DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

At the time of the battle around the Brice plantation house, there was a 6-acre clearing looking out over an undulating, heavily timbered landscape, with an undergrowth of black-jack and scrub oak in full leaf. Six hundred yards from Brice's house the road cuts through a comfield with rail fences on each side. General Forrest of the Confederate army, just prior to the battle, described the country around Brices Cross Roads as "Densely wooded and the undergrowth so heavy that when we strike them they won't know how few men we have. Their cavalry will reach the crossroads three hours ahead of the infantry. We can whip their cavalry in that time. They'll send back to have the infantry hurried up. In this heat, and coming on at a run, five or six miles over a muddy road, their infantry will be so tired we will ride right over them." The crossroads is located on a slight rise overlooking Tishomingo Creek and was of strategic value in the battle.

The Cross Roads presently consists of a dirt road running north and south and a paved road running east and west. The vegetation now is primarily open with field crops or grass cover.

The monument at the site is made of granite and the dimensions are as follows:

It was erected by the War Department c.1930.

The Union plan for war in the west was to bisect the South east of the Mississippi with Sherman's army working out of Chattanooga and Nashville. His task was to destroy the Confederate Army led by Joseph E. Johnston, occupy Atlanta, and if possible, go on to Savannah and Charleston.

Early in the Atlanta campaign, the Confederate high command had considered the possibility of attacking from Mississippi Sherman's vulnerable supply line—the one—track railroad from Nashville to Chattanooga. Late in May, Gen. Stephen D. Lee, who commanded the Department of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana, directed Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest to strike Sherman's line of communications in middle Tennessee. Forrest had distinguished himself by his ability to move fast and fight hard. He lacked formal training in military science, but he acted on the simple maxim that in warfare it was all—important to get to the decisive point of the battle first with the most men. Gifted with daring and inspirational leadership, he had an uncanny ability to carry into execution his theory of successful warfare. So on June 1 Forrest put his columns in motion at Tupelo, Mississippi, and three days later was in Russellville, Alabama, a day's march from the Tennessee River.

Sherman knew that his supply line was vulnerable and therefore charged Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis to move out of Memphis into northern Mississippi and hold Forrest there. Alerted by Lee of Sturgis' moves, Forest hurried back to Tupelo.

Forrest began concentrating his forces, which numbered approximately 3,500 men, along the railroad between Guntown, Baldwyn, and Booneville. On the evening of June 9, he knew from his scouts that Sturgis, with about 8,100 men, was in camp at Stubbs Farm 8 to 10 miles from Brices Cross Roads. Both armies marched at dawn.

Item 8. Significance

Forrest, who had scouted his enemy well, planned to attack at Brices. But Sturgis' cavalry reached and passed the crossroads before the Confederates got there. Forrest, approaching along the Baldwyn Road, met the Union patrols about 1 mile east of Brices. The Confederates checked the Union advance and by noon, with rapid reinforcement, were attacking vigorously. The Union forces, called up on the double, were exhausted from the march along the muddy roads made almost impassable by torrential rains the night before. Many never even crossed Tishomingo Creek.

Forrest pressed his attack and by midafternoon pushed the Union lines back to the crossroads. Sturgis began a careful withdrawal. But at Tishomingo Creek bridge, a wagon overturned and created panic in the Union ranks. The confused retreat to Memphis degenerated into a rout, and most of the Union artillery, the wagon train, and more than 1,500 Federals were captured by Forrest.

Students and critics of military tactics agree that the engagement was characterized by the hardest kind of fighting and was a brilliant tactical victory for Forrest. Despite this, the battle at Brices Cross Roads did not bring relief to the Confederacy. Sherman, on this and other occasions, forestalled any attack on the Nashville-Chattanooga railroad by sending small commands into northern Mississippi. Assured of adequate reinforcements and supplies, he won the Atlanta and later campaigns which made the collapse of the Confederacy inevitable.

The one acre of land included in Brices Cross Roads National Battlefield Site constitutes only a symbolic token of the battle area developed in a commemorative manner with the monument, flanking cannon, and exhibit panels.
