DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The architectural style of Belle Mina follows the general form suggested by the Richmond Capitol of Virginia from a design submitted by Thomas Jefferson. Several of the quadrangle buildings of the University of Virginia suggest themselves as prototypes for the building form. 246 Fm

The front full portico of the house has six Doric columns not regularly spaced because of the use of a late Georgian entrance which influenced the column spacing. The detail and trim of the interior and exterior of the house is also in the late Georgian (Federal Period) style of the locality in this period. The basic design form and decorative detail is very similar to that which exists in the State Bank building of nearby Decatur, and it is likely the bank building was erected by some of the same workmen.

There exists an oral tradition that the structure was erected with a balustrade at the top of its hipped roof; however, no trace of this is now evident.

The structure of the house is load bearing brick masonry interior and exterior walls with wood intermediate framing. The portico columns and return pilasters are timber-cored brick masonry.

The house is formally planned with a broad axial hallway on the first and second floor from front to rear. The most outstanding architectural feature of the plan is the introduction of a semi-circular exterior wall which receives the main stairway and forms the rear west wall of the lower and upper hallway. This wall required the construction of a complex stair frame and double-hung sash and frame conforming to the radius of this wall. The service rooms were located in a single story "ell" to the left of the formal axis of the plan and perpendicular to it. There was no interior access to these three service rooms which were joined to a secondary first floor stair hall by a covered veranda running in front of the service rooms. The terminal room of this service wing was the kitchen.

The house has undergone minor alteration and minor restoration. The partitions between the service rooms have been removed and an interior doorway has been cut through the masonry wall connecting a modern kitchen which was added between the original dining-room and the exterior wall of the first service room. The front veranda of the service wing has been rebuilt. Baths and closets have been added within the interior of the second floor bedrooms. A small amount of trim and shelving with wainscot paneling has been added to the left front room of the first floor. Otherwise, the interior trim, mantels, and wainscoting are well executed examples of the late Georgian style common to early 19th century houses of the Tennessee River Valley.

Thomas Bibb, owner and builder of Belle Mina, was a native of Amelia County, Virginia. He was the son of William Bibb who played an important part in the early history of his country, having been a member of the Committee of Safety of Prince Edward County in 1775, and a captain in the Revolutionary Army.

In 1808 Bibb made his first trip through Alabama via Mobile and the inland river transportation system. On his return from New Orleans, he stopped in Limestone County and purchased 2500 acres of land. He married Pamelia Thompson in 1811 in Huntsville and soon after returned to Limestone County, where, in 1826, he built Belle Mina.

The territory of Alabama was authorized by Act of Congress on March 2, 1819, to form a state constitution, and when the constitutional Convention met in Huntsville on July 5, 1819, Thomas Bibb represented Limestone County. He was also a member of the 15-man committee selected to draw up the constitution.

The Alabama Territory held its first state elections in September, 1819, in anticipation of Alabama's admission into the Union. William Wyatt Bibb, formerly the territorial governor, was again selected to hold the state's highest office. His brother Thomas was selected to represent Limestone County in the Senate, and was afterwards elected to the presidency of that body.

William Wyatt Bibb was inaugurated on November 9, 1819, and Alabama gained statehood on December 14 of that year. On July 10, 1820, however, the governor died of tuberculosis following a riding accident. Thomas Bibb, by virtue of his office as president of the Senate, became the second governor of Alabama. Bibb held this office until December, 1821, and did not choose to run for re-election. In 1828-29 he was elected as a representative to the State legislature.

He died on September 20, 1839, was buried at the family cemetery at Belle Mina, and was moved twenty years later to the Maple Hill Cemetery in Huntsville. His will stated his wish that the house be given to the eldest son in each generation. This was the case until 1940 when the house was sold out of the family.
