Travelers on Highway 101 recognize Gilroy for its memorable City Hall, a landmark labeled a "begabled, beportholed, beturreted" structure at the time of its construction in 1905. Dominating the two story building is the corner tower with its four clock faces and its tiled cupola. The two corner facades are richly decorated with stone cornices, ornamental gables, tiled roofs, sandstone window trim, and stone spheres.

Designation of its style is a source of controversy but was described as "in the Mission Style" when built. The architect was Samuel Newsom in cooperation with the San Jose architectural firm of Wolfe and McKenzie.

When the cornerstone was laid for the City Hall on a windy day, November 22, 1905, students were excused from school, people came on foot and in carriage to watch the ceremony and hear the speaker extol the virtues of the new building. The Gilroy Gazette reported that "No other city in the county, except in San Jose, has so magnificent a building as this will be."

The lower story is built of greystone, the second story of compressed white brick topped with terra cotta coping and a red tile roof. The sandstone facing of the first floor was quarried from an old Indian camp near Gilroy. The sandstone was roughened $\sim <$ with pits and holes where the Indians had grown their corn. Henry Miller, the cattle king, had the sandstone quarried for the city at his own expense to secure the proper size stones. The upper story is faced with yellow brick and stucco.

Interior partitions are of wood studs and lath and plaster. The second floor is supported by the exterior walls and cast iron columns carrying steel girders. Access to the second floor is by a double golden oak stair in the entry and a single stair in the rear. The roof is supported by wood trusses spanning wall to wall. No significant structural changes or alterations have occurred in the building.

Housed in the building were the mayor's office, chamber for the councilmen, clerk's office, marshall's office, courtroom and a jail. City fire engines were housed behind first story archways.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT Samuel Newson

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

According to Dr. David Gebhard, noted Architectural Historian, the Gilroy Old City Hall is a classic example of California architecture at the turn of the century. The architect, Samuel Newsom, working with the firm of Wolfe and McKenzie of San Jose, completed the drawing in 1904 with the construction beginning in 1905. Samuel Newsom, with his brother Joseph, is noted as the creator of the "Carson House" in Eureka and a number of other buildings of architectural significance in California.

Professor Gebhard feels the building is significant for two reasons: (a) Architecturally it is an important and major example of the use of the Mission Revival mode for Civic architecture in California, and (b) it certainly constitutes a major landmark in the small scale urban environment of the City of Gilroy.

The Gilroy City Hall enjoys a national reputation as an important turn of the century building. This is evidenced by the fact that the building has been discussed by the following architects and architectural historians over the past ten to fifteen years:

Stephen Jacobs	(Prof. Architecture and Architectural History, Cornell University) "California Contemporaries of Wright," in: Problems of the 19th and 20th Centuries - Studies in Western Art , Vol. IV, Princeton, 1963;
Charles Moore	(Dean School of Architecture, Yale University) "You Have to Pay for the Public Life," in: Perspecta , Nos. 9-10, New Haven, 1965;
David Gebhard &	& Harriete Von Breton 1868-1968, Architecture in California, Santa Barbara, 1968;
David Gebhard,
	Salt Lake City, 1974.

The Art Galleries of the University of California, Santa Barbara, is currently preparing an exhibition of the work of Samuel Newsom who actually designed the Gilroy Town Hall. This will be presented in 1976, as part of the Universities contribution to the national Bicentennial.
