

Historic Sites Survey Inventory No. 9

ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION:

The Redding House is a large two-and-a-half-story, frame residence with a truncated hip roof surmounted by a balustrade. A three-bay porch with a balustraded deck, supported by clusters of two and three Corinthian columns, extends across the facade (south elevation). Rounded-corner extensions of this porch encircle the southeast and southwest corners of the house. Above the bow-front entrance bay is a single-bay portico supported by clusters of three Corinthian columns and surmounted by a balustrade. Above that rises a large pedimented dormer with a roof balustrade and Palladian window. The semi-circular motif is repeated in the balustraded bay on the west elevation, on the rounded corners of the two-by-one-bay porches which encircle the front corners of the house, and in a variety of round-arch windows. A heavy, projecting, molded cornice supported by console brackets encompasses the eaves line of the entire structure, unifying the building's various projecting elements.

ALTERATIONS: Lower gallery on facade has been screened, although sympathetically so.

OUTBUILDINGS:

LANDSCAPE FEATURES: Mature trees and plantings visually shield the house from intrusions located to the north and east of the property. The front yard is enclosed by an early-nineteenth-century iron fence.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE:

The Redding House is the most outstanding example of the Neoclassical Revival style in Biloxi. Built in 1908 by Charles Redding, a prominent local businessman, the building's complexity of plan and detail plus its fine quality of workmanship make this house one of the finest historical residences on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.
