Section 7 (Physical/Architectural Description)

The City of Lancaster is a small city situated near the center of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. Laid out in a grid pattern, its streets radiate north, south, east and west from the centrally located Penn Square at the intersection of Queen Street and King Street (Pennsylvania Route 462). A natural boundary is formed by the Conestoga Creek to the south and east. The Lancaster City Historic District covers approximately three square miles of the city, and six small portions of Manheim Township. It includes the major thoroughfares of Queen Street and King Street and surrounding streets roughly bounded by Liberty Street to the north, Broad Street to the east, Greenwood Avenue to the south and Race Avenue to the west. Streets are bisected by an extensive system of alleys providing access to the rear of buildings and from street to street. The district contains 14,088 resources. Of the total resources, 13,411 of these are identified as contributing buildings and 606 are non-contributing buildings. There are 9 contributing sites, 6 contributing structures and 14 contributing objects. Of the 13,880 principal buildings, 13,209 are identified as residential, 368 as commercial, 181 as industrial and 122 as institutional. In addition to these contributing resources, the district includes 688 contributing resources in several individual properties and districts previously listed in the National Register. A list of these resources can be found at the end of this section. Previously listed districts include the Lancaster Historic District, as amended, with 539 contributing resources and several smaller tobacco-related industrial districts containing 50 contributing resources. Buildings are brick, frame, stone and log with an average scale of two to three-stories in height and three to five bays in width. While buildings in the district date from the 1760-1950 period of development, the majority of buildings in the district were constructed between 1860 and 1930. The integrity of the district is displayed in its large collection of contributing resources. While there are some intrusions of larger scale later twentieth century buildings, primarily in the central and north central sections of the district, the district maintains an overall cohesive eighteenth, nineteenth, and early twentieth century character. The majority of buildings retain architectural integrity although some have been altered with replacement windows and doors or the removal of ornamental trim. Many commercial buildings have altered storefronts but the majority of these have attained significance in their own right. A small number of residential buildings have original brick walls covered with synthetic materials such as "formstone" or vinyl siding. The predominant architectural styles include Queen Anne, Second Empire, Italianate, Colonial Revival, and restrained Late Victorian vernacular designs.

Overall appearance of the district is that of a small city with a central square or hub. Street patterns are regular with one way traffic traveling south on the central streets of Prince and Duke, Shippen and Charlotte while traffic travels one way north on Mulberry, Queen and Lime streets. One way traffic flows east on Chestnut and King streets and west on Walnut and Orange streets. Rail lines cross the northern edge of the district with spur lines entering at the northwest and northeast corners. The northwest, northeast and southeast quadrants of the district have a gentle grade, while the southwest section has a rolling topography.

The district contains a central business area, containing predominately three to four story commercial buildings and a few multi-story office buildings, in several blocks surrounding the central square. This area extends from Mifflin Street north to Lemon Street and from Lime Street west to Prince Street. Three blocks on the eastside of the central business area are contained in the previously listed Lancaster Historic District. Industrial areas are located primarily in the northwest section around West Liberty Street, along North Prince Street from Liberty to James Street, and in the south along South Prince Street from Hazel Street south. Other areas of scattered industrial activity are found in the primarily residential sections of the southwest along Manor Street and the northeast between New Holland Avenue and East Walnut Street. Residential neighborhoods surround the commercial center and the industrial areas of the district. Areas that are primarily residential include the north-central section, the eastern, southeastern and southwestern sections of the district.

Three main public parks are located in the district, Musser Park in the northeast of the central business area, Buchanan Park in the northwest and Reservoir Park in the east. In addition, 12 small playground or "pocket parks" are located in the district. Two squares are located in the district, the central Penn Square at the intersection of King and Queen streets and Lancaster Square, two blocks north of Penn Square, at the intersection of Queen and Chestnut streets. The Soldiers and Sailors Monument, commemorating the death of Lancaster County residents in the Civil War, is located in the center of Penn Square. Other public landscape features include sculptures in Reservoir Park, a fountain in Penn Square and two plazas in Lancaster Square. Five cemeteries are in the district in the northeast, southeast and western areas.

Although primarily clustered as previously described, residential, commercial, industrial and institutional buildings are present throughout the district. For residential buildings the scale is generally two to three stories in height and predominately three to five bays in width. Residential and commercial buildings are most often clustered densely within each block and most are set close together on small lots. Most buildings in the district are constructed with little to no setbacks and front directly on the sidewalk. Buildings are usually taller than they are wide, with window and door openings approximately two times as tall as they are wide. Steps, porches or stoops often extend into the public right of way. Building materials are predominately brick but there are a small number of frame and log buildings. (Photo 24) (Map 11)

Predominant architectural styles reflect those popular in the Victorian period and the early twentieth century, from the 1840's through the 1930s, when the greatest amount of building occurred in the district. The Italianate, Romanesque, Second Empire, Gothic Revival, Queen Anne and Colonial Revival styles are reflected in residential, commercial, industrial and institutional buildings. Also present in smaller numbers are the Georgian, Federal, Classical Revival, Renaissance Revival, Beaux Arts, Art Deco and Art Moderne styles.

Although less in number, several Georgian style buildings remain in the district. Constructed in 1780, the Michael Musser House, at 323 West King Street, features a pedimented doorway, dentilled cornice, beltcourse and keystones over the windows. (Photo 31) (Map 8) Other, Georgian style buildings include the Heritage Center at the central square (Photo 11) (Map 8), the Miller-Yeates Mansion on South Queen Street and the Sehner-Ellicott House at 123 North Prince Street, all listed on the National Register.

Federal style buildings are also located in the district. The National Register listed William Montgomery House at 19-21 South Queen Street has an altered first floor but Federal style details can be seen in the cornice, parapeted chimney and oval rooms on the second and third floors. Examples include 105 South Queen Street, the Freeman House and 131 East Chestnut Street a brick dwelling with characteristics of the Federal style in the dormer windows and door surround. (Photo 14) (Map 8)

Residential buildings are generally two to three stories and three bays wide with asymmetrical facades and moderately-pitched or lateral gable roofs. A smaller number of one-story dwellings constructed of log, frame or brick are found in the district. Rowhouses are the dominant residential building form. Constructed principally of brick and generally three bays in width and two and one-half stories in height, rowhouses in the district feature both plain facades and porches supported by a variety of styles of pillars and posts. The majority of rowhouses date from the 1870-1930 period and have characteristics of the Queen Anne or Italianate styles. A smaller but still significant number of rowhouses date from the early twentieth century and are constructed in or feature characteristics of the Colonial Revival style. A small percentage of contributing residential buildings have been covered with synthetic siding materials including "formstone," vinyl and aluminum siding. Although in some cases ornamental woodwork has been removed or covered with synthetic materials, these buildings continue to retain integrity in their simplified form. (Photos 35) (Map 8), (Photo 33) (Map 7)

Several Italianate style mansions are located in the district including the John R. Bitner Mansion at 416 North Duke Street and the John S. Rohrer Mansion at 402 North Queen Street. The Rohrer Mansion, constructed for a founder of the Fulton Bank, is a symmetrical Italianate building with decorative window hoods, wide eaves with brackets and a cupola. (Photo 8) (Map 5) The district contains many rowhouses that are good examples of this style, with tall narrow, often arched windows, heavily bracketed cornices and low-pitched or flat roofs. (Photo 35) (Map 8)

Another popular style is the Queen Anne style with multiple gable roofs, towers, turrets and textured wall surfaces. Characteristics of the style are found on many more buildings especially simple rowhouses. (Photo 2) (Map 2), (Photo 29) (Map 11) Examples of the Queen Anne style in rowhouses include those found in the 600 block of East King Street. These buildings feature bays on the second story, ornamented dormers, swags and pressed brick ornamentation. (Photo 17) (Map 9)

Many rowhouses in the district reflect a restrained interpretation of Italianate and other Victorian styles. The buildings on the 600 block of West Lemon Street illustrate the popular vernacular interpretation with three bays, two and one-half stories, segmental arched window openings, semi-circular transom over the door and gable dormer window in the side-facing, moderate pitch gable roof. Buildings with elements of all the popular late-nineteenth century styles are present in the district. (Photo 37) (Map 7)

Single dwellings also display a variety of popular late-nineteenth century styles including Second Empire style. Illustrating this style are 439 North Duke Street, 442 and 444 South Queen Street with projecting central pavilion, arched window openings with hood molds and mansard roof. (Photos 6) (Map 5) (Photo 23) (Map 11) The Second Empire influence is also seen in rowhouse designs with many rowhouses displaying mansard roofs and wall dormers.

The most prevalent single architectural style in the district is Colonial Revival with 3,251 buildings illustrating characteristics of the style. The large number of buildings in the Colonial Revival style show the popularity of the style in the district and the large amount of building that occurred in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Residential areas of the northeast and northwest portions of the district contain a large number of rowhouses and duplexes with the classical ornament, paired windows and porches supported by classical columns typical of this style. (Photo 1) (Map 2), (Photo 5) (Map 6)

Commercial buildings are usually three stories in height and constructed of brick with flat, low pitched or lateral gable roofs. A few buildings are four to five stories high. Most commercial buildings are three to five bays in width. Many combine residential and commercial uses with an altered first floor storefront and intact upper residential floors. Some commercial buildings have twentieth century synthetic materials covering the first floor façade. The majority of these buildings were constructed in the 1850-1930 period with a few late eighteenth and early-mid nineteenth century commercial buildings present in the district. Architectural styles present in commercial buildings in the district include Italianate, Renaissance Revival, Queen Anne, Beaux Arts, Georgian Revival, Art Deco and Commercial Style. The National Register listed Greist Building, a multi-story "skyscraper" constructed in 1925, is located in the district. (Photo 11) (Map 8) In addition to stores and banks the district contains markethouses including Western Market and Fulton Market. (Photo 4) (Map 5)

Italianate and Queen Anne elements are present on many commercial buildings in the district. Commercial buildings on North Prince and King streets display a variety of characteristics including projecting cornices with paired brackets, arched window openings with hood molds and mansard roofs. (Photo 12) (Map 8), (Photo 15) (Map 9) The Miller and Hartman Building at 23 West Chestnut Street is a cast iron storefront with Queen Anne style details. (Photo 9), (Map 8) The National Register listed Southern Market is another example of this style with detailed pressed brick on the eastern façade.

The Art Deco style is present in the Shaub Shoe Store at 20 North Queen Street. This concrete building features sculptural ornament at the cornice, bronzed metal enframing the second floor windows and an octoganal hanging lamp. The National Register listed Lancaster Newspapers, Inc building at 8 West King Street is another example of the Art Deco style. (Photo 10) (Map 8)

Another typical form of commercial building is the neighborhood store or tavern most commonly found on street corners. These are often converted residential buildings or buildings constructed for a dual residential/commercial purpose. Displaying a range of popular late-nineteenth and early twentieth century styles these commercial buildings are located throughout the district. (Photos 15) (Map 9), (Photo 21) (Map 11), (Photo 30) (Map 10)

Industrial buildings, while located throughout the district, are mainly concentrated in the areas where railroad lines historically bisected the city. A majority of these are three to five story warehouse and factory buildings. The district includes a large concentration of tobacco warehouses and a smaller number of other industrial buildings from the cork, candy, brewing, umbrella and clock industries. The district's tobacco related resources are part of a multiple property nomination, completed in 1990, that includes 64 buildings. Industrial buildings are predominantly brick and three to five stories in height. The National Register listed Conestoga Steam Cotton Works, in the 200 block of South Prince Street, is a complex of brick factory buildings, constructed between 1845 and 1910. (Photo 27) (Map 11) These buildings include Mill #2, a Romanesque Revival three-story building. Although industrial buildings are located throughout the district a large percentage are concentrated in the northwest section of the district including a large complex of cork manufacturing buildings. The General Cigar Company building, at 449 S. Lime Street, is an example of the utilitarian design of most industrial buildings. (Photo 20) (Map 9) The majority of industrial resources date from the 1880-1930 period. The Posey Iron Works office building at 560 South Prince Street is an example of the popular Neo-Classical Revival style. (Photo 26) (Map 14) Architectural styles are generally vernacular interpretations of popular revival styles including Queen Anne, Classical Revival and other more utilitarian designs. (Photos 30) (Map 10), (Photo 40) (Map 2)

Institutional buildings include churches, schools and government buildings and are located throughout the district. These are usually two to three stories in height and constructed of brick or stone. Government buildings include the City Hall building on North Duke Street, 1891-1892 and portions of the Lancaster County Prison, 1851. Architectural styles for these institutional buildings include Beaux Arts, Roman Revival and Norman Revival styles.

Religious buildings reflect the district's period of significance and the architectural preferences of the residents. The district includes St. Mary's Catholic Church, constructed in 1852/1867, Temple Shaarai Shamoyim (Photos 7) (Map 5),, 1895-1896 and Bethel A.M.E. Church, circa 1880 (Photo 22) (Map 11). Dominant characteristics include brick as the building material and front-facing gable orientation of the design. Gothic Revival and Romanesque Revival are the most predominant styles for these religious buildings. (Photo 3) (Map 3), (Photo 28) (Map 11)

Many educational buildings are located in the district. These include college, high school and grade school buildings. Constructed mostly in the late 1800's and early 1900's, educational buildings in the district are generally two to three story, brick buildings. Predominant architectural styles include Gothic Revival, Georgian Revival and Colonial Revival designs. The Thaddeus Stevens Trade School building, now part of the Thaddeus Stevens College of Technology, at 750 East King Street shows the popularity of revival styles even into the early twentieth century. (Photo 18) (Map 12)

The only transportation related building remaining in the district is the Pennsylvania Railroad Station on McGovern Avenue, constructed in 1929, in the Classical Revival style.

Several cemeteries are located in the district. These include the Lancaster Cemetery and St. Mary's Cemetery in the northeast section of the district. These adjacent cemeteries are surrounded by a late nineteenth century cast iron fence. The Lancaster Cemetery is constructed with winding paths around curving sections containing a large number of late nineteenth and early twentieth century markers and monuments. The Concord-Shreiner Cemetery on West Chestnut Street is a small mid-nineteenth century graveyard surrounded by a cast iron fence and containing markers and monuments laid in a regular pattern. The Woodward Hill, Zion Lutheran and Greenwood cemeteries are in the southeast area of the district. Woodward Hill features curving paths, covers approximately thirty-two acres on a rolling hillside, and contains a brick, Gothic style chapel building. Zion Lutheran Cemetery is located at the northern edge of Woodward Hill. Greenwood Cemetery is located to the south of Woodward Hill Cemetery across Chesapeake Street. The National Register listed Lancaster Crematorium is located in Greenwood Cemetery.

Contributing resources in the district reflect the City of Lancaster's growth over the period from 1760-1950. With 13,440 contributing resources and 648 non-contributing resources, the district has historical and architectural integrity. The district displays an overall cohesiveness, with blocks of nineteenth century resources not adversely effected by the few intrusions of late twentieth century buildings, some of which may be considered contributing resources in the future.

Non-contributing resources in the district include those constructed after the period of significance, as well as some resources constructed before 1950. Non-contributing resources constructed before 1950 are classified as non-contributing because extensive alterations have irreparably altered the integrity of the resource. For example, a residential building could be considered non-contributing if the building has had a large amount of historic materials permanently altered or removed in such a way as to obscure the original form, shape and design of the building. Non-contributing resources are 3% of the total number in the district. The majority of these are mid-twentieth century residential and commercial buildings constructed as part of the Urban Renewal program. The largest concentration of non-contributing buildings is around the intersection of Queen and Chestnut streets. In the late 1960's much of the two blocks bounded by North Prince and North Duke, Orange and Chestnut streets was razed and replaced with a modern office building, hotel, department store, plaza and parking garages. With a total of 96% contributing resources, the district clearly conveys its historical and architectural integrity.

8: Statement of Significance

The City of Lancaster Historic District meets National Register criterion A for significance in industry, commerce, community planning and development and politics/government and criterion C for significance in architecture. Commerce and industry developed the area into a thriving city from the 1860's to the present. The architectural significance of the district lies in its many residential, commercial, industrial and institutional buildings that reflect the development of the city and the regionally popular styles and types of architecture in the period from 1760-1950. This period is significant because it encompasses the district's greatest period of growth as an industrial, commercial and governmental center in Lancaster County. This nomination primarily discusses these criteria as they apply to the district as a whole. In addition to these areas of significance other areas of significance are reflected in the district's previously listed individual properties and districts. Additional areas of significance contributed by these resources under criterion A include, education, philosophy, engineering, law, agriculture, social history, communications, entertainment, invention, art and military history and are discussed in the subsection "Other Areas of Significance."

Historical Narrative

In 1735 lands that became part of the City of Lancaster were patented from the Penn family to James Hamilton, the son of Andrew Hamilton. In 1730, Andrew Hamilton had laid out a grid of streets radiating from a center square at the intersection of King and Queen streets. Also included in his plan were Duke, Prince, Orange, Water and Vine streets. Several buildings including a courthouse and a jail were constructed before 1734 as the Hamiltons had already begun selling lots. The town plan sited the courthouse and a market house on the square. The Hamilton portions of the district include the center and parts of the northwest. Land to the west, southwest, east, southeast and north were owned by other landowners during this period.[1]

Lancaster was incorporated as a borough in 1742. As the eighteenth century progressed, the area encompassed by the district continued to grow. The area called Mussertown, to the southeast of Hamilton's land, was laid out by owner John Musser in 1760-1762 and was a major addition, mostly developed by 1824. For thirteen years, from 1799 to 1812, Lancaster was the capital of Pennsylvania. The City was incorporated in 1818.

Because King Street was part of the Old Philadelphia Pike leading to Wright's Ferry, and routes to Maryland and northern Pennsylvania also came through the City, the area became a stop for travelers and settlers. Commerce increased as Lancaster became, for about forty years, the largest inland town in America. The first paved road in America, the Lancaster and Philadelphia Turnpike, also enhanced commerce in the district. However, by the early 1800's Lancaster had lost some of its commercial importance. The further settlement of Pennsylvania had increased trade in other areas of the state and impacted commerce in the district.

Industry began to grow in the district with the arrival of the railroad in 1834. From the mid to the late-nineteenth century industries flourished in the district and the population grew. Between 1830 and 1860 the population of the city had grown from 7,704 to 17,603. Industries that flourished included cloth mills, cork production of umbrellas. Other industries from the late-nineteenth to the early twentieth centuries include brewing, candy, carriages and wagons, architectural and ornamental ironwork, and watches.

With the increases in industry came an increase in commerce. Retailing, concentrated in the center of the district, grew with the increase of population and the results of the industrial revolution. In the 1870's the Woolworth five and ten cent store was founded by Frank W. Woolworth on North Queen Street. Department stores such as Hager's, Garvin's and Watt and Shand's flourished in the central business areas on King and Queen streets. Banks and office buildings were also constructed in this part of the district.

As the County seat, Lancaster was also the site of government buildings such as the County Courthouse and the Lancaster County Prison on East King Street and the Post Office building on North Duke Street. Schools, theatres and churches were constructed as the economy prospered through the late 1800's and into the early 1900's.

As industry and commerce transformed areas of the district, the demand for residential housing increased. Existing, predominantly one-story, residential buildings were replaced by new brick rowhouses and duplexes designed to meet the needs of factory and mill workers. Larger single residences for wealthier families were constructed in the north-central part of the district. (Photo 6, 8) Around the central business district and the areas of industrial buildings, residential buildings, predominantly rowhouses, filled the remaining undeveloped areas. (Photo 2) (Map 2), (Photo 17) (Map 9), (Photo 19) (Map 12), (Photos 32, 33, 34) (Map 7), (Photo 37) (Map 4)

Although development occurred in an outward movement from the center, there are few clearly definable neighborhoods. One of these is Cabbage Hill, an area of development in the southwest part of the district. Consisting mostly of late nineteenth century rowhouses this area is also geographically distinctive with long blocks of residences ascending the side of a hill. (Photo 29) (Map 10) Another example, the northeast portion of the district, was developed with rowhouses and a markethouse in the early twentieth century. This growth of various neighborhoods continued through the first third of the twentieth century as industry remained strong. (Photo 4) (Map 5), (Photo 5) (Map 6)

The end of World War II provided a turning point in the history of the district. Post-war suburbanization, aided by federally funded mortgages and housing developments for veterans and investments in infrastructure resulted in a gradual migration of commercial activities to the outlying areas of Lancaster County. In the 1960's and 1970's, urban renewal programs had some effect on the district as several blocks of North Queen Street were razed and replaced with large office, hotel and parking garage buildings. Portions of South Duke Street were also razed under these programs. Although the industrial boom of the late-nineteenth and early twentieth century ended and several important mills and factories closed or moved to different locations, the district still maintained several important industries into the second half of the twentieth century. These included Armstrong Corporation in the northwest part of the district and the Hamilton Watch Company.

Although some new construction occurred in the district, the late twentieth century was a period of gradual loss of commercial and industrial activity in the district. With the closure of the last downtown department store in the early 1990's, commercial activity in the center of the district declined significantly. Conversions of residential property from owner occupied to rental housing increased through the last two decades of the 1900's. At the present time, the district continues to experience the effects of the movement of commercial and industrial activity to the outlying suburban areas. The district remains a center for local government with the Lancaster County courthouse and other offices for local County government. The proposed conversion of the National Register listed Watt and Shand Department Store building to a hotel and the construction of a new convention center are scheduled to take place in the next two to three years.

Industry

The Lancaster City Historic District is significant as an example of the importance of industry to the growth of cities in Pennsylvania. The district is significant as the largest industrial center in Lancaster County from the 1870's through the 1920's. Although other Lancaster County communities benefited from industrial development, the Lancaster City Historic District area developed more industries and grew more rapidly.

Prior to the arrival of the railroad in 1834, the growth of Lancaster was modest. Because Lancaster did not have any waterways navigable by large ships, distribution of manufactured goods on a large scale was not practical until after rail transportation was available. The arrival of the railroad enabled goods produced locally to reach a wider market. After the 1830's, industry became one of the main forces driving the development of the district. In 1847 the Conestoga Steam Cotton Works began what was to become by 1860 one of the district's most important industries. The National Register listed Steam Cotton Works buildings are located in the district on South Prince Street. Not only of local significance, these mills produced more than 80% of the canvas and other cloth used by the Union army during the Civil War. By the 1880's the Steam Cotton Works employed more workers in the district than any other industry. (Photo 27) (Map 11)

Other boroughs and towns in Lancaster County also developed as areas of industry in the last half of the nineteenth century. Like the City of Lancaster, the communities of Columbia, Manheim and Mount Joy grew with the development of a variety of industries. The Bridgens Atlas of Lancaster County of 1864 shows the Lancaster City Historic District containing several industries: the Conestoga Steam Cotton Works, a gas works, locomotive works, foundries and a leather factory. The atlas also shows the industries of other Lancaster County towns including Columbia, with a gas works, planing mill, rolling mill and water works; Manheim with planing mills; and Mount Joy, with three foundries and a railroad car factory.

By 1875 the area encompassed by the district was a thriving center of manufacturing that surpassed the other Lancaster County communities. The 1875 Historical Atlas of Lancaster County Pennsylvania illustrates an increase in industrial buildings, especially in the central and northern parts of the district. The Conestoga Steam Cotton Works complex doubled in size. In contrast, Columbia and Mount Joy, while adding some additional industries, experienced far less growth.

The Tenth United States Census of 1880, Report on Manufactures lists the City of Lancaster as one of the 100 principal cites in the United States for manufacturing activity. This census shows that the production of cotton goods was the largest industrial activity, employing 1,461 workers with production valued at $1,654,132.[2]

The census of 1880 also shows the importance of tobacco related industry in the historic district. With an abundant supply of locally grown tobacco, cigar production and tobacco warehousing became important components of local industry. With a value of $230,000 the production of cigars, cigarettes and other tobacco products was significant at this time. Manheim Borough and other Lancaster County communities also boasted tobacco related industries but none matched the volume of production found in the Lancaster City Historic District. The high concentration of tobacco warehouses and manufacturing buildings in the district illustrate the significance of the industry, an industry that continued to flourish throughout the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The warehouses at 717 and 723 North Prince Street (photo 40) (Map 2) and the General Cigar Company building at 449 South Lime Street (Photo 20) (Map 9), are typical of tobacco related buildings in the district. Many of the existing tobacco related buildings in the district are individually listed on the National Register or are included in the North Prince Street Historic District, the North Charlotte Street Historic District, The Harrisburg Avenue Tobacco Historic District, the Eisenlohr-Bayuk Tobacco Historic District, the North Shippen-Tobacco Avenue Historic District, the Teller Brothers-Reed Tobacco Historic District, or the "Tobacco Buildings of Lancaster City" Multiple Property listing.

The late nineteenth to early twentieth century period saw growth in other industries. Confectionery production played a significant role in the district at this time. As noted in the Tenth Census, seven establishments employed 46 workers and produced $67,000 of goods in the district in 1880. By 1990, census records showed 25 confectionery producers, employing 712 workers and producing goods valued at $885,446 were operating in the district. Examples of confectionery manufacturing buildings include the Frantz Candy Factory, part of the National Register listed Lancaster Historic District, located at 131-135 East Grant Street.

The cork industry was also important in the district. Begun in 1860, the Conestoga Cork Works was joined by the Lancaster Cork Works in 1875. By 1883 cork production had also become a significant industry. The National Register listed Conestoga Cork Works building is located at 215-235 East Fulton Street. The 1895 merger of the Conestoga Cork Works and Lancaster Cork Works with Pittsburg's Armstrong Brothers Company in 1895 created the Armstrong Cork Company. Later converted to a floor covering and insulation manufacturer, the Armstrong Company's early twentieth century complex of buildings is located at 313 West Liberty Street. (Photo 39) (Map 1)

The Census of 1880 also showed the importance of iron foundries in the district. At that time, foundries in the district produced goods valued at $184,000 and employed 171 workers. By 1900 foundry and machine shop products were valued at $362,694 and employing 232 workers. Ironwork continued to be an important industry in the district in the early twentieth century. The Posey Ironworks, 560 South Prince Street flourished in the early years of the twentieth century supplying iron parts for military and naval applications in World War I and II. (Photo 26) (Map 14)

Umbrella manufacturing became an important industry in the early 1900's. The United States Census of 1900 shows that umbrella production in the district employed 1,187 workers and the value of products produced was $2,694,200. By the 1920's Lancaster 's umbrella production was greater than that of any other city in the United States. The National Register listed Follmer, Clogg and Company Umbrella Factory building is located in the district at 254-260 West King Street.[3]

Other major late-nineteenth and early twentieth century industries added to the prosperity of the district. Industries such as watch and clock production, carriage and wagon works, and soap-making employed workers throughout the district. With the strong and rapid growth of industry, Lancaster City prospered. High rates of employment led to increased demands for residential housing and commercial goods.

With its large number of industrial buildings, the Lancaster City Historic District illustrates the development of the primary center of industry in Lancaster County. Listed as one of the 100 principal manufacturing cities in the United States Census of 1880, 1890 and 1900, the district is significant as a center for industry in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Commerce

The district, with its large number of commercial buildings, is significant as the largest commercial area of Lancaster County. From its beginnings as an inland town in the 1700's, the district was an important commercial hub for farmers in the county and travelers through the region. With the growth of retailing, banking, entertainment and education outlets throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, Lancaster became the commercial center of the county.

The central business area of the district, within several blocks of the central square, developed from a mixed residential and commercial area in the late 1700's to an area of three-story brick commercial buildings by the 1870's. Like the communities of Manheim and Columbia, the district's greatest period of commercial growth was in the mid-late nineteenth century. Like the Manheim Borough, the district's commercial growth is correlated to the arrival of the railroad and the growth of industry. But, compared to other towns in the county, the Lancaster City Historic District developed the largest commercial area.

Set in the center of a rich agricultural region, Lancaster's central square has been the site of farmer's markets for about 250 years. As the prosperity of the mid-late 1800's continued, markets were constructed in various areas of the district, including the National Register listed buildings: Southern Market on South Queen Street, Eastern Market on East King Street and the Central Market at Penn Square. (Photo 11) (Map 8)

The growth of retailing is one of the most significant aspects of commerce to the district. Stores flourished in the central blocks of Queen and King streets including the development of several large department stores. In addition to the founding of Woolworth's in the 1870's, the establishment of the Watt and Shand Department Store in the late 1800's and the Hager Department Store in the early 1900's helped to make Lancaster an even more important commercial center.

Newspaper production was also a commercial endeavor in the district. The New Era Printing Company, once located in the building at 39-41 North Queen Street, evolved into other publishing businesses. (Photo 12) (Map 8)

Banking played a part in the development of the district. With the growth of the area, banks constructed several buildings in the district including the Lancaster Trust building at 37-41 North Market Street. Banking still continues to play a prominent role in the local economy with the largest concentration of banks in Lancaster County located in the central business district.

Community Planning and Development

The district is significant in the area of community planning and development. From the initial Hamilton street plan of the City with a central community space, Penn Square, at the intersection of principal roads, to the decentralization of urban functions by the advent of the automobile, the district illustrates the effects of community planning. As detailed in David Schuyler's "The Evolution of Center City Lancaster," the district's development reflects some of the same changes of form as larger metropolitan areas in the same time period. The district illustrates how community planning ideas guided the development of a small city.

After the initial period of development as a commercial and governmental center in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries waned with the moving of the capital to Harrisburg, district residents began to plan development for economic recovery and stability. These early planning attempts continued and became more important as the nineteenth century progressed. Like other cities, Lancaster planned for the economic revitalization of the city in the 1830's and 1840's by the promotion of centrally located transportation technology and industry. In 1837, a publicly owned pumping station provided a reliable source of clean water for city residents. Merchants and civic leaders recognized the importance of having important public buildings in the city and planned for them. Planning for the public interest determined the location of the new County Courthouse less than a block from the central square.

Community planning concerns in the mid-1800's guided the placement of other public buildings such as the Lancaster County Prison building at the eastern end of King Street, removed from central residential neighborhoods and in a rural area thought to be more conducive to reform. The importance of planning to maintain social order also resulted in the creation of a municipal police force in 1867. The importance of memorializing historic events for the education and affirmation of the public led to the construction of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument in 1874.

The transportation innovation of the streetcar in the 1870-1890 period and the introduction of telephone service and electrical power in the 1880's allowed the formerly centralized residential areas to move to the outer edges of the district. The streetcar also allowed people from everywhere in the county to easily visit, shop, and work in the center city without having to live there. This trend was accelerated by the introduction of the automobile. The impact of the automobile directed community planning in the district in the early twentieth century and in 1929 Lancaster's business and civic leaders commissioned John Nolen to create a comprehensive plan for development. Nolen's plan suggested widening streets to accommodate automobile traffic and extending the roads into undeveloped areas around the city. The decentralization caused by planning for the automobile continued through the period of World War II. By the 1950's and 1960' s the renewal of building stock in the district was seen as an important problem and city planning innovations impacted the district through "urban renewal" demolitions and new construction in the central business area.

innovations impacted the district through "urban renewal" demolitions and new construction in the central business area.

The desire to preserve older and historic buildings in the district led to an interest in historic preservation planning which is illustrated in the rehabilitation of buildings in parts of the district previously listed on the National Register. The "New Comprehensive Plan for the City of Lancaster" issued in 1993 continues the role of community planning in the development of the City of Lancaster. The Lancaster City Historic District is significant as an illustration of the effects of community planning on the development of a small city.[4]

Architecture

The City of Lancaster Historic District is also significant in the area of architecture. Buildings in the district illustrate differences of style, scale and building materials of the most popular architectural styles from the period of significance, 1760-1950. These buildings include those from the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries and illustrate both high style and vernacular types. With a large concentration of buildings from the late nineteenth to early twentieth century the district is a significant example of architectural styles of that period. Although other Lancaster County communities contain buildings from the eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the district contains a significantly larger number of buildings from the entire period.

The district is significant for the large number and variety of Victorian styles illustrated in over 10,300 residential, industrial and commercial buildings. Styles represented in the district include Italianate, Queen Anne, Second Empire, and Gothic Revival in both high style and simplified interpretations. While the boroughs of Columbia, Manheim and Mount Joy contain buildings of these styles, the district contains a larger number of buildings constructed in these Victorian styles than any other Lancaster County community.

Also significant is the large number of Colonial Revival style buildings in the district. With 3,251 buildings illustrating characteristics of the style, the district contains a larger number of Colonial Revival style buildings than other Lancaster County communities. (Photo 1) (Map 2), (Photo 5) (Map 6)

Several notable architects designed buildings in the district. Nationally known architect, Samuel Sloan designed the National Register listed Fulton Opera House on North Prince Street. Stephen Hills, who designed the capitol in Jefferson City, Missouri and the first capital building in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania designed the National Register listed William Montgomery House on South Queen Street. The work of locally prominent architects is also significant in the district. Many buildings in the central business district are the work of C. Emlen Urban. Among these are the Watt and Shand building, Southern Market and the Greist Building at 8 North Queen Street, the only skyscraper in the district, all listed on the National Register. (Photo 11) (Map 8) The Art Deco style Shaub Shoe Store, at 18 North Queen Street, was designed by local architect Henry Shaub.

With many and varied examples of the popular architectural styles of the period of significance, the Lancaster City Historic District illustrates the development of architecture in a small Pennsylvania city. As in the district, many communities in Lancaster County were founded in the eighteenth century and twentieth centuries, the district presents a valuable collection of building types and styles from the entire period of significance. The large concentration of buildings from the district's greatest period of growth, 1850-1940, significantly illustrates popular late nineteenth and early twentieth century urban architecture. With over 13,800 buildings from this period, the district represents the largest collection of buildings from this period in any Lancaster County community.

Politics/Government

As the county seat for Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, the district is significant for its governmental resources including courthouse, post office, city hall and prison buildings. The National Register listed Lancaster County Courthouse building is located in the district at 50 North Duke Street. This building was designed by nationally known architect Samuel Sloan in 1852 and has been in continuous use as a courthouse since that time.[5]

The National Register listed Old City Hall building, located in Penn Square, was constructed in 1795-1797 and used as state offices around 1800 to 1812 before becoming City Hall from 1854 to 1930. (Photo 11) (Map 8)

Other government buildings in the district include the present City Hall at 120 North Duke Street. Designed as a post office by Will A. Freret in the Venetian Renaissance style, this building was constructed 1891-1892. When a new post office was constructed in 1931 at 48 West Chestnut Street, the old building was remodeled as the Municipal Building/City Hall.

The oldest portion of the Lancaster County Prison, designed in 1851 by nationally known prison architect John Haviland, is located at 625 East King Street.

Other Areas of Significance

Several additional areas of significance are contributed to the district by the following individually National Register listed or eligible resources.

Agriculture

- Tobacco resources, located throughout the district and included in the "Tobacco Buildings of Lancaster City" multiple property nomination are significant for agriculture for their relationship with the surrounding Lancaster County agricultural economy.

Art

- Demuth, H.C. Cigar and Snuff Factory, 114-116 East King Street, is significant for art for its association with noted modern artist Charles Demuth.

- Steven's High School, northeast corner of West Chestnut and Charlotte streets, is significant for education as the first public girls' high school in Lancaster County that offered all the major educational facilities available to boys.

- Old Main, Diagnothean Hall and Goethean Hall, Franklin and Marshall College Campus, are significant in the areas of education and philosophy. These are original buildings of Franklin and Marshall College an institution originating as Franklin College, the oldest inland college in the United States and Marshall College, one of the first colleges to combine German philosophical idealism with American humanitarian enlightenment.

Entertainment/Performing Arts

- Fulton Opera House, 12-14 North Prince Street, is significant for performing arts as "one of the finest small town theaters on the circuit of professional touring companies" from 1852-1930.

Military History

- Soldiers and Sailors Monument, located in Penn Square is significant for its commemoration of Lancaster County's contribution to military service in the Civil War.

- The Lancaster Armory, 438 North Queen Street, has military significance as part of the multiple property nomination: Pennsylvania National Guard Armories.

Social History

- Lancaster Crematorium, located in the district in Greenwood Cemetery, is significant in the area of social history as the crematorium for the Lancaster Cremation and Funeral Reform Society, the first public cremation society in the United States offering to serve anyone regardless of geographic location.

- The Hamilton Apartments, 247-249 North Duke Street and 104-118 East Walnut Street is significant in the area of social history as the first building in the district originally designed and constructed to be an apartment building.

Conclusion

The Lancaster City Historic District is significant in the areas of industry, commerce, government and architecture. The district reflects the development of Lancaster from eighteenth century through the first half of the twentieth century. The large concentration of mid-to-late nineteenth and early twentieth century industrial, commercial, and residential buildings presents the image of a small city created by the industrial and commercial boom of that period. The presence of a number of buildings constructed in popular eighteenth and early nineteenth century architectural styles illustrates the district's importance to the development of Lancaster County during the post-Revolutionary period, when the City of Lancaster was the largest inland town in the United States.

The district illustrates the importance of the industry and commerce that fueled the development of cities in Pennsylvania. The architecture reflects the broad range of popular styles throughout the history of the city. With a high percentage of mid-late nineteenth century residential, commercial and industrial buildings, the district stands as an important collection of popular styles of that period.

Geographic Information

Boundary Description:

Boundaries of the Lancaster City Historic District are indicated on the accompanying maps entitled "Lancaster City Historic District", maps 1-12, 14-17 (map 13 not included as the area is not inside the historic district) drawn at a scale of 1" = 150'.

Boundary Justification:

The boundary contains the entire area of the City of Lancaster which contributes to the period of significance of the nomination (1760-1945). The boundary excludes concentrations of properties that do not contribute to the district's historical or architectural significance. The city boundary generally delineates the outermost edges of the district. Six small portions of Manheim Township are isolated within the city boundary at the northern and eastern ends of the district and are included within the district boundary.

Planimetric and topographic data compiled photogrammetrically to National Map Accuracy Standards for 1" = 200' (Lancaster County) and 1" = 50' (City of Lancaster) scale mapping using first-order fully-analytical digital stereoplotters, from aerial photography dated April 1999, controlled analytically from ground points captured using first-order global positioning system equipment. Topographic contours and elevations were derived using a digital terrain model. Elevations are referenced to the North American Vertical Datum of 1929. Planimetric coordinates were based on the Pennsylvania State Plane Coordinate System South Zone and North American Datum 1983.

The Lancaster City Historic District is located in the City of Lancaster, the county seat of Lancaster County, PA. Listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 2001, the historic district is an intact collection of the many public, religious, residential, commercial, and industrial buildings concentrated within a three square mile area of the city. These resources delineate the historical and architectural development from a Colonial-era town to a mid-sized city during the period between 1760-1950. The purpose of this additional documentation is to explain the architectural significance of the district through 1956, the fifty-year guideline for significance in the National Register Program. The extended period of significance will change the status of 48 buildings, classified previously as non-contributing. The revised resource counts for the historic district includes 13,459 contributing buildings, nine contributing sites, six contributing structures, fourteen contributing objects, 558 non-contributing buildings, 40 non-contributing sites, one contributing structures, and one contributing object. The buildings constructed during the period of 1950 to 1956 demonstrate emerging trends in American architecture. In addition to new buildings constructed during this time period, the extended period of significance brought a new period of rehabilitation as many buildings were remodeled using new materials of the time. These resources retain integrity as they are well maintained and the majority of their historic architectural elements are intact.

The Lancaster City Historic District's 1950s era resources were constructed principally as infill surrounded by the city's most numerous nineteenth century buildings. Because of this, new construction within the district dating from the 1950s is generally well dispersed. There are several pockets of residential development within the district with concentrations of buildings constructed during the time period. The first is located in the northwest corner of the district along North President Avenue, West Clay and West New Streets. A second concentration is located in the southeast corner of the district along Woodward and Dauphin Streets. The last major area of 1950s residential development is along the 800 block of Lehigh Avenue at the eastern edge of the district. Although the majority of the buildings constructed from 1951-1956 are located in these areas, there are additional contemporary buildings constructed as churches, stores, a library, and a governmental center dispersed elsewhere in the district. Most are generally two stories in height, principally of brick construction with concrete foundation. Their siting at the front of their building lots, although generally with a small set back from the sidewalk line, is a compliment to the earlier buildings in the historic district. The public buildings tend to be larger than their earlier counterparts typically filling their building lots to the rear alleys. Architectural styles represented during this period include Colonial Revival, Late Gothic Revival, and vernacular examples of the emerging Modern Movement. Modern building materials and construction methods such as thin stone veneers, reinforced concrete and pre-cast concrete facing and brick curtain walls are commonly used. Resources from the 1950 to 1956 period, numbering 87 buildings, the vast majority retain integrity and contribute to the district.

The Colonial Revival style was the most popular for new construction during the period. Details common to this style include keystone lintels, multi-paned tracery and ocular windows, and dropped cornices. Although commonly used for residential properties in the district, the two best examples are seen on two public buildings – the Lancaster Public Library (1953), 125-133 North Duke Street, and Trinity Lutheran Church's Education Building (1954), 31 South Duke Street. Although very different in appearance, both buildings feature a multi-bay wide façade and a prominent front facing gable pavilion. Both buildings have elaborate revival entrances with Trinity Church's pediment over a fanlight while the Library has a broken pediment over a square multi-light transom. The Lancaster Public Library also features large expansive multi-light display windows, another emerging trend of the 1950s architectural character for commercial buildings within the Lancaster City Historic District.

The Late Gothic Revival style and components of its style is also evident in the Lancaster City Historic District through several religious buildings constructed by congregations during the 1950s. Redeemer Lutheran Church, 500 Pearl Street, constructed an education wing for their congregation in 1955, using elements of the Late Gothic Revival to blend with their original sanctuary. Its design incorporates stone construction, a steeply pitched roofline, and a wheel window. Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church, 563-567 West Walnut Street, (1952) also loosely interprets elements of the Late Gothic Revival style. The nave includes a side chapel typical of many historical Gothic churches. The main facade facing West Walnut Street has a prominent rose window and two pylon sculptures near the roofline. The roughly sawn Indiana limestone walls give the church a modern, twentieth century appearance.

Elements of the emerging Modern Movement are apparent on other buildings in the Lancaster City Historic District in the 1950s. Buildings were constructed with less superfluous architectural detailing than their earlier counterparts. Typically, the buildings were massed as very angular structures with flat roofs hidden behind short parapet walls. As building construction technology changed, many buildings were constructed with reinforced steel structures topped with brick veneer walls. Examples of these styles included commercial buildings with prominent accentuated central entrances and flanking symmetrical fenestration, usually with metal sash, much like the building at 413-415 South Queen Street (1955) whose stylistic architectural elements resemble a vernacular interpretation of the International style. The Kendig C. Bare Public Safety Building (1954) is located on the northwest corner of East Chestnut and North Duke Streets (202-212 North Duke Street) has the clean linear lines of a modern architecture. The two-story, Modern styled municipal building is constructed of brick with a granite base and has a flat roof concealed behind a brick parapet wall with a concrete coping. The main entrance at 39 East Chestnut Street elevation is centered within a two-story rectangular entrance with marble reveals. In the southeast corner of the complex, the building features a cantilevered second floor with square windows set within marble surrounds.

Residential buildings constructed in the 1950s in the district show characteristics of the suburbanization movement. These buildings are set in the middle of their respective building lots rather than at the front property line. These buildings have shallow gable roofs and are constructed of brick veneers set on concrete block foundations. The majority of them are clad with synthetic siding or brick veneers, sometimes mixing both materials. A small neighborhood along Woodward and Dauphin Streets include several simplistic attached row houses intermixed along a streetscape of two-and-a-half story Late Victorian row houses. The Colonial Revival residential examples are far less stylized but feature accentuated front doors, double hung, multi-light windows arranged in pairs, and side-gabled roofs. The small neighborhood in the College View neighborhood in the northwest corner of the historic district contains a large density of these 1950s era Colonial Revival residences. Their designs incorporate different elements of the style mixing pent roofs, larger multi-pane bay windows, second story overhangs with one-story side porches, shutters, and dormer windows. These far less stylized examples feature accentuated front doors, double hung, multi-light windows arranged in pairs, and side-gabled roofs.

In addition to new houses constructed during the decade of the 1950s, modifications were made to existing residential buildings also. After two decades of deferred maintenance caused by the economic constraints of the 1930s and 1940s, many property owners looked for new materials to modernize their homes. Simulated masonry, sometimes called by its trade name, Formstone, was often applied to late nineteenth century brick buildings. Often the material was applied over the cornice lines but featured attractive arched lintels. Other common alterations on residential buildings include the removal of wooden turned porch posts and replacement with metal supports. These alterations are well dispersed throughout the district and do not detract from the overall cohesiveness of the district.

Several of the downtown's commercial buildings were modernized through the decade of the 1950s. In most cases, the first floor facades or storefronts were modernized to attract businesses and compete with other retailers. On many buildings, only the entrance and display windows were modernized, leaving the original storefront cornice and surround intact. Throughout the central business district, early eighteenth and nineteenth century residences were converted to stores or offices. In these cases, storefront windows were added to the first floor windows. The most popular designs included brushed or corrugated steel and plate glass. Other storefront modifications had Colonial Revival inspired detailing with multi-paned display windows, broken pediment door surrounds, and paneled entrance doors. The aforementioned storefront modifications do not alter the contributing status of the overall building since these alterations were limited to the first floor of an often two-to-four story building. Alterations that date prior to 1956 have gained significance due to their age and reflect the trend of building alteration throughout the district.

The Lancaster City Historic District's non-contributing resources include those that are less than fifty years old and earlier buildings that lost their architectural integrity. Given the number of resources located within the historic district, the expanded period of significance only minimally affects the ratio of non-contributing to contributing resources. Non-contributing resources are 4 % of the total number in the district and are mostly those constructed as part of the renewal efforts of the late 1960s and 1970s. These renewal efforts were focused in the 100 block of North Queen Street between Chestnut and Orange Streets and along the South Duke Street corridor. Because of the size of the Lancaster City Historic District, these concentrations do not detract from its overall integrity. The district retains its historical and architectural integrity. Its buildings constructed during the decade of the 1950s retain integrity as they are well maintained and are in good condition.

The Lancaster City Historic District meets National Register criterion A for significance in industry, commerce, politics/ government, and community planning and development and criterion C for significance in architecture. Its period of significance, 1760 to 1950 encompasses the district's greatest period of growth as an industrial, commercial and governmental center in Lancaster County. The purpose of this additional documentation is to extend the period of significance in the area of architecture of the Lancaster City Historic District to 1956, the fifty-year guideline for significance in the National Register Program. This documentation primarily addresses the architectural significance during the period of 1950-1960, an era not covered by the original nomination. The concentration of common mid-twentieth century building styles and alterations constructed during the time period conveys the importance of the historic district to its surrounding community.

The City of Lancaster was at a crossroads at the conclusion of 1950 like so many small-sized cities in South Central Pennsylvania. The post World War II trend toward suburban development began at the beginning of the decade. Residents, businesses, and industries moved from the center of town to outlying areas. In response, Lancaster developed plans to extend urban infrastructure, in the form of water and sewer lines, into the countryside (Schneider, 1995). The city annexed several parcels in hopes of capturing the tax revenue of this new development. By 1960, population for the city was 61,055. The decade of the 1950s gave the city its first decrease in population despite its annexing several areas into its geographic boundaries. Lancaster's surrounding region, in contrast, had a rate of population growth was more than twice the state's average (Shand and Keller, 1962). Lancaster City was still considered a well-established industrial center with many skilled and semi-skilled craftsmen and a diverse manufacturing base. In 1958, the city remained home to 191 manufacturing companies with employees numbering over 17,400 (Schuyler, 2002). Because of this stable industrial economy, the city's economy through the 1950s remained steady, albeit in a decline. Radical decreases in industrial and retail business would not be evident for another twenty years.

Although, the city was home to various retail, insurance, banking, and entertainment establishments in its central business district, other commercial activities were affected by the migration to the suburbs. As more and more families were moving out of the city, the competition for business and entertainment with new suburban outlets caused a subtle change to the character of the historic district with new construction projects and renovations to seduce clientele.

New construction projects were focused on individual buildings replacing their outdated previous headquarters, mainly as a way to keep abreast of new technology. The modern spacious Lancaster Public Library (1954), 125 North Duke Street was constructed on the site of its earlier predecessor just north of the rectory building of the Saint John's Episcopal Church. Lancaster General Hospital 555 North Duke Street, and St. Joseph's Hospital (now known as Lancaster Regional Hospital), 121 North

College Avenue, both started major renovations and constructed major additions (Wilson, 1978). Fire, Police, and other municipal departments also began projects to keep pace with the population growth by replacing its mid-nineteenth century police headquarters and firehouses. The Kendig C. Bare Public Safety Building (1954), 202-208 North Duke Street was constructed at the corner of East Chestnut and North Duke Streets, on the site of the former rail corridor of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Hotel Lancaster.

Struggling commercial businesses looked at ways to modernize their shops and to attract new customers. Dramatic changes to retail storefronts within the central business district of the downtown was the most prevalent. First floor storefronts were modernized with enamel panels, larger single pane aluminum display windows, and expansive signs. With traffic meandering through the city streets, many of the businesses installed large signs or internally illuminated signs. Stan's Record Bar, modernized their first floor storefront at 48 North Prince Street during the period with turquoise corrugated metal panels across the base of the new modern plate glass display windows. Other businesses embraced the last of the Colonial Revival movement, installing oversized storefront windows incorporated Neo-Colonial Revival divided windows. Most of these alterations were limited to the first floor level of commercial buildings while their upper floors remained pretty much intact.

Although people were moving their households out of the city, most families still came into the city for worship. Five congregations within the Lancaster City Historic District began large construction projects for expansion. Sacred Heart Catholic Church (1953-54), 563-567 West Walnut Street and Bethany Presbyterian Church (1954), 25 North West End Avenue constructed new sanctuary buildings. Trinity Lutheran, 31 South Duke Street constructed a new education building in 1954 as did Bethany Presbyterian Church, 25 North West End Avenue and Redeemer Lutheran Church, 500 Pearl Street.

Large urban renewal projects evident in other American cities during the 1950s were not evident in the Lancaster City Historic District. Such buildings date from the major renewal efforts in the mid-1960s and early-1970s. Development in the Lancaster City Historic District during the decade of the 1950s were marked by construction projects typical of a commercial, governmental, and religious center to its growing suburbs. Of the 87 resources constructed during the expanded period of significance, the vast majority of these have characteristics of common mid-twentieth century architectural styles. Their design and function as well as those alterations to extant buildings during the period are noticeable through the choice of decorative elements and building materials, many of them new to the building industry. The development of the decade within the Lancaster City Historic District shows that the district was considered an important center for commerce.

The 2006 Additional Documentation's Inventory did not include an entry for St. Joseph's Hospital, although it is mentioned in the narrative on page 8/1 and 8/2. Based on an interview with the documentation's preparer, it is clear the property was intended to be included in the Inventory as a Contributing Resource. The property is within the district boundary, within the expanded period of significance, and conforms to the intent of the documentation's preparer to provide the district with a period expansion and consideration of contributing status for resources built or altered post-1950 (the end of the original period as nominated).

Re: Lancaster City Historic District, Lancaster, Lancaster County

Dear Mr. Deibler:

As Mayor of the City of Lancaster, it is with great pleasure and pride that I recommend the nomination of the Lancaster City Historic District to the National Register of Historic Places. The City of Lancaster, with the encouragement and support of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, laid the groundwork for this nomination in 1994, when the City's Certified Local Government Grant Project included a citywide historic resources survey report. The primary purpose of this report was to identify the entire area of the City of Lancaster considered an eligible National Register historic district. In 1998, the PHMC approved the City's CLG application calling for the initiation of a multi-year process to prepare the formal National Register nomination.

One of the greatest strengths of our City is its history, reaching back to 1730. Lancaster's importance, beginning in the mid 1700's, as an economic, social and governmental center, not only of the region but also of the Commonwealth, is reflected in its architecture, including thousands of Victorian-period dwellings, hundreds of brick commercial, manufacturing and warehouse structures, and over one hundred historically significant institutional structures, such as government buildings, churches and schools. The citizens of Lancaster, through a comprehensive planning process in the early 1990's, identified the recognition and preservation of Lancaster's historic architecture as a priority concern. Therefore, this nomination fulfills one of the major goals of the City of Lancaster Comprehensive Plan.

The PHMC has been an active partner with the City of Lancaster as we have moved forward with this important nomination. We appreciate the ongoing support of our efforts to preserve Lancaster's architectural heritage and hope that one day Lancaster will be selected by the National Trust for Historic Preservation as a Distinctive Destination.

Sincerely,

Charles W. Smithgall
Mayor

Re: Lancaster City Historic District Additional Documentation, Lancaster County, PA (NPS# 01000956)

Dear Ms. Beasley:

In 2006 additional documentation was accepted for the Lancaster City Historic District that extended the period of significance to 1956, capturing emerging trends in American architecture and acknowledging major renovation and expansion campaigns across the city.

The inventory that accompanied that additional documentation neglected to include the former St. Joseph's Hospital (aka Lancaster Regional Medical Center). The hospital complex is mentioned in the additional documentation's narrative on pages 8/1-2. We have conferred with the preparer of the documentation and she asserts that the hospital should have been included as a "contributing" resource, and that its omission was an oversight. The arguments presented in the additional documentation to support extending the period justify consideration of the complex as a contributing resource.

Please accept the enclosed Continuation Sheet as an addition to the inventory to formally recognize the St. Joseph's Hospital complex as a contributing resource within the Lancaster City Historic District. If you have any questions, please contact April Frantz at (717-783-9922; afrantz@pa.gov). Thank you for your consideration of this property.
