The Hidden Forest Cabin is constructed of rough manually worked pine logs. The actual date of construction is unknown. In its original state, determined from old photographs, it was roofed with sapings and dirt. There were also two associated out buildings. This cabin is known to have been used by bootleggers during prohibition and propectors until around 1936. Prior to this time it was possibly used by unsuccessful ranching attempts.

The present appearance of the cabin is slightly altered from the original structure. The adjacent out buildings have been removed and the roof replaced with wood and tarpaper. Also two windows have been added. The interior of the cabin consists of wood plank flooring, a wood stove, and six bunk beds. It is currently used for overnight shelter by personnel of the Desert National Wildlife Range on routine patrols and surveys.

Desert Game Range, was initially staffed in 1938. An area just below the present site was initially recommended for the refuge headquarters in April 1938. It has been used as an overnight shelter for refuge personnel since that date.

Hidden Forest Cabin is presently located within the proposed Desert Wilderness Area and the Hidden Forest Canyon is a popular area among refuge visitors.

Much of the history surrounding the cabin and the associated area is open to debate. Unsubstantiated stories and legends concerning the area have multiplied over the past 20 years. Research could probably varify some history that has become exaggerated. This could be documented and utilized for interpretation of this unique cabin.
