The third story section contains a group of four small, round-arched windows with brick voussoirs, resting on a common (over) 19. History This warehouse is one of two buildings (along with 2410) constructed in 1898. Designed by the firm of D.X. Murphy & Brothers for the National Tobacco Works Branch of the American Tobacco Company, these buildings replaced those destroyed by fire the same year. 2400 West Main was to house drying rooms. Among Murphy's works are the Jefferson Branch Library and the Jefferson County Jail. 20. Significance The National Tobacco Works was one of the largest manufacturers of chewing tobacco in the city. This industry was very important to the development of Louisville and the West Main Street area. 21.
