DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Masonic Temple in Atoka, Oklahoma is a three story, red brick building that measures approximately 51' wide and 95' long. Situated on the northeast corner of Court and Pennsylvania streets, it is characterized by brick pilasters, a decorative cornice that encloses a marble slab upon which is inscribed the masonic emblem and the words "Masonic Temple," stained glass third story windows on the front that are art nouveau in motif, symmetry of second and third story windows, and marble block inlays on the southern facade between the second and third stories which contain masonic emblems. On its front, the lower story originally consisted of plate glass windows and two entry ways; on its western side, it contained one plate glass window, three one-half windows, and two entry ways. The most northern of the latter provided access to the second and third stories.

Since it was originally constructed, the exterior of the structure has been only slightly altered. The lower level brick window and entry way encasements along the building's southern front were removed and replaced by aluminum encased windows and doors. Above this on the first floor were added aluminum siding and an aluminum awning. The windows on the western side of the building were bricked up. Despite these changes, the building retains much of its architectural integrity and could be restored to its original condition with little difficulty.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Constructed in 1915, the Masonic Temple in Atoka is symbolic of the birth and growth of Masonry in Oklahoma, one of the state's foremost social and humanitarian institutions. By 1855 some five chapters of the Masonic Lodge existed in what is now Oklahoma, but of these only two survived the Civil War. In the post-war period organizational activity was resumed under the leadership of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas. Of the new chapters chartered the first was the Ok-la-ho-ma Lodge at Boggy Depot in 1868, the Grand Master of which was J. S. Murrow. The following year the lodge was removed to Atoka and thereafter, under the guidance of Murrow, the "Father of Oklahoma Masonry," became one of the foremost chapters in Indian Territory and later Oklahoma. In 1875 it was the fourth chapter to affiliate with the Grand Lodge of Indian Territory; in 1880 it organized the second chapter of Royal Arch Masons within the Territory, and in 1883 it formed the first Council of Royal and Select Masters. Murrow himself served as Grand Master of the Indian Territory Lodge in 1877-1878, as Grand Secretary between 1879 and 1912, and as Grand High Priest of Royal Arch Masons in 1880-1881. Ok-la-ho-ma Lodge also had responsibility for the Masonic Orphan's Home which was located in Atoka between 1908-1910. The contributions and strength of the Atoka chapter were confirmed by the dedication of their new temple in 1915, the ceremonies of which were performed by "Father" Murrow. The present structure, then, symbolizes the role of the Ok-la-ho-ma Lodge in the formation and development of Masonry within the state.

The Masonic Temple property is also significant because it is of an architectural design unique to the community. Excepting one other building (the Zweigel & Weintraub Hardware Store), it is the only three story structure in the town, and it is by far the largest public and private building. Moreover, the integrity of its original design is largely unimpaired, except for the aluminum facade on the southern front along its lower story.

The property is also important because it is one of seven substantial buildings that still remains in "downtown" Atoka. As such it has considerable potential to community planners who seek to revive the commercial district. The lower floor has always been utilized by different business enterprises, the occupant with the longest tenure being the electric company--Public Service Company of Oklahoma.

Because it is symbolic of the birth and growth of Masonry in Indian Territory and Oklahoma, because it has a locally unique architectural design,
