DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Site contains State Line Mileage Marker (48th mile). It's made of cast iron weighting over 100 pounds. The marker is part of the original survey defining Oklahoma territory and the State of Arkansas. The marker is octagonal shaped pipe with the raised letters "48 M" near the top - on the north side, "1877" south side, "ARK". east side and "CHOC." west side.

The site of the marker is about 50 yards on a 4 foot wide trail from a paved parking lot just north of Highway 88. About half of the parking lot is in Oklahoma.

Site Alteration:

The Forest Service constructed a native stone and mortar base for the marker in 1974. This was done to prevent someone from stealing it. The marker location was not moved.

No other physical alterations have occurred to the marker.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This site is one of the few places where public access is available to one of the original 1877 State Line Mileage Markers. The survey of the State Line was a controversial government action because more than one survey occurred. Luci Baines Johnson, daughter of President Lynden Baines Johnson, dedicated the Talimena Scenic Drive at this location June 7, 1970.

The first State Line was agreed to in the Treaty of Doak's Stand in 1820 (Ark. Hist. Quarterly XXVIII 204.)

The Washington or Choctaw Boundary Treaty of 1825 (Baird, 17; Bearss, 97-99; Debo, 50; McReynolds, 118-119; Morris, Map No. 19 and text) set the present boundary south of Fort Smith, Arkansas.

All white settlers west of this line were to be removed. All Choctaws to the east were to relocate west. Future settlement of U.S. Citizens west of the line was to be prevented (Bearss, 97-99; Morris, Map No. 19 and text).

There was much dispute over this line by the Arkansas Territory but a U.S. Attorney General's opinion in 1829 confirmed this line. (Ark. Hist. Quarterly XXVIII 210-211).

James S. Conway of Lafayette County was appointed by President Jackson, Surveyor of Public Lands (Hempstead, 24). He certified the surveys as follows "I do hereby certify that the above plat of the line forming the boundary of the Choctaw lands in the Territory of Arkansas has such marks and bounds both natural and artificial as are represented thereon and described in the field notes thereof and returned with this "Plat" into the Office of the Secretary of War". Morris, Map No. 55 and text).

This line was later proved to diverge to the west (Debo, 195-197; Morris, Map No. 19 and text). The error may have been intentional (Ark. Hist. Quarterly XXVIII, 209).

The line became a focus of illegal liquor traffic (Bearss, 121-122, 126-127).

Many more arguments ensued until the Three Cornered Treaty of 1855 (Debo, 17-73 and Morris, Map 19 and text) which defined the same starting point and direction from Fort Smith.

Upon resurveying for only eight miles they found the old line diverging to the west. Choctaw witnesses resigned in protest when the Secretary of Interior gave orders "merely to retrace the boundary line as surveyed and marked in previous years" (Ark. Historical Quarterly XXVIII, 213-215; Debo, 195-197).

At the Civil War's end a new treaty was signed in 1866 and new efforts by the Choctaws were made to get the boundary changed to the east. The matter was finally settled, legislation confirming the old boundary in March 1875 (Ark. Hist. Quarterly XXVIII 216-218; Baird, 181-182).

The resurvey was made in 1877 and a survey was also made on a true south line. The acreage difference was calculated at 136,204.02 acres (Ark. Hist. Quarterly XXVIII, 219; Baird, 181-182; Morris, Map No. 19 and text).

Congress authorized settlement at 50¢ per acre on January 5, 1886 (Baird, 182; Morris, Map No. 19 and text).

4. DETAILS OF DISCUSSION

Since only the marker is of historical importance and since our program does not allow buffer zones, I suggested that one acre was excessive.

Also, Mr. Cowley said that the one acre includes a parking which I told him would not be eligible.

So , Mr. Cowley agree to less than one acre.
