DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Gov. Bellingham-Cary House is situated on a small hill behind a wide expanse of lawn, amidst large maple and oak trees in a residential area of Chelsea.

The 1791 mansion incorporated two earlier sections. In its northwest corner is the original 1659 hunting lodge of Gov. Bellingham, now called the "old kitchen"; and adjacent to that is the southwest parlor and two rooms above, dating from the mid-18th c.

The house as seen today is a large 2½ story clapboard Federal with a hip roof and two interior end chimneys. There are two pedimented dormers on both the east and west elevations and three on the south facade. The house is five bays wide and three deep with a 1908 2-story hip roof ell projecting from the center rear elevation. A Doric pedimented entrance accents the facade center and contains the original late 18th c. door. All window sash are 6/6.

The house plan is that of a double stairway dividing 8 rooms. There are 10 original fireplaces in the house and an Indian escape passage runs from the northwest bedroom to the cellar. The interior of the house retains its original elaborate panelling and mouldings.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Gov. Bellingham-Cary House, 1659, is the only existing house built (in part) by one of the founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. It is also the only remaining historically significant 17th-18th c. structure in Chelsea.

The original part of the building, known as the "old kitchen", was built by Gov. Bellingham in 1659 as a hunting lodge. Richard Bellingham came from Boston, England to Boston, Massachusetts in 1634 and served as Governor in 1651, '54, and '65. Amongst his properties were a town house in Boston, a summer home in Charlestown, and the hunting lodge in Chelsea. In 1650 Gov. Bellingham divided his 365 acre property in Chelsea into four farms, named after their tenants, one of which was the Cary Farm. Gov. Bellingham died in 1672 and left the property to his son Samuel. Gov. Bellingham was buried in the Granary Burying Ground (on the National Register).

Samuel Bellingham left the property to his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, who left it to her sister, Mrs. Rebecca Watts, who left it to her daughter-in-law, Ann Antram Watts. At Ann Watts' death, the property passed to her daughter, Rebecca, who was married to Capt. Cary in 1741. In the 1750's the Carys added the west parlor and the two rooms upstairs to the house. In 1763 the property was bequeathed to the Cary sons, Samuel, Thomas, and Jonathan. Samuel bought the shares from his brothers.

Samuel Cary had prosperous plantations in Granada, West Indies, and came back to the Cary House bringing his plantation ideas. In 1772 he married Sarah Gray and they made the Cary House their home. In 1791 Samuel spent $12,000 making the small home into an elaborate mansion, with a stately staircase and elaborate panelling brought over from England. The property was extensively landscaped and it became the showplace of the area. It was called "The Retreat" and high society from miles around visited Planter Cary.

After Samuel Cary's death in 1812 and that of his wife in 1825, their two daughters sold most of the property to the Cary Improvement Society in 1825. It was bought by the Gov. Bellingham-Cary House Assoc. in 1908, and is still owned by that association.
