9. Historical significance (include explanation of themes checked above)

102-104 is a double house which is an integral part of a series of Greek Revival houses built on Inman Street in 1845. Slight differences in handling create a sense of variety among these essentially similar buildings. Unlike the more pretentious houses of the period, none of these houses shows any departure from Greek Revival forms. Numbers 102-104 has four-bay fully pilastered facades and a paired Italianate porch.

The double house is essentially intact and represents an important expression of the Greek Revival in a form not found elsewhere in Cambridge.

Indicate each item on inventory form which is being continued below.

The building in question, 104A Inman Street, is located on a separate lot and is not meant to be included in this nomination. The base map originally used omitted the line dividing the two properties. The building at the rear of the lot is a one-story, concrete block garage, c.1925. It is not considered a contributing structure.

102=104 Inman Street meets criterion C as an important example of its type and style.
