic architecture dating from the 1920s and 1930s.

Chronologically, the style which first appears in significant numbers in Park Hills is the Colonial Revival style, born of the fervor of patriotism in the wake of the Centennial of 1876 and in full swing when Park Hills was first formally platted in the 1920s. Within the Park Hills Historic District, this style employs—with varying degrees of faithfulness—the form and detail of eighteenth-century domestic design, and incorporates both the side-passage and central-passage form, enriched by embellishments such as multi-light flat-topped windows, sometimes with jack-arch lintels, porticos, exterior shutters, and frontispiece entrances. Examples of Colonial Revival design in the district include:⁵

| 1110 Old State Road (KEPH-189) | 1049 Altavia Avenue (KEPH-288) |

| 1165 Hamilton Road (KEPH-209) | |

The Dutch Colonial Revival follows most of the other design tenets of the Colonial Revival but universally includes the gambrel roof form. Dutch Colonial Revival-style properties in Park Hills include:

|--------------------------------|------------------------------|
| 818 St. James Avenue (KEPH-23) | 1124 Audubon Road (KEPH-512) |
| 840 St. James Avenue (KEPH-33) | 1114 Park Drive (KEPH-521) |

| 1007 Rose Circle (KEPH-438) | 1091 Emerson Road (KEPH-639) |

Cape Cod-style houses represent another variant of the Colonial Revival style. This design mode developed in the 1930s and after, drawing its inspiration from eighteenth-century house forms from colonial-era Massachusetts. 1½ stories in height, Cape Cod-style houses typically have a laterally-oriented gable roof, a symmetrically-massed facade, and dormers along the slope of the roof. In the Park Hills Historic District, the Cape Cod house is seen at:

|--------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 827 Aberdeen Drive (KEPH-104) | 1151 Hamilton Road (KEPH-206) |
| 1322 Old State Road (KEPH-164) | 1012 Altavia Avenue (KEPH-319) |

| 1049 Hamilton Road (KEPH-200) | 1057 Montague Road (KEPH-603) |

The Tudor Revival style gained popularity early in the early years of the twentieth century and employed the form and finishes of English Renaissance buildings of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Chief among these is the decorative--rather than structural--half-timbered finish, which appears on Tudor Revival-style homes both in large expanses of wall surfaces and in the pediments of gable ends. Some half-timbering is rectilinear, while other examples are curvilinear. Among the most popular styles in the Park Hills Historic District, the Tudor Revival style is seen in small cottages with half-timber-finished porches as well as in estate-scale domestic architecture which is generally 2½ stories in height, considerably larger in scale than the small houses of the same period, more elaborately detailed, and set on considerably larger parcels. Examples include:

The Park Hills Historic District was formally platted in the 1920s, by which time the popularity of the Craftsman style was in full bloom. Among the strongest influences of this style was the English Arts-and-Crafts movement. At the same time, the “small house” movement developed--“small” being defined as a house of six or fewer rooms—and “alliances formed among architects, real estate developers, builders, social reformers, manufacturers, and public officials to encourage home ownership, standardized home building practices, and neighborhood improvements.”⁶ The Craftsman style and the small house movement of the 1920s are represented by:

|--------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 831 Arlington Road (KEPH-81) | 1074 Altavia Avenue (KEPH-300) |
| 1135 Old State Road (KEPH-127) | 918 Terrace Drive (KEPH-330) |
| 1328 Old State Road (KEPH-162) | 844 Alhambra Court (KEPH-339) |

| 1039 Hamilton Road (KEPH-197) | 1107 Audubon Road (KEPH-456) |
| 1051 Altavia Avenue (KEPH-289) | |

Bungalows were erected throughout the district in the 1920s and 1930s, typically of brick construction, with a laterally-oriented gable roof, a dormer on the facade, and a recessed front porch. Bungalows include the houses at:

Appearing concomitant with Bungalows and Craftsman cottages, American Foursquares became the most ubiquitous house type built in America in the two decades after World War One. More of a house form than an architectural style, Foursquares typically exhibit a hipped- or pyramidal-roofed, blocky form, a full front porch, and dormers on the slopes of the roofs. In the Park Hills Historic District, Foursquares are seen both in modest form and in houses of a more pretentious scale and level of design sophistication. Representative examples include:

|---|------------------------------|
| 806 St. James Avenue (KEPH-17) | 900 Terrace Drive (KEPH-388) |
| 844 St. James Avenue (KEPH-35) | 1008 Lawton Road (KEPH-420) |
| 842-844 Arlington Road [double] (KEPH-88) | 1012 Rose Circle (KEPH-445) |
| 1070 Altavia Avenue (KEPH-301) | 1068 Jackson Road (KEPH-545) |

Extending into the mid-1950s, the Period of Significance of the Park Hills Historic district embraces the earliest years of the popularity of the Ranch style. A modern mode born in California in the 1930s, the Ranch style reached its pinnacle of popularity in the 1950s and 1960s. Incorporating an elongated single-story form with sparse detailing and either hipped or side-gable roofs, the appearance of the Ranch style in the Park Hills Historic District marks the waning of the district's Period of Significance and continues beyond the period of Significance into the 1960s, and includes the following houses dating from within the Period of Significance:

|-------------------------------|------------------------------|
| 1147 Hamilton Road (KEPH-204) | 1034 Lawton Road (KEPH-408) |
| 916 Alhambra Court (KEPH-355) | 1238 Audubon Road (KEPH-490) |
| 1072 Lawton Road (KEPH-401) | |

The buildings in the Park Hills Historic District are generally in good to excellent condition. The appearance of only a few properties suggests deferred maintenance, and in no case has the deteriorated condition of an individual property rendered it noncontributing to the character of the district as a whole. Alterations to the buildings in the district include the application on non-historic siding (principally vinyl), the replacement of original porch supports, and the replacement of historic window sash with new units. Some buildings exhibit additions to the rear elevations, and a very few others have additions on side elevations. Alterations to properties within the district do not occur in any significant concentration and fail to detract from the district's ability to convey its overall historic appearance during the period of significance.

Summarizing, the predominate character of the Park Hills Historic District is that of a 1920s-1950s northern Kentucky residential suburb containing modestly-detailed and -proportioned domestic architecture, along with substantial estate-scale homes, executed in wood frame and brick, and representing a variety of the architectural styles popular throughout the 1924-1957 period of significance.

The following Resource Inventory is arranged in a spreadsheet format and describes the properties found within the Park Hills Historic District. Dates of construction which appear with a range are approximate; the range corresponds to that employed by the survey system of the Kentucky Heritage Council (the SHPO); other dates were taken from the records of the Kenton County Property Value Administrator. Under the evaluation column, properties considered to be contributing to the character of the district are coded "C," while those coded "NC" are non-contributing, either because they date from outside the period of significance of the district or because their integrity has been compromised by insensitive alterations. The Inventory numbers (each preceded by "KE-PH," indicating Kenton County/Park Hills and also associated with the SHPO survey system) are keyed to the map accompanying the nomination. The first survey number in the inventory is KE-PH-11, since survey sites KE-PH-1 through KE-PH-10 were outside the district boundaries.

Contained within this document on Continuation Sheets is an abbreviated inventory including the resource number, the evaluation of each property, its address, the original and current function of each, and the estimated and documented date of construction. 8. Significance

Overview

The Park Hills Historic District is significant both architecturally and for its reflection of the pattern of community planning and development in northern Kentucky beginning in the 1920s. It meets National Register Criterion A for community planning and development as a Picturesque planned residential suburb, laid out with land use, building, cost-of-construction, and utility restrictions, and setback requirements, and actively marketed by its developers beginning in 1924. “The Picturesque suburb [of which Park Hills is an example] with its plat of curvilinear streets and roads, the product of the Romantic landscape movement, became the means by which upper-income city dwellers sought to satisfy their aspiration for a suburban home within commuting distance of the city.”⁷ The district is also significant architecturally and meets National Register Criterion C since it consists of a dense concentration of properties representing a variety of the architectural styles popular during the period of significance. The Period of Significance of the district begins in 1924, marking the platting of the Park Hills Subdivision and ends c. 1957, the estimated date of construction of the most recently-constructed of the district’s historic buildings (typified by the Ranch-style houses at 1218 and 1154 Breckenridge Drive (KEPH-613 and 618, respectively), dating from 1957.

Park Hills Historic District Meets the Registration Requirements for Historic Suburb

The Park Hills Historic District is a composite example of Property Types II and III, as described in Section II, pages 54-55 of the National Register Multiple Property Submission, “Historic Residential Suburbs in the United States, 1830-1960;” these are Streetcar Suburbs, 1888-1928 and Early Automobile Suburbs, 1908 to 1945.

The aforementioned National Register Bulletin notes

Railroad suburbs [beginning as early as the 1830s] offered the upper and upper-middle classes an escape from the city and what historian John Stilgoe has called the “borderland,” where the rural countryside and the city, with its modern amenities, merged. . . The introduction of the first electric-powered streetcar system ushered in a new period of suburbanization. The electric streetcar, or trolley, allowed people to travel in 10 minutes as far as they could walk in 30 minutes. . . In many places, the development of real estate closely followed the introduction of streetcar lines.⁸

While streetcar usage nationally peaked in 1923—the year before the formal platting of Park Hills—and declined thereafter, the usage of the streetcar was alive and well in the suburban hills south of Covington for nearly two more decades. The Green Line, discussed in more detail below, traversed the new community as it made its way south from Covington to Ft. Wright, irrefutably contributed in an intimate fashion to the growth and development of Park Hills throughout its first decades.

With the arrival of the automobile early in the twentieth century personalized travel and commuting became a reality. Henry Ford's Model-T debuted in 1908, and "the rapid adoption of the mass-produced automobile by Americans led to the creation of the automobile-oriented suburb of single-family houses on spacious lots that has become the quintessential American landscape of the twentieth century."⁹ Park Hills, with its street after street of 1920s and 1930s homes with attached and basement garages, along with detached garages at the end of driveways, clearly reflects the growth of the early automobile suburb.

The Park Hills Historic District meets the registration requirements set forth in the aforementioned National Register Bulletin focused upon historic residential suburbs. Under Criterion A, the district employs "conventions of community planning important in the history of suburbanization, such as zoning, deed restrictions, or subdivision regulations."¹⁰ The representative deeds cited herein substantiate the presence of these conventions within Park Hills.

The Bulletin continues:

A movement for the design of cohesive suburban neighborhoods in the form of residential parks and garden suburbs began to emerge in the 1890s and continued into the early decades of the twentieth century. A general plan of development, specifications and standards, and the use of deed restrictions became essential elements used by developers and designers to control house design, ensure quality, and create spatial organization suitable for fine homes in a park setting.¹¹

Clearly, the Park Hills Historic District is the embodiment of this movement.

With further reference to Criterion A, the MPS states in Section F, Page 59 that areas satisfy this Criterion if they meet one of several threshold conditions, among which are: "the neighborhood reflects an important historic trend in the development and growth of a locality or metropolitan area" and "the suburb introduced conventions of community planning important in the history of suburbanization, such as zoning, deed restrictions, or subdivision regulations." Both are true for Park Hills.

With reference to Criterion C, the district meets the registration requirements since it consists of a "collection of residential architecture [that] is an important example of a distinctive period of construction."¹² Virtually every street in the district contains properties which represent a distinctive period of construction and which reflect the stylistic preferences in domestic design throughout the period of significance. This architecture represents the change in favor from the era of mid-Victorian design to design, including the socially-engineered design of the “small house” movement, embodying the technological modernity of the twentieth century, complete with planned—as opposed to added—electrical service, indoor plumbing, and attached and integral basement garages.

The MPS continues in Section F, Page 60, that Criterion C registration applies if the “collection of residential architecture is an important example of distinctive period of construction, method of construction . . .,” or the “subdivision embodies high artistic values through its overall plan or the design of entranceways, streets, homes, and community spaces.” Clearly this is true for Park Hills as well.

With reference to the integrity of the district, the test of integrity set forth in the previously-cited National Register Bulletin is met by this district in that it “retains the spatial organization, physical components, aspects of design, and historic associations that it acquired during the period of significance.”¹³ Except for a cluster of 1970s condominiums in the center of the district and a multi-tenant complex along Amsterdam Road, the Park Hills Historic District retains its overall historic appearance, as most historic resources are little altered from the original and retain an unusually high integrity of location, materials, setting, association, workmanship, design, and feeling.

History of Park Hills

The area of Kenton County that would eventually become Park Hills was little developed throughout the entire nineteenth century. One year following Kentucky statehood, the legislature enacted provisions to authorize the clearing of a road from Frankfort to Cincinnati. This road generally followed a considerably older trail which ran along Dry Ridge and became known as George Town Road. Travelers early in the nineteenth century reported that not a single town lay between Covington and Georgetown.¹⁴ Following this older trail, the Covington and Lexington Turnpike became a nineteenth-century toll road, which led southwesterly out of Covington toward Lexington and traversed the area that would eventually be settled as Park Hills. The aforementioned 1880s atlas indicates that the area was part of Kenton County Magisterial District No. 1, depicted as only sparsely settled, primarily along the turnpike and along the state road (now Old State Road), north of the turnpike (Fig. 1). The atlas map also shows a quarry between the two roads and a scattering of houses along what is today Sleepy Hollow Road, the historic district’s western boundary; a few nineteenth-century homes remain along Old State Road; none survive along Sleepy Hollow Road. A 1940 newspaper clipping¹⁵ confirms the presence of this quarry and one other. In the mid-nineteenth century, in the area of Jackson Road and Rose Circle, a lime kiln was fired from rock quarried from the adjacent hills. In addition, Rufus Light operated a clay quarry from which he extracted material to be sold to Cincinnati’s renowned Rookwood Pottery and for years the Light family also marketed molding sand from their property on present-day Breckenridge Road.

¹⁵A dearth of information exists about the history of the community. Mrs. Richard Udry prepared a presentation for the Fort Mitchell Homemakers’ Club about Park Hills; portions of her presentation were published as “Story of Park Hills” and appeared in a local newspaper, the Cincinnati Post of August 8, 1940.

Adjacent to the nominated area, the village of Amsterdam developed as a small settlement abutting Covington along Montague Avenue in the northern reaches of the district; present-day Amsterdam Road (originally Amsterdam Pike) leads uphill from that small neighborhood into the heart of Park Hills. The 1900 U. S. Geological Survey 15-minute quadrangle (Fig. 2) indicates little development in the area, which at that time remained rural and only lightly populated.

As Cincinnati grew, and, to a lesser extent, Covington and Newport as well, residents began to consider the attractiveness of suburban living. Completed in 1866, John Roebling's suspension bridge spanning the Ohio River provided the first dependable link between Cincinnati and northern Kentucky. Earlier trans-river conveyance had involved ferries, consistently plagued by high water, low water, or ice. Roebling's bridge changed all that and, to provide mass transportation, the Covington Street Railway was incorporated in 1864, as the bridge was under construction. Eventually becoming the Cincinnati, Covington, and Newport Railway, the line was christened the "Green" line because of the distinctive color of its rolling stock, to differentiate it from the orange equipment operated by the considerably larger Cincinnati Street Railway.

The major improvements to the former Covington-Lexington Turnpike were the brainchild of Cincinnati entrepreneur Clifford Shinkle. The president and one of the primary stockholders of the company that owned the Suspension Bridge, Shinkle was a leading proponent of the improvements to the old road and was likely responsible for the naming of the vastly-improved "Dixie Highway," which lead southward from Michigan to Florida. He was also instrumental in getting the highway routed along the old turnpike, passing through the area that would become Park Hills, through Covington, and across the Suspension Bridge into Cincinnati.

The first horse-drawn street railway cars crossed the new bridge in 1867; electrified cars began service to Covington in 1890. River towns such as Ludlow, Bellevue, Newport, and Dayton were also linked to Cincinnati, but among the greatest effects of the bridge and the birth of the local street railway system, was the opening to development of the high ground south of Covington.

With the financial success and maturity of the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway came the acquisition of "new streetcars by the scores"¹⁶ and by 1900, the Green Line had more than 52 miles of line in three counties and two states, including slightly more than 24 miles of track in Kenton County. Late in 1902, the Green Line's Lewisburg line was extended out Pike and Montague Streets in Covington in its trek toward Highland and St. Mary's cemeteries near Ft. Mitchell. At Montague Street, cars passed on to private right-of-way and climbed southward on a 6.5 percent grade (Fig. 3). Park Hills would be developed on the Green Line on both sides of the former Arlington Pike, including part of this steep grade, and streetcar transportation to and from Park Hills would make the new community even more accessible to Covington, Newport, and Cincinnati. Park Hills was served faithfully by the Green Line until 1950, when streetcar service to all of northern Kentucky came to an end.

Elsmere and Erlanger,¹⁷ south of Park Hills, were among the earlier suburbs to develop; both of these communities lay along the Cincinnati Southern Railroad. Erlanger was developed by a land syndicate which offered one year's free rail transportation to anyone buying a lot and building in the new community. Other communities grew up along the old turnpike, but it took the paving of the road in 1921 (likely financed through the Federal-Aid Highways Act of 1921), and its reincarnation as the Dixie Highway, to provide significant and sustained growth.

Much of the area that would become Park Hills was owned by the Light and Montague families; the naming of Montague Street reflects this early ownership.¹⁸ Other than some minor development along the Covington-Lexington Pike and along Old State Road, the area was essentially undeveloped, it being too hilly for agricultural use and, in pre-automobile days, too rugged for residential development as well. Early in the twentieth century, attorney Robert Simmons, who had grown up in the immediate area, and Edward Renz acquired a portion of the Light and Montague holdings and laid out a street now known as Audubon Road. The development of this single new street was not successful and the right-of-way was soon nearly overgrown with trees.

In 1922, Covington banker DeWitt Collins Lee, seeking a tract on which to build a new home for himself, acquired a parcel adjacent to Covington's Devou Park. The 576-acre park (eventually expanded to 704 acres) lay atop high ground overlooking the Ohio River and Cincinnati and had been presented to the city of Covington in 1910 by William J. Devou. The area was undeveloped and no city utilities were available to Lee's tract. Nonetheless, with an eye toward developing a residential subdivision, he began to acquire adjacent land, including a parcel retained by the Renz estate and another 75-acre tract. Lee and Robert Simmons, who had first laid out Audubon Road, became partners, operating as the Lee & Simmons Development Company.

D. Collins Lee (1888-1949) was a towering figure within the context of Park Hills history. While Robert Simmons was apparently an equal partner in the development company, Lee appears to have been the leader. A 1908 Centre College graduate, he was admitted to the Bar in 1911 and practiced in Covington until 1924, when he entered partnership with Simmons at Park Hills. From 1926 to 1933 he was Vice President and Trust Officer at the First National Bank of Covington, and he maintained his residence in Covington only until 1928, when, according to city directories, he built a house and moved to 1035 Emerson Road (KEPH-632), within the nominated area. Of the more than seven hundred homes built during the early years of the Park Hills development, Lee built more than two hundred as speculative ventures. He lived in the Emerson Road house until his death.¹⁹

Less is known about Robert Simmons. He was an attorney who had apparently been reared in the area, in a house built by his father on what would be come Amsterdam Road. City directories indicate that his law offices were in the First National Bank Building, home to the institution which his partner, D. Collins Lee, served as vice president. Simmons and his wife, Alma Lawton Simmons lived at 1300 Amsterdam Road on a large tract now occupied by a series of 1970s condominiums. Lawton Street, in the district, courses through the Simmons' former holdings and bears Alma Simmons' maiden name.

Returning to the developmental history of the city, Lee and Simmons continued to acquire parcels for development into residential lots, and in 1924 the company began to market these lots in a new subdivision known as Park Hills (Fig. 4). Audubon Road was among the first to be re-graded and paved; a water main was laid from Covington; and a storage facility was erected with the capacity to serve one hundred new homes. The lots along Audubon Road were completely sold before the infrastructure was completed; sale prices ranged upward from $15 per front foot. Rose Circle was next, and also sold out immediately. Robert Simmons built roads through his own property, including a tract which he had acquired decades before from Sarah Odgen Devou, the mother of the Devou Park benefactor. The Lee & Simmons Development Company maintained an office (not extant) in the heart of their development, at the southeast corner of Amsterdam Road and Park Drive.²⁰ The site was referred to as "Park Hills Plaza."²¹

A 1926 advertisement for Park Hills in the Cincinnati Post boasted of eight tennis courts, a riding club, an archery club and the "proposed" golf course--all at Devou Park but immediately adjacent to Park Hills, and clearly part of its allure. The advertisement continued, "How about those children of yours? Are they getting a fair chance? Hundreds of families have purchased in Park Hills for the health and happiness of their children." In 1927, a promotional brochure proclaimed that the new community possessed "the romance of outdoor life and the great open spaces of nature are things of permanence in Park Hills." The brochure added that the city was a "paradise" for children and young people and only a four minute streetcar ride to Covington and an eight minute ride to Cincinnati.²²

Sales throughout the development were brisk, and houses, large and small, soon were under construction. Lee and Simmons planned their development to assure that it would be as attractive and accessible as possible to buyers and new residents of diverse financial positions, even financing the sale of lots to newcomers. A typical transfer is that of a parcel on St. James Road, purchased by C. E. McAtee in 1928.²³ The boilerplate "fill-in-the-blank" deed stipulates that for a period of twenty-five years after the conveyance, the lot may be used for residential purposes only. Further, only one dwelling was permitted to be built on the lot and it was to have a minimum front-yard setback of thirty feet. No house could be erected at a cost of less than $6,000, and the plans for the house were subject to the review and approval of the Lee & Simmons Development Company. C. E. McAtee paid the developers a down payment and Lee & Simmons financed the balance of the sale price of the lot, $2,446.26 in this case, at the rate of 6%.

St. James Road and many of the district's other streets consist of small building lots, while streets such as Park Drive, Cleveland Avenue, and Emerson and Breckenridge Roads consist of substantially larger tracts. In the case of a lot sold in 1925 at the corner of Jackson Road and Cleveland Avenue, the setback was forty-five feet, provisions were made for a garage (the only outbuilding permitted on the lot), but it had to be of the same construction as the house, and the minimum construction cost was $12,000.²⁴

The popularity of the community grew steadily. The first meeting of a town council was held on June 13, 1926 at the residence of Dr. R. M. Rankin on Audubon Road. The following year, the community was incorporated as a city with a population of about 500. By 1930, the population had more than doubled, reaching 1,275, rising to 1,615 in 1940 and 2,577 in 1950. The first census after the end of the Period of Significance of the district occurred in 1960 and recorded a population of 4,076.

Very little institutional development is apparent in the Park Hills Historic District. The former Park Hills Elementary School (KEPH-120) at 1030 Old State Road is a non-contributing feature because of the presence of modern additions. The community never had a public high school; students attend either Dixie or Scott High School, in neighboring municipalities. Likewise, only one church is in the district, the former Evangelical Lutheran Church (KEPH-210) at Amsterdam and Hamilton Roads.

From the beginning, the demographics of Park Hills have encompassed both middle-and upper-class residents. Historic city directories for the area indicate a broad spectrum of residents in the new community. Taken from the 1927 directory,²⁵ the following list is a sampling of the walks of life of the residents:

Esther G. Aldrick, clerk, 35 Audubon Road
Arthur L. Doyle, insurance agent, 13 Alhambra Court
Joseph C. Knoehelman, metalworker, Old State Road
D. Collins Lee, manager [of the Lee & Simmons Development Co.], 216 Emerson Road
Joseph M. Macke, insurance broker, B. Kenter Macke, clerk, and William Macke, circuit court clerk, 121 Jackson Road
William A. Middendorf, salesman, 103 Park Drive
Robert M. Rankin, physician, 33 Audubon Road
Anna Louise Reeves, teacher, 512 Rose Circle
Joseph A. and Michael J. Ryan, plasterers, and Marie A. Ryan, nurse, 16 Rose Circle
Edmund Shackelford Lee, banker, Cleveland Avenue
Robert Simmons, manager [of the Lee & Simmons Development Co.], Amsterdam Road; Simmons' gardener, John R. Halcy, also lived on the property
John R. Bullock, real estate, Park Drive

Park Hills remained a popular residential community throughout the Period of Significance and remains so to this day. Development along the Dixie Highway is primarily commercial in nature and, as noted previously, is not included within the boundaries of the Park Hills Historic District. Likewise, the Covington Catholic High School, at 1600 Dixie Highway (KEPH-56), is not included. The nominated area of this suburban city retains its residential character and is a sought-after neighborhood for commuters into Covington and Cincinnati, in many respects just as it was when D. Collins Lee and Robert Simmons laid out the community in the 1920s.

Comparison of Park Hills with other Northern Kentucky Suburbs

Within the northern Kentucky region, the Park Hills Historic District stands as a distinct entity, defined by its early-twentieth-century suburban plan and its abiding character as a northern Kentucky residential suburb, including both modestly-scaled "small house" architecture and estate-scale suburban mansions. A comparable historic district in northern Kentucky is the Erlanger Proper Historic District (NR 9/6/02), south of Park Hills and also in Kenton County. Like Park Hills, Erlanger was created by a developer--in this case, a land syndicate--which ambitiously marketed its suburban building lots to Cincinnati railroad-based commuters in the late-nineteenth century, a generation before Park Hills was developed. Like Park Hills, Erlanger lies along the Dixie Highway and its major development occurred between World War One and the 1940s. Physically, Park Hills exhibits a far more picturesque setting, with rolling and even hilly terrain and winding streets; Erlanger is nearly flat and is laid out in a grid. Most of the Erlanger district is of wood construction finished in wood, while masonry finishes dominate in Park Hills. The repertoire of domestic architecture found throughout Erlanger is modest in its proportions and does not include the substantial estate-scale residential architecture found in sections of Park Hills.

In Newport, northeast of Park Hills, the Mansion Hill Historic District (NR 7/17/80; Boundary Increase 8/1/85) dates from a nearly a century earlier than Park Hills and contains houses dating from the middle and latter years of the nineteenth century, including "Bellevue," the James Taylor mansion at 335 East Third Street, built c. 1840 in the Greek Revival style and extensively altered c. 1880. The original Mansion Hill district incorporates "a large, distinctive, and varied collection of nineteenth-century architecture considered the finest representation of the city's most prosperous era."²⁶ The East Newport Historic District (NR 8/25/83) dates primarily from 1865 to 1915 and is dominated by the "Newport house," a two- to two-and-one-half-story, two-bay, side-passage house. Somewhat larger than Park Hills, the East Newport district contains nearly 1,000 properties, including six industrial properties, six churches, and one school; as noted above, Park Hills is nearly exclusively residential. Newport's Monmouth Street Historic District (NR 7/25/96) extends for an eight-block linear area and is largely commercial in character.

Elsewhere in Kenton County, the Covington Downtown Commercial Historic District (NR 6/9/83 with boundary increases in 1991, 1996, and 2001) is commercial in character and the other Covington districts exhibit far more of an urban character than does the Park Hills Historic District, which is undeniably a suburban district.

In neighboring Boone County, west of Kenton County, the Burlington Historic District (NR 6/19/79; Boundary Reduction 8/3/05) is a rural county seat undergoing significant impact by the expansion of the Cincinnati-Northern Kentucky International Airport. Laid out in the 1790s, Burlington retains both log architecture and Federal and Greek Revival-style design, while Park Hills dates from more than a century later and is characterized principally by domestic design tenets from the 1920s and thereafter.

Beyond these, other districts in the region which can be compared to Park Hills include the Boone County districts in Florence, Petersburg, and Rabbit Hash. Florence, an incorporated city, appeared only as "Florence Cross Roads" in the 1883 county atlas, but grew significantly with the improvements made to the Covington-Lexington Turnpike. Florence contains a defined central business district and residential neighborhoods, but has been severely impacted by suburban development fed by Interstate 71/75 which passes through the city's western edge. Petersburg and Rabbit Hash, conversely, are Ohio River towns which are far more rural in character than is Park Hills. Rabbit Hash is an unincorporated and irregularly-arranged village anchored by an 1830s general store (Rabbit Hash General Store, NR 1989) and Petersburg, also a river town, was anchored by a long-extinct distillery.

The above comparisons illustrate the significance of Park Hills as deriving from its picturesque suburban character, typified by meandering tree-lined streets lined with well-maintained domestic architecture spanning a 110-year history. Erlanger is less pretentious in scale and detailing than Park Hills, the Covington and Newport districts are of a far more urban character, Burlington still resembles a country county seat, and Rabbit Hash is a rural Ohio River hamlet.

Evaluation of the Significance of the Park Hills Historic District

The significance of the Park Hills Historic District is vested in its position as a late-nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century northern Kentucky suburb containing a densely-built-up concentration of minimally-altered historic domestic architecture dating primarily from the first six decades of the twentieth century. The core of the district consists of a carefully planned and regulated suburban subdivision of the 1920s and after, reflecting the growth of the automobile as seen in the many original basement, attached, and free-standing historic garages found throughout. With respect to Criterion C, the Park Hills Historic District contains diverse examples of the many of the styles of domestic architecture popular during the Period of Significance. Among these are the Colonial Revival, Dutch Colonial Revival, Tudor Revival, and Craftsman, including Bungalows and Craftsman-style cottages of modest scale, along with the Ranch style. Specific examples of such buildings appear in Section 7.

Summarizing, Park Hills stands as a nearly pristine early twentieth-century residential suburb laid out by Covington land speculators whose development was guided by community land-use development restrictions and design review, including cost and building size guidelines, setback requirements, and use and building restrictions. Park Hills follows the pattern of expansion of northern Kentucky's development from the lowlands of the Ohio River basin to the flood-free uplands south of the original settlements; further, the district meets the National Register Criteria for Evaluation as a northern Kentucky suburban neighborhood containing a concentration of formally-designed and vernacular domestic architecture dating from the early twentieth century into the 1950s.

10. Geographical Data

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

The area proposed for listing as the Park Hills Historic District is roughly bounded by Dixie Highway, Montague Road, Breckenridge Road, Sleepy Hollow Road, Devou Park, and the Dixie Highway (U. S. Rt. 25). However, within that roughly defined area, the district excludes those properties which front along the Dixie Highway. For the precise boundary of the district, see the scaled district sketch map, labeled "Park Hills Historic District." That map has been derived from the official records of the Kenton County Property Value Administrator.

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION

The boundary proposed for listing is that of a district, which has been selected to include those properties that collectively meet the Registration Requirements for the two suburban property types selected as the basis for evaluation, Streetcar Suburbs and Automobile Suburbs. This includes much of the corporate boundary of the City of Park Hills lying generally northwest of the Dixie Highway. The properties fronting on the Dixie Highway area were excluded from the district since they were constructed after the close of the Period of Significance, and do not meet the definition of the two property types. Those properties falling outside the district include a substantial modern high school campus, a modern church, and a series of modern commercial buildings. The nominated area, thus, has been limited to the historic neighborhood that contains the highest concentration of residences that meet the property type definitions and registration requirements.

The Park Hills Historic District nomination is being returned for technical and substantive issues

Section 2: Street & Number: This section needs to provide a general description of the historic district boundary. In the case of a district, typically this is by describing the streets or natural features that form the boundaries. In an irregular district such as Park Hills, a rough boundary may be used. For example, Park Hills might be defined as “roughly bounded by Montague Road, Breckenridge Road, Sleepy Hollow Road, and properties facing Old State Road, Arlington Road and St. James Avenue.” Because these are rough boundaries, they might include some areas that are not actually included in the nomination, but they give a reader an idea of where the actual location is. If the nomination is using a site map drawn to scale as the boundary, this rough boundary can also be used to help identify the district in the Verbal Boundary Description of Section 10 as an introduction to the map. Please include a general description of the historic district boundary

Section 5: Classification: The Number of Resources within Property, or the property count. This section of the Park Hills nomination did not match up with the inventory listed in the narrative section of Section 7 nor in the appended survey database. In counting each “C” and “NC” in Section 7 there appears to be 599 contributing resources and 112 non-contributing. Also, in comparing the site map with the resource inventory, it appears that resource number 263, which on the map consists of 9 buildings, was counted as only 1. The addition of these 8 non-contributing resource brings the total up to 120. Of the 599 contributing resources listed in the inventory, 555 are classified as buildings, 37 as sites, and 7 as structures. Please review and revise the list of contributing and non-contributing properties for accuracy and consistency.

The United States Department of the Interior

National Register of Historic Places
Return/Evaluation Sheet

Park Hills Historic District, Kenton County, KY

In identifying this property under the nationwide Multiple Property Submission "Historic Residential Suburbs in the United States 1830-1960" this requires that the narrative section of the nomination specifically address the MPS cover document in relation to property type and registration requirements. The nomination form should also reflect the relationship of the nomination to the MPS by including it in the header of each continuation page. Of course, the nomination can stand alone and need not strive to include itself under the MPS.

Section 7: Description. The list of architectural styles appears incomplete. The older section of the district, on Amsterdam, appears to have at least one Italianate style house, a Federal/Greek Revival style house, and numerous late Victorian cottages of various plans. These need to be reflected in the list.

The abridged version of the Kentucky survey database that is used as a property inventory is neither descriptive nor illustrative. The use of Kentucky's internal inventory numbers in lieu of discrete inventory numbers for the nomination can be confusing. In the case of Park Hills, the inventory begins with #11 and excludes #16 (and possibly others). It also confuses things when applied to the map - there is no coherent pattern to the numbering, which makes it difficult to find any particular property. It makes creating an accurate resource count hard. The use of the inventory in lieu of descriptions also clouds the issue of integrity - there is no explanation of why a particular resource does not contribute to a district, especially when the range of dates of construction is so broad. Resources such as the lake and the interurban waiting stations are given short shrift when it comes to their descriptions - there is no sense of their size or relationship to the landscape. This could be alleviated in the narrative or in a better-constructed inventory.

Section 8: Statement of Significance. The Criteria chosen for this district are A & C, with Architecture & Community Development and Planning as the areas of significance. The period of significance is listed as c. 1840-1957. In reading the nomination, the main significance of the district lies in its development as a planned suburb served by the extension of an interurban line (Cincinnati, Newport and Covington) and improvements to the road system (Dixie Highway) abutting Devou Park, a popular recreation area. The new subdivision incorporated a small plat that developed in the mid-19th century and that

National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places
Return/Evaluation Sheet

is represented by some early houses on Amsterdam and Locust streets. It also incorporated a number of existing single dwellings that are located along the Old State Road. These existing buildings were eventually coopted into the plan of the new Park Hills development. The bulk of the buildings in the district represent construction that occurred after the platting of Park Hills. Therefore, the logical period of significance for the district should be 1924-1957, representing the planned development and architectural unity of the district. The properties that predate the plat and that were incorporated into the plan can contribute if they retain integrity from (or prior to) the Period of Significance. Or, you could have two periods of significance that represent the two periods of primary development. One could be the C. 1840-c. 1860 period that coincides with the Amsterdam development and the second 1924-1957 for the park Hills development.

The nomination does not contain attributions for either architects or builders for this district. In urban areas, these types of substantial developments were usually published extensively in local newspapers, with developers and architects frequently mentioned. While the nomination is not dependent upon this, it could strengthen the argument for architectural and planning significance if architects or landscape architects can be associated with the development of the district.

Please look for typos. Section 8, page 24, paragraph 2, line 2 - and extraneous "8" is inserted into the word "it."

Section 10. Verbal Boundary Description. Again, the use of definable boundaries is necessary; you could use lot & block descriptions of the platted area. This section includes a portion of the boundary description. It might help to begin with a statement that gives rough boundaries and then a reference to the site map, drawn to scale. As it is, it could be construed to include the area west of Sleepy Hollow Road.

Supplemental materials: The USGS topographic map has district boundaries that differ from those on the site maps. On the site map, again the use of Kentucky survey inventory numbers is confusing, especially as the sequences are often interrupted. A more coherent number system that corresponds to the inventory would be preferred. Please provide a USGS map with district boundary that is consistent with the site map.

Re: Park Hills Historic District
Park Hills, Kenton County, Kentucky

Donna M. Neary, Executive Director and State Historic Preservation Officer
The State Historic Preservation Office
300 Washington Street
Frankfort, Kentucky 40601

Dear Ms. Neary:

My husband and I built our home at 1331 Old State Road in Park Hills in 1968. I really don't think that a home 39 years of age should be on the National Register of Historic Places. Some of the homes in Park Hills are quite old and beautiful and perhaps should be on the National Register.

We are sending this letter to thank you for your consideration. At this time, we wish to decline your offer. We do not wish to be on the National Register.

Sincerely,

Loretta McKinley

To Whom It May Concern:

Considering that my home is the oldest in Park Hills, it would make sense that it be included among historic homes in Park Hills. However, I do not wish my home to be on the list unless two requirements be met:

- Removal of all signs from in front of my fence or on my property
- Removal of the telephone pole by my gate. This was the latest blight of the telephone company (2001) who refused any efforts on my part for its removal.

I would like to add that unsightly telephone lines suspended throughout the city do not enhance this historic district nor give the appearance of civic pride. I personally paid $2000 to have my lines removed and run underground to the barn in the rear of my property only to find that the City Building ran a line from a pole in my side yard across my property next to the barn which I was hoping to restore to its former attractiveness.

Quite frankly, I see no reason to register this property which the city of Park Hills does not recognize as a landmark and which, at the very least, should not be obscured by signs, wires, and telephone poles.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Matthews:

Enclosed are nominations approved at the August 30, 2007 Review Board meeting. We are submitting them for listing in the National Register:

South Park Neighborhood District, Clark County, KY
Stewart's Dry Goods Company Building (Additional Documentation), Jefferson County, KY
Von Allmen Dairy Farm Residence, Jefferson County, KY
✓ Park Hills Historic District, Kenton County, KY

Note that the Stewart's Dry Goods Company Building is already listed (NR ID: 82002725), and that this additional documentation proposes to extend its Period of Significance.

We also submit an owner's withdrawing objection to the property's listing. That property, the Walter House, Campbell County, Kentucky, was determined eligible on March 9, 1983, as a result of the earlier owner's objection. With the withdrawal of the objection, please list the property.

We appreciate your consideration of these nominations.
