Architectural Classification:

Late 19th and 20th Century Revivals: Colonial Revival

Materials:

foundation	Concrete
walls	Brick
roof	Asphalt
other	Wood

Description of present and historic physical appearance:

The Eric Vernon Folds House is the country estate of Eric Vernon and Inez Arnold Folds. Designed by Atlanta architect Clement J. Ford in 1948, the house is a high-style Colonial Revival-style residence in the early to mid-20th-century "Williamsburg" mode. The house is located one-and-one-half miles southeast of Carrollton on U.S. 27. An unpaved drive leads past the guesthouse to the sprawling two-story brick house, which is located at the crest of a small rise. The house faces an expansive lawn to the south and is framed by mature trees.

The house is laid out in a five-part Palladian plan with a center block and east and west wings. The one-and-one-half-story main block features floor-to-ceiling bays on the main façade and a projecting portico at the rear. True to Georgian architecture, the walls are laid in Flemish bond with flat arches of rubbed brick above the windows. The gable roof is covered with slate tiles.

The Georgian-plan features four principal rooms divided by a center hall. The dining room and living room are the largest rooms. Bedrooms are located in the west wing and the three-car garage forms the east wing. An apartment is located in the half-story above the garage. The hyphen that joins the main block with the garage includes the kitchen and a glazed porch. The second hall, which joins the main block to the bedroom wing, runs east to west along the main façade.

Most of the historic interior finishes survive including hardwood floors and plaster walls and ceilings. Architectural details include extensive wood moldings, dentil cornices, paneled doors, and Colonial Revival-style fireplaces with ornamental mantels. The kitchen fireplace is lined with a Delft-tile surround.

National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Section 7—Description

The setting for the house remains largely intact. The house opens onto a broad, sloping lawn. Overgrown hollies press against the façade and obscure the main block and wings. In the vicinity of the house are mature trees, including oak, hickory, and pine. The rear of the house includes a brick walk that runs the length of the building, remnants of a formal garden, and a nonhistoric gazebo Landscape architect William C. Pauley prepared two landscape plans for the Folds house in 1948. Pauley's brick walks, drives, and terraces were built but many of the plantings were replaced in the 1980s and early 1990s. This plan featured tea olives on the west side of the house, crape myrtle between the back porch and garden, nandina at the back entrance, and holly, photina, and pittosporum along the back wall. Around the parking area to the east osmanthus was planted. The original unpaved driveway is located east of the house where it curves away from the house and enters the woods.

In 1949, the Folds built a one-and-one-half-story brick guesthouse and two dairy barns. The barns no longer survive. The guesthouse has two rooms, main room and kitchen. The garage is located on the building's east end. An interior hall leads into the garage. Stairs from the kitchen lead to two small rooms and a bathroom above the garage. The interior was altered in the 1960's when the building was converted from guesthouse to kindergarten cottage.

In 1982, the Oak Mountain Academy built a gymnasium and a classroom building south of the Folds house. These buildings are not included in the National Register nomination.

Section 8—Statement of Significance

Statement of significance (areas of significance)

The Folds House was designed by architect Clement Ford in 1948 as a residence for Eric Vernon and Inez Folds. Eric Vernon Folds was a prominent Carrollton businessman and automobile dealer. His country house served his desire to be a gentleman farmer. The Oak Mountain Academy purchased the property from the Folds estate in 1964 and occupied the site until 1997. The main house served as headmaster's house, classrooms, offices, and the school library. The guesthouse served as the kindergarten classroom. Almost no changes were made to the main house in its conversion from a residence to a school.

The Eric Vernon Folds House is significant in the area of architecture because the house is an outstanding example in Georgia of high-style Colonial Revival residential design in its early 20th – century “Williamsburg” mode, made popular by the restoration and reconstruction of colonial houses in Williamsburg, beginning in the early 20th century. Its overall design, massing, layout, detailing, and materials exemplify the early to mid-20th-century Colonial Revival style in Georgia and the nation. The architect, Clement J. Ford of Atlanta, is well known for his “traditional” or historically derived architectural designs.

The Folds house exemplifies high-style Colonial Revival design in its early to mid-20th-century Williamsburg mode. This style was popularized by the restoration and reconstruction of Colonial Williamsburg, beginning in the 1920s. The exterior is defined by the symmetrical, five-part Palladian plan with central main block and side wings joined by hyphens. The brick walls are designed to resemble handmade 18th-century brick laid in Flemish bond. Flat arches above the windows formed with orange-colored rubbed brick contrast against the red brick walls, a stylistic detail of colonial architecture. Located southeast of the main house, the guesthouse features similar exterior brickwork and an interior brick chimney. Both the main house and guesthouse survive intact.

The Folds House is significant in the area of commerce for its association with Eric Vernon Folds, a prominent local businessman and automobile dealer. His four automobile dealerships and a Texaco franchise in Carrollton established him as civic leader and prominent local businessman. The house was built as a country home for Eric Vernon and Inez Folds, a socially prominent Carrollton family. Mr. Folds was a gentleman farmer and one of the first automobile dealers in the area, becoming long-time owner of the Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and Cadillac dealerships in Carroll County. The attached three-car garage illustrates the importance of the automobile to Folds as a local automobile dealer. In addition to his business activities, Mr. Folds, was a member of the Rotary Club, the Masonic Lodge, and Knights Templar, and was politically active in the community.

Criteria Considerations (if applicable)

N/A

Period of significance (justification)

The period of significance begins in 1948 with the completion of the main house and guesthouse and ends in 1955 at 50-year-end-date and the last year the house was occupied during the historic period.

Contributing/Noncontributing Resources (explanation, if necessary)

The nomination includes two contributing buildings: the main house and the guesthouse. The nomination includes one noncontributing resource, the less-than-fifty-year-old gazebo.

Developmental history/historic context (if appropriate)

Eric Vernon Folds followed his father into the automobile business in west Georgia to become one the region's most successful businessmen. His father, W. L. "Luby" Folds, established the first automobile dealership in Carroll County in 1912. Later, Eric Vernon Folds opened a Ford dealership in Bremen before establishing Ford, Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and Cadillac dealerships in Carrollton. He also owned the city's Texaco Oil Agency. Late in life, Eric Vernon Folds developed an interest in dairy farming and built a country estate south of Carrollton where he could pursue life as a gentleman farmer. He was a member of the Rotary Club, the Masonic Lodge, and Knights Templar. Folds died shortly after the house was completed. His wife, Inez Arnold, lived at the estate until 1964. The Oakwood Academy purchased the property that year. Kindergarten through 12th grade were taught in the Folds house, the guesthouse, and two buildings added to the property. Southwire Corporation purchased the property in 1997 and deeded it to Carroll County for use as a public park in 2001.

Following World War II, Eric Vernon Folds began construction of his house by clearing the wooded site overlooking Newnan Road south of Carrollton. Folds, successful businessman with a desire to become a gentleman farmer, made his fortune as a long-time owner of the Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and Cadillac dealerships in Carroll County. He commissioned the well-known Atlanta architect Clement J. Ford to design the house. Ford's work includes a number of houses in Atlanta's prestigious on West Paces Ferry Road that are "characterized by 'traditional' or historically derived architectural designs." William C. Pauley, an Atlanta landscape architect, produced landscape plans for the property.

Mr. and Mrs. Folds filled the house with oil paintings, damasks, brocades, and European antiques selected in New Orleans by the couple. The kitchen fireplace retains the original Delft tile surround. Once the home was completed, the Folds held a gala reception with music provided by a string ensemble (Carolyn Knight, Marilyn Hubbard, Alice Teal).

Section 8—Statement of Significance

Eric Vernon Folds died shortly after the house was completed in 1948. His wife, Inez Arnold, lived at the estate until her death in 1964. The Oakwood Academy purchased the property that year. The Oak Mountain Academy started with 50 students in its inaugural pre-first through eighth grade classes in 1964. In its 33 years at the Folds house, the Oak Mountain Academy served students from Carrollton and Carroll County and Coweta, Douglas, Haralson, Heard and counties. It hosted exchange students from France, Germany, Spain, and Brazil, and adopted a sister school in Lyon, France.

Rev. Mr. Flinn, school administrator, wrote that the curriculum was designed to:

To teach young people the all-important meaning of life, life lived out in full within the framework of Christian faith and practice, is the purpose of Oak Mountain Academy. The academic excellence toward which our boys and girls are challenged, and for which they are required to strive, is not enough alone. Sound learning must be joined with high morality and spiritual commitment to produce an excellent person, the useful and responsible citizen, a noble human being. First-rank education is concerned with the whole of life, and therefore, must instruct and inspire the student, especially the young student, in the full round of academic disciplines, social graces, civic obligations, and Christian behavior. It is to this task that Oak Mountain Academy is fully committed.

The ninth and tenth grades were added in 1965, the eleventh was added in 1966, and the twelfth was added in 1967. Oak Mountain Academy's first commencement ceremony took place on the front lawn of the Folds house in 1968. Baccalaureate and commencement ceremonies continued to be held on the front lawn of the Folds house until the school relocated to Cross Plains Road in 1997.

Initially, all classes and the administrative office were located in the Folds house and the cottage, with the exception of science classes, which were held across Stripling Chapel Road in the science lab created from the estate's dairy barn. To handle expanding enrollment, the Lower School, dubbed "the blue building," was added in 1968, followed in 1973 by the Gambrell Coliseum and the Middle School. The barn was razed in 1974. The cottage housed the school's kindergarten classes and was known as the kindergarten cottage.

The school's curriculum included archery, marksmanship, and fencing as part of their physical education classes. Students studied French from pre-kindergarten through the seventh grade. In the Upper School students were required to have four years each of English, mathematics, science, social studies, physical education, and two electives, including drama, music, and art. During their senior year, advanced students frequently enrolled in courses at West Georgia College in Carrollton.

The fields and woods on the property were important to the school as both outdoor classrooms and recreation areas. From pre-kindergarten through twelfth grade, classes walked the trails through the woods, identifying the specimens of flora and fauna as the seasons changed. Students sketched, photographed, and studied the outdoors. Middle and Upper School teachers often taught their classes under the shade trees or on the lawns. "It was the perfect place to teach English Romantic poetry and American Transcendental literature, as well as the works of writers, such as Thomas Hardy and William Faulkner, who realized the importance of nature in the lives of men, in the well-being of a society " (Teal).

The Oak Academy moved from the site in 1997 because the ground was contaminated from slag produced by Southwire's nearby copper wiring plant. The site was cleaned but restricted from major ground disturbance in the future. In December 2001, Southwire conveyed the 147-acre site, including house, guesthouse, and two less-than 50-year-old school buildings to Carroll County. The buildings and site are currently vacant. The county plans to use the property for recreation.
