Essentially unaltered exterior, excepting tile roof replaced by slate (which obscures further the relationship to the Pisa Baptistery as the prototype, with much modification). A statue of Gabriel blowing a long trumpet - once atop the dome - was a storm casualty many years ago.

The vistas toward the church from along Broad Street and Central Avenue - with the nearby open spaces of Washington and Military Parks - are very impressive.

The exterior is mostly of rugged rough-hewn light brown granite probably "pink granite". "There are 3 vigorously treated granite towers -2 on the front corners and 1 on the side street rear. The corner entrances and the main convexcurved arcade of the center entrances are of roughhewn granite arches, of monastic effect, rising from polished "pink granite" columns capped with capitals which are Byzantine or Egyptian.

L Sculptured gargoyles and heads adorn the exterior, and are echoed in the original metal fittings of the interior. The arcade archways are graced with the decorous latticed effect of lacy metal grillwork gates.

The huge curved Baptist meetinghouse interiors of the late 19th Century got a unique addition when Peddie's interior was done in Byzantine with many curious modifications. Some of the interior walls are of various stones and brickwork, but the almost circular balcony and other fittings are predominantly of wood - medium-dark stained - giving a very restful and subdued effect which is still, typically, confused in its elements and various decorative touches, but this might often be said of Byzantine interiors, also, with the variety of art works at St. Mark's, Venice (brought from afar) for example, being notable. Thus we have an upper level pulpit of lectern (not the central pulpit) with its lectern mounted on a large wood-carved spread æagle. Above (behind) the pulpit enclosing the baptismal pool and below it on the main floor are convex-curved seats for the clergy of (cushioned) pink marble, with arcaded columned semi-domed niches - which again echo the entrance arcade and, perhaps, the prototype Pisa Baptistery.

Unquestionably, this church is of national significance as a unique and robust Byzantine-Romanesque example of the Richardson Romanesque E9a. It is irreplacable.

It is so cited in Gowans and, since the demolition of the extraordinary old Prudential buildings it is New Jersey's most unique edifice of Byzantine-Romanesque of the rugged Richardsonian influence.

It also is a noted work by noted architect William Halsey Wood, Newark.

The church, founded in 1801, is the oldest Baptist congregation in the city - and has absorbed the members of other churched including South Baptist and Clinton Avenue Baptist.

The church was the gift of Newark Mayor Thomas B. Peddie, for whom the church became a memorial in his name. He was a Scotsman, a prominent Newark industrialist, active church member, and philanthropist, with Peddie School in Hightstown, New Jersey also bearing his name. The church location, a fine asset, is also its greatest threat: potential commercial encroachment. There are extraordinary vistas of the church as it anchors Broad Street at its bend at the north end of Military Park - with the overall setting not totally unlike that of ^St. Basil's - Moscow, at the head of Red Square. It is also at the head of Central Avenue.

/ The church was styled in very free adaptation, with many additions, such as three towers, reputedly, from the Baptistery of Pisa, Italy (of the Cathedral group which includes the famed Leaning Tower also)./ If this seems obscure, more credence can be lent to it by a comparison of photos - in the case of Peddie Church using old photo(s) of the church when it had its dome in tiles, suggestive of the tiled Pisa dome, before Peddie's dome was covered by slate. The arcaded entrances of Peddie also simulate Pisa.
