If one were to try to find all the tendencies, forms and details of house construction in the Lawrenceville area in the period from 1775-1825, that person could locate all these features in the John White Homestead. Set far back from Cold Soil Road in the middle of a 117 acre plot of productive farm land, the house stands relatively unchanged from its original construction around 1800, as it has always been in thoughtful and caring ownership. The two side additions of the twentieth century have drawn off modern living needs and functions, obviating changes in the central structure itself.

A five bay, two and a half story four chimney stone unit, the house sports a simple yet sophisticated vernacular Federal doorway of reeded pilasters and architrave. This ingenious concoction is characteristic of the detail work throughout, and of this whole backwater region at this time. The proportions of the facade are carefully dictated by the fenestrations - nine over six in the first floor windows and six over six in the second floor. The upper members of the original sash are fixed. A simple flat boarded cornice edges the slate roof

The central hall, four room plan is airy and spadous even though the interior partitions are masonry. The left front living room displays the most stylish Federal fireplace, with reeded members like the front doorway. Here, delicate notching in rhythmic swag patterns echoes Adamsque design. The rear living room is joined to the front one by a Federal style elliptical arch, one of the few renovations designed by the present architect owner. Its reeded mantle is simple yet competent joinery. The right front dining room has built in panelled door china stonework fireplace and hearth replaces the original brick jambed, oak beamed feature, but preserves the original molding mantle. Original closets and an in-wall stairway fill the rest of that side wall. Wrought iron hooks for handling herbs and smoked meats dot the ceiling. A back doorway into the cellar stairway, now filled up, probably once linked the kitchen more directly to the back exit.

Original panelled cherry doors swing lightly at all the doorways. Long perfect lengths of the same wood serve as the stair rails perched on top of simple square balusters. These local details are at their most graceful and refined in this house. At the landing a modern Federal style window frame with panelling below covers an opening which has at various times been used as a door and a window.

The second floor plan repeats the lower one and the Federal fireplaces document imaginative vernacular inventions. The example in the right front bedroom in particular displays more of the reed work, here cut into quarters for the corners of the center panel. Many of the interior walls are built of double planking plastered over. The door hardware throughout the house is German-made with brass knobs and old latches. The pegged oak rafters and floor joists are in excellent condition and exhibit the highest quality timber construction.

7. Condition

John White Homestead

New Jersey: 34 Mercer: 021

A small masonry smokehouse, probably also circa 1800 sits just to the rear of the house.

In conclusion, we must consider the John White homestead as the home of a successful, conservative New Jersey farmer who was willing to pay for excellent workmanship and up-to-date, stylish decorative detail. The house gathers many local features into one well ordered whole, that has come down to us in an extremely well-preserved state.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

According to Donald Tyler, the history of the land on which this house stands dates back to a 1696-7 survey and deed "from Thomas Revell, as Trustee for the West Jersey Society, to Joseph Sackett... for three hundred acres adjoining Samuel Hunt, Johathan Davis and the public land," meaning the town lot. The property appears not to have been paid for a second time at the Revell-Daniel Coxe settlement in 1703, because it reverted to Coxe ownership and was deeded in August, 1756, by William Coxe to Benjamin Stevens, who held it until 1792. In that year he conveyed it to Aaron Van Cleve, who deeded it in April of 1793 to John White. The price was 1250 pounds. The deed mentions "231 acres, all buildings, improvements and appurtenances thereto" indicating that a dwelling was in place at that time, although the stone house is believed to have been built by John White after 1793 and prior to 1820.
