Charles Foote House
Town of Pine Valley, Clark Co., WI

The Charles Foote house, located one-half mile east of Neillsville, is a two-story, soft red brick<sup>(1)</sup> Italianate styled house, built c.1878.<sup>(2)</sup> Situated next to Highway 10, the square plan building (roughly 30 feet x 30 feet) faces north and has a white picket fence bordering the highway. A brick walk leads from the gravel driveway, on the east, to the front entrance. A three-globed yard light is on the north side of the walkway. Several mature pines are just west of the house; an elm tree and a birch tree are between the brick walkway and the picket fence.

The property encompasses 3.43 acres of land and has three other buildings besides the house, all non-contributing. The non-contributing buildings are: a one-story 24' by 32' c.1992 garage, on the east side of the house; a square, 20' by 20' c.1942 garage now used as a chicken coop, adjacent to the east side of the house; a small milk house, 8' by 10', south of the house. The milk house is the only remnant still extant from the farm.

The low-pitched metal-clad hip and deck roof of the house is interrupted by a front-centered gable and by two red brick interior chimneys; one is on the east side and one on the west. When the original wood-shingled roof was replaced with metal in 1930, the short turned wood balustrade that originally encircled the deck was not replaced. The wide boxed eaves are supported by single and paired decorative brackets and a wide frieze band decorated with head blocks is placed below it.

The foundation measures 2'8"-tall on the exterior and is done in rusticated limestone block, 16" by 10" by 20", in a regular course. The foundation is interrupted by four segmental-arched windows that measure 2'3" by 2'9"; two on both the east and west elevations. There is an entrance to the basement on the east elevation that is sheltered by a gable-roofed frame entrance vestibule. The vestibule is 7'7" long by 6'1" wide with a connecting roof (not original) between the entrance and the c.1942 garage, now used as a chicken coop.

The two-story front (north elevation) porch is the outstanding architectural features of this house. The twenty-seven-foot-long lower porch is six-feet-wide and has a hipped roof of metal. Square corner posts are 3-1/2" in width with beveled corners and scrolled brackets at the top. The railing is 2'6" high with 50 decorative spindles. Below the porch eaves is a frieze of 7" high decorative spindles, uninterrupted.

The ten-foot-wide stairway leading up to the porch is centered, and has balustrades on either side identical to the porch balustrades. The porch ceiling is done in beaded board wainscot.

The main entrance to the house is once again a double door, with a single light in each door, and a single light transom. Until the recent restoration this was a single door with a transom filled with glass block. The double door entrance is a common architectural feature of Italianate styled houses.

The 6' x 6' second floor porch is still original and is centered on the wider lower porch roof. The east and west sides of this porch have solid balustrades that are clad with fish scale shape wood shingles. The front railing (north elevation) measures 2'6" in height and has 13 decorative balusters which duplicate those of the lower porch. The hip and deck roof has slopes clad in fishscale wood shingles and it is surmounted by a balustraded deck surrounded by 10" high balusters. An entrance to the second floor hall is accessible from and is sheltered by this upper porch. A portal window is found in the centered gable-roofed wall dormer that is placed above the second story porch.

The majority of the windows on the house are elongated, double hung, either single or paired, with segmental-arched openings having brick hoods. The wooden trim is painted white. The fenestration on the north elevation is symmetrical: one large window, with one light, measuring 6'6" in height and 5'8" in width, is on either side of the main entrance; the second story features two pairs of double hung windows that each measure 5'10" in height and 3'2" in width.

A rectangular-shaped one-story bay on the east elevation has a low-pitched hip and deck roof whose slopes are clad in wooden shingles, and which is topped by a balustrated deck and has brackets under its eaves, which mimic the ones on the upper porch. The bay measures 7'2" wide by 3'8" deep and contains a large window on the east which measures 6'6" in height and 5'4" in width and now has three horizontal lights. Single double hung windows are found on the north and south sides of the bay.

There is a single double hung window on the south end of the east-facing side elevation on both floors. A paired window is found over the rectangular bay.

The fenestration on the west-facing side elevation is symmetrical with two groups of paired windows on the first floor and two single windows on the second floor.

The second story of the south (rear) elevation has one single window on each end with a smaller bathroom window in the middle. An enclosed full-width porch on the south elevation measures 30' long x 6' wide. It has fourteen double hung windows with a single door entrance on the east elevation. This door leads to a deck that was added c.1992. The south porch has always been enclosed.

It has a metal roof and a wooden floor with beaded board wainscot on the ceiling.

The interior space is divided by a center hall and features four rooms on both floors. To the east of the central hall are two parlors; the front one is approximately 15-feet x 11-feet. The rear one is 13-feet x 11-feet. Behind the stairs in the hall is a tiny half bath only three feet wide. The west side of the house features a dining room the same size as the front parlor and a kitchen measuring 15-feet x 12-feet 6-inches.

The second floor rooms are similar in size to the main floor except for the two back bedrooms. A full bath was placed between the rooms with an entrance to the upper hall.

The outstanding architectural feature of the interior is the curved stair and balustrade leading to the second floor. Four massive turned newel posts with decorative trim on each corner and turned balusters ornament the oak stairway, which is 2'10" wide with ten stairs leading to the 2'8" by 2'7" sized landing. The stairway makes a 45 degree angle turn to the right and narrows to 2'5" and continues with six steps to the second floor. The stair rise is 7".

The woodwork in the house is oak and features 9" molding throughout; the window and door casings on both floors are identical. There are 5" x 5" corner blocks, having a bulls-eye motif, in the window and door frames.

All of the doors are four-panelled. There are two pocket doors, both leading from the central hall; one leads into the parlor and the other into the dining room. The openings are 7'5" in height and 5'2" in width.

The flooring is random 2-1/2" and 3-1/2" oak on the first floor. The second floor has 5-1/4" pine planking. The ceiling height is 9' on the first floor and 8'3" on the second floor.

The attic is accessed through a door in the ceiling of the bathroom. There are no closets in this house.

The Charles Foote house is an excellent example of the rural Italianate farm house. No major changes have been made to the architectural style of the house in the last 50 years and a recent small-scale restoration effort has returned a number of altered smaller features like the transom over the front entrance door (which was filled with glass block by an earlier owner) to their original state. Note: the black and white photos that accompany this nomination were taken just prior to some of the recent restoration work.

Today, the Foote house looks much the same as it does in historic photos of the house taken around the turn of the century.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for the National Register listing.)

- A Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
- B Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.
- D Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

(Mark "x" in all the boxes that apply.)

Property is:

- A owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes.
- B removed from its original location.
- C a birthplace or grave.
- D a cemetery.
- E a reconstructed building, object, or structure.
- F a commemorative property.
- G less than 50 years of age or achieved significance within the past 50 years.

Significance

The Charles Foote house is being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places for its architectural significance under Criteria C. The house, built c.1878, is a fine example of the Italianate style of architecture being constructed in the Midwest between the 1850s and 1880s. Neillsville has three other Italianate houses. Two are of clapboard; one is located at 306 Grand Avenue and the other at 404 State Street. The State Street house was originally a brick structure but at a later date it was changed to clapboard. The third house is of brick in a rural area outside of Neillsville at W5180 U.S. Hwy. 10 built in 1907 by D. Sack. (The front facade has been altered by the addition of the enclosed porch.) The Charles Foote house is the best example of a brick Italianate in Neillsville. The significant date is c.1878, the date of construction. It is nominated at the local level.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND:

Neillsville was first settled in June of 1845, when James and Henry O'Neil, E.L. Brockway, and Samuel F. and William Ferguson came from Black River. They had to cut the first road in order to get there. (3)

James O'Neil donated four acres for the establishment of the town in 1855, named in his honor. Clark County was established in 1854 and Neillsville became the county seat. (4)

Lumbering was the main reason for the settlement that began in earnest in 1848. The Black River passes through Neillsville from north to south and other streams enter the river in the Town of Pine Valley. Millions of feet of pine logs were annually floated down the river to the mills to be manufactured into lumber.

The first newspaper began publication in 1867 and was called The Clark County Journal.<sup>(5)</sup> From 1870 to 1900, Neillsville prospered and was a boom town with the arrival of the railroad in 1881 and also the urgent demand for lumber after the Chicago fire in 1871.<sup>(6)</sup>

Manufacturers sprang up as a result of the lumbering industry - a stair factory, wagon spoke factory, a turning lathe factory, and a sash and door factory.

Some fine buildings were constructed during this period such as the two story brick courthouse in the Italianate style, and a two-story high school, both in 1876 and both designed by architect C. J. Ross of LaCrosse, Wisconsin and both built with local brick, the same brick used in the Charles Foote house.

Neillsville was the second site in Wisconsin to get electricity in 1882.<sup>(7)</sup>

Charles Foote arrived in 1852 and the Robert Ross family, the family of his future wife, settled in the area in 1848.<sup>(8)</sup>

Charles immigrated to America in 1852 and settled for a time in Clark County in 1854. He worked in lumbering and farming. In 1861 he enlisted in Company I Fourteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. Foote was mustered out with the rank of Sergeant on October 9, 1865. He purchased 80 acres of land on which the home stands on December 7, 1865 for $700.00 from James Furlong.

Foote married Margaret Ross, daughter of Robert Ross, on October 21, 1866. Together they raised five children.

Foote became active in his community as treasurer of the township of Pine Valley. He was a stockholder and life member of the Clark County Agricultural Society, sponsors of the county fair.<sup>(9)</sup>

Charles Foote died March 17, 1902, and Margaret remained on the farm until 1909 when she sold it to their son, Oscar. Only nine months later Oscar sold the family farm to Joseph Chase.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE:

The Charles Foote house was constructed in the Italianate style in c.1878 and is located just outside the village of Neillsville. The house is being nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places for its local significance under Criterion C as fine, largely intact, and representative example of Italianate style residential design. It is also the best of the few examples of the Italianate style to be found in the Neillsville area.

According to The Cultural Resource Management Plan, "Italianate houses abound in Wisconsin and have distinctive wide eaves with numerous brackets, and gently sloping hipped or gable roofs. Typically square in plan with boxy proportions, these houses are also sometimes "L" shaped in plan and wrap around a square two or three-story tower. Frequently, windows have hood molds or even pediments, and sometimes they are round-headed. Bay windows are common as are balustrated balconies."<sup>(10)</sup>

The Italianate style was popular in the United States between 1840 - 1885. The style began in England as part of the Picturesque Movement; the houses in the United States usually followed the informal rural models. This was a reaction to the formal classical ideals in art and architecture that had been fashionable for almost two hundred years. It was popular at the same time as Gothic Revival. Because of the influential pattern book of Andrew Jackson Downing, however, published in the 1840s and 1850s, the Italianate style completely overshadowed Gothic Revival by the 1860s. The Italianate style was recommended by Downing as being both picturesque and practical. (11)

The Italianate style dominated American house construction between 1850 and 1880. It was particularly common in the expanding towns and cities of the Midwest. (12)

The Italianate style offers great freedom inside and it also had merit because it allowed for additions to be made without injuring the effect of the original structure. Although the Charles Foote house is not known to have been an architect-designed house it is notable that it was built during the same time period as the courthouse and school in Neillsville. Both of these buildings were built of the same material and both were designed by C. J. Ross. It has never been documented that C. J. Ross designed the Foote house, though.

The Charles Foote house deserves to be placed on the National Register of Historic Places because it is a fine example of a brick Italianate styled house; because the house has had no additions or significant alteration; and because the exterior is still in its original state. It is also the best example of brick Italianate style residence to be found in the Neillsville area.

ENDNOTES

1. This brick manufactured by King and Vine, was locally known as the "soft" brick. It was used in the Clark County Courthouse as well as the Charles Foote house. After the railroad arrived in Neillsville in 1881 a "harder" brick was imported.

The architect for the Courthouse was C. J. Ross. Mrs. Charles Foote, Margaret, was the daughter of Robert Ross, a very wealthy man of Neillsville who later moved to La Crosse. There is no evidence to document a relationship.

2. The date given for the house is c.1878. However, there seems to be a discrepancy in some of the architectural details. The turned spindles on both the exterior and interior railings are from the Queen Anne period, 1880 - 1900. The bulls-eye corner blocks found in the frieze and also the door and window casings as well as the fish scale shingles are also from the Queen Anne period. These are extemporaneous details that might have been added in a later modernization.

The c.1878 date fits the Italianate style being built during this period. In Neillsville the Clark County Courthouse was built in 1876 in the Italianate style and of the same brick. Edward King and F. J. Vine furnished the red brick for the Clark County Courthouse, 400,000 #1 brick. Edward King, whose father had been a brick maker in England, came to Neillsville to become a farmer. When his neighbor accidentally discovered the clay soil under the dark loam, King decided he would use the clay to become a brick maker.

The owners of the Charles Foote house, Michael and Patricia Lacey have documented the mortgages that Charles Foote took for the construction of the house. He purchased 80 acres on December 7, 1865 for $700 from James Furlong.

On December 26, 1877 a mortgage was taken out for $800, using the entire 240 acres of land. Another mortgage was taken on October 22, 1878, for $528.25, using 80 acres of the Charles Foote land satisfied from the December 26, 1877 mortgage, and 80 acres of his brother-in-law's land. Because of the time of year that the mortgage was taken, the owners feel that the money was not for crops. Because of the odd amount ($528.75) they feel that they needed that amount to finish paying for the construction of the house, or else to pay off bills incurred in the construction. The first mortgage was satisfied December 10, 1884 and the second mortgage satisfied August 21, 1880. Clark County Register of Deeds, Neillsville, WI. Clark County Courthouse.
