Nineteenth Century Residential Buildings in Phoenix

Description

The W. E. Adams House was constructed in 1899. The builder is unknown. The building is of vernacular design with basic Gothic Revival overtones and represents the Mass Vernacular property type. It retains integrity of design and most materials and workmanship. The W. E. Adams House is presently vacant.

The W. E. Adams House is located in Block 36, Lot 17-18, of the Montgomery Addition. The Montgomery Addition was originally platted in 1887. The building faces east onto South 1st Avenue. The streetscape along South 1st Avenue is characterized by modest, working class residences of both historic and contemporary construction. The site also includes a ca. 1940 sheet metal storage at the rear of the lot.

The W. E. Adams House is a rectangular, one-story building of brick construction. The building measures 15 x 20 feet. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with wood shingles. It has a stone foundation. The brick walls have been sheathed with stucco.

Exterior features include a small, shed roofed entry porch with square wood posts. Windows, located symmetrically along each wall, have been covered with plywood. Openings have segmental arches. The central entry contains a wood door. Important architectural elements include boxed eaves with frieze board, corbelled brick chimney, and round arch attic ventilators at each gable head.

Alterations include a historic rear addition, and the possible replacement of the original wood porch roof with the existing structure. The house is in fair condition with material deterioration due to lack of occupancy and maintenance.

Statement of Significance

The W. E. Adams House is significant under Criteria C under the area of significance of Architecture. It is representative of the historic context "Residential Architecture in Phoenix Prior to 1901." Built in 1899 and constructed of Vernacular design with basic Gothic Revival overtones, the W. E. Adams House is a good representative of the Mass Vernacular property type. The W. E. Adams House is also important in the area of Community Planning. As one of only twenty-two nineteenth century buildings remaining in the Montgomery Addition, which was originally platted in 1887, the W. E. Adams House represents a rare survivor of its period and the historic context "Nineteenth Century Community Development in Phoenix."

A common design format for residences built in Phoenix during the nineteenth century was the Mass Vernacular house. Those building efforts were based, not on architectural design, but on the shared cultural experiences and abilities of their builders. Built of machine made and commercial materials, the houses often took into account past or contemporary trends in architectural style, although manifested in very simplified or provincialized elements. The W.E. Adams House exemplifies that type of residential architecture and illustrates a traditional design based on the basic format of the Gothic Revival cottage. The common characteristics of the mass vernacular house type are well represented in the W.E. Adams House and include a basic "T" shaped plan with steeply pitched side gable roof, symmetrical openings at the facade accented with a simple shed roofed porch, and the use of fired brick, dimensioned lumber and milled and turned wood. Building elements influenced by the Gothic Revival cottage models include unbroken gable walls, tall round arched ventilators at the gable heads, and boxed eaves with frieze boards.
