Describe present and historic physical appearance.

Remington City, sited immediately to the east of the Remington Arms "Russian Rifle Factory" (now a General Electric Manufacturing Center), consists of 166 closely spaced structures of four distinct types, all situated on four streets forming twoand-one-half city blocks. Bounded on the northeast by Stewart Street and the southwest by Tudor Street, it encompasses buildings on Bond, Dover, and Remington Streets and Palisade Avenue. The complex forms a tight residential enclave in a mixed-use residential/commercial/industrial area that slopes deeply to the factory and Stillman Pond, which empties into Bridgeport Harbor in the northeastern section of the city.

Although several of the buildings in this complex have incurred insensitive renovations, especially where porches and original surface material are concerned, because the district retains its essential massing, scale, and streetscape rhythm, as well as a relatively high degree of original materials, its integrity is such that it should be considered a contributing district to the Bridgeport/U.S. Housing Corporation Historic District.

This group of residences consists of 40 individual quadraplex (Photographs 1 and 2) two-story brick blocks facing Bond and Dover Streets, 24 wood frame single family and duplex residences (Photograph 3) in groups of four along Dover and Remington Streets, nine terraced blocks of brick "Philadelphia type Rowhouses" (Photograph 4) flanking the above-mentioned frame dwellings along Dover and Remington Streets, as well as three large three-story apartment buildings on Palisade Avenue (Photographs 5, 6, and 7). With the exception of the three nearly identical apartment houses on Palisade Avenue, within each of the building types distinct variations are found.

The following classifications are derived from the building types as identified in the survey forms and additional photographs of individual buildings can be found in the survey documentation.

Quadraplex Residences

Type "A" 30 structures (Photograph 1)

This type features a one-story porch isolated at the center of the two bays of the facade. Each porch, which is entered from the side, has a stick baluster railing and Doric columns supporting a full entablature above the second story. These buildings terminate with a simple cornice with Greek key grilles.

Type "B" 6 Structures (Photograph 1)

The type "B" buildings feature a two-story porch capped with a triangular pediment that is isolated at the center four bays of each building. Each porch, which contains stick baluster railings at both galleries, and square Doric piers supporting a full entablature, is entered from the center bay at the front. A bracketed cornice terminates the composition.

Type "C" 4 Structures

The type "C" buildings feature full front, two-story-high porches with stick baluster railings and square Doric piers (paired at the corners) supporting a full entablature. Triglyph ornament enlivens the frieze at the cornice. The porch has a central stair at the front.

One and Two-Family Dwellings

The Remington Arms Company erected 24 frame single (Type "D) and duplex (Type "E") residences (Photograph 3) in groups of four between the Philadelphia type rowhouse blocks along Dover and Remington Streets. These Dutch Colonial Revival designs are characterized by a gambrel roof with a curved sweep extending out over a front porch and by shed roof dormers. The porch is composed of square and round piers with square post railings. Other classical stylistic references include Federal-style door surrounds with sidelights, Palladian and lunette windows, and 6/6 double-hung sash. The type "D" single family houses are sited gable-end to the street and have small porches, while the type "E" duplex structures are sited gable-end to the side with full porches spanning the facade and parallel to the street. While some porches have been enclosed or modified and some houses re-sided, most of this type retain original massing and decorative details.

"Philadelphia Type Rowhouses" (Type R)

The nine terraced blocks of brick residences, commonly known as "Philadelphia type rowhouses," are each two stories tall. Organized into projecting corner and central pavilions, each block features eleven units defined by individual pedimented or flat roofed porches with high steps. (Note, as Photograph 4 illustrates, many of the porches have been enlarged and enclosed.) Windows contain 6/6 sash and those of the second floor are topped by a cast-stone cornice. The blocks's brick walls terminate with a simple parapet which is stepped at each of the two-bay projecting sections.

Apartment Houses (Photographs 5, 6 & 7)

This group of three-story apartment blocks consists of three similar neo-classical structures. Each is built on an I shape plan with basements and is clad with red brick laid in Flemish Bond. The flat roofs are edged with low brick parapets and classical denticulated wood cornices. Cast stone is used for a string-course beneath the third-story windows and the water table. The corners of the buildings are articulated with brick quoins. The rectangular window openings are all capped with splayed cast stone lintels, and those of the first floor are further enlivened with recessed brick blind arches. The interior corners of the courtyard, at each floor, have multi-light doors leading to well-detailed iron fire escapes. Elongated paired windows are found on the second and third floors above the central entries. The entries are all articulated with a round-arched fanlight above the door, which, itself, is flanked by paneled spandrels flanked by paneled Tuscan columns and impost blocks en resaunt. This is topped by a simple horizontal cornice. One-story porches supported by Doric posts articulate the flanking buildings (245 and 315), while a double-height portico topped with a modillioned cornice graces the central building, #275. These three buildings are currently undergoing a gut rehabilitation and seem to be losing original windows, fire escape doors, and fire escapes, but because they retain their original massing and surface material, and because of their connection and proximity to the other buildings in Remington City, should be considered contributing elements in this historic district.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

The Remington City complex is significant as some of the earliest housing built in Bridgeport to house workers for defense-related industry. Built by the Remington Arms Corporation to attract and retain skilled employees to staff the firm's enormous "Russian Rifle" plant to the west, it is a highly conspicuous and tangible legacy of Bridgeport's most intense period of prosperity and growth brought on by World War I. Designed by the well-known architects Hiss and Weekes under the supervision of Alfred Bossom, the area is architecturally significant and should be noted for its strong visual presence created by the variant modes of the Colonial Revival. It is a good example of period model housing that represents an enlightened architectural response to a local acute housing shortage. #### Boundary Justification

The Remington City Historic District is located within a clearly defined neighborhood of Bridgeport outlined by the boundaries of the original land purchased by the Remington Arms Company in 1916. Distinctive architectural features, including overall building design, gable, hip and gambrel roofs, varied wooden porches, and brick and clapboard construction, identify the buildings associated with the Remington Arms development. Landscape features, such as sidewalks, symmetrical siting, and flowering trees, add cohesiveness to the district. The edges of the district are bordered by nineteenth and twentieth-century residential and commercial construction, dominated by the "Russian Rifle" factory to the west.
