DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Oklahoman is a five-story office building with a full basement. It is faced with Batesville marble, quarried in Arkansas, a stone similar to limestone. Constructed in 1909, it was designed with support piers for the addition of more stories at a later date. These were never added; instead, five more buildings were constructed on adjacent sites. The building appearance is much the same as in 1909, with exception of the windows. Original glass, mullions and frames were remove and replaced by plate glass sheets about five years ago. The exterior has not changed otherwise. The facade has been kept clean and the entire building in good repair. Interior has been changed and renovated extensively as production departments and newsroom have moved to later buildings. The building is classical in style, with composite capitals topping columns which extend the full height of the building, on the two street sides, N.W. 4 and Broadway. Federal eagles center the capitals, facing to either side. An entablature extends from fourth to fifth floors, with a tall frieze between cornice and architrave. The frieze is terra cotta, each section of which is centered with an ovallight fixture. The light covers are stained and leaded glass. The columns are flat and fluted and extend through the roof to become dividers for a balustrade around the top. Typical ornamentation on the cornice is egg and dart and dental. Copper spandrels extend horizontally from column to column at each floor level. No two are alike; each has a different geometric pattern. A pair of cluster light fixtures at the main (NW4 side) entrance are typical of the early 1900s and have been carefully preserved. Posts and lintels frame two front (Broadway) entrances. A clock centers one; a star design with the name and year of construction, the other. Construction was reinforced concrete, and the building is one of the earliest (if not the first) of such construction in Oklahoma City. There is no attic, but between the upper floor and roof is a cinderblock fill three feet thick for insulation, and an additional 8-inch air space. A photographic record of the construction has been preserved, and the working blueprints are on file in the company engineering department. Attached are photographs of the building as it appears now and has in the past, and of the building detail

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

8 SIGNIFICANCE

The Daily Oklahoman was established in 1894, only five years after the landrun of April 22, 1889, opened a portion of central Oklahoma to homestead settlement, creating Oklahoma City. It met with indifferent success until 1903, when new owners bought the newspaper and formed The Oklahoma Publishing Co.One was Edward King Gaylord, then 29, who became president of the company and publisher of its newspapers in 1918. (The Oklahoma City Times was bought by the firm in 1915.) Gaylord continued in that capacity until his death in 1974 at the age of 101. The publi Tcation was described by the young Gaylord as "terribly inadequate," and he set about transforming it. By October, 1903, the new company had a new two-story building, had contracted for Associated Press wire service and had installed new presses and other modern equipment. Its reputation for enterprise was established early, in February, 1904. Tension had been building between Russia and Japan and caused Gaylord to be apprehensive. Playing a hunch, he hired an AP telegrapher to remain on duty on a Sunday, although the Oklahoman then did not publish on Monday. That day, Feb. 8, Japan recalled its ambassador to Russia and prepared to attack the Russian fleet. A second major news story happened at the same time when fire broke out on the Baltimore water front. Before the night was over, much of the city was ashes, the loss estimated at $125 million. The Oklahoman extra was the only one printed between Kansas City and Dallas, and was sold in four states. Rapid expansion brought construction of The Oklahoman Building in 1909. Five other buildings wer added in later years. Edward L. Gaylord succeeded his father as president and publisher in May, 1974. The company bought the bankrupt Oklahoma City Times in 1915; established The Farmer Stockman in 1911, now the leading rural publication in the southwest, with separate publications in Oklahoma, Texas and Mistletoe Express Service, a wholly-owned subsidiary, was Kansas. formed in 1931 to deliver the papers, but grew to a major interstate shipping operation. In 1935, the papers were among 14 charter subscribers to newly-developed AP Wirephoto. In 1921, the company bought WKY, first radio station west of the Mississippi In 1949, WKY-TV became the first television station in River. Oklahoma, and in 1954, was the firstindependently-owned television station in the United States to broadcast in color. In recent years, broadcast interests have expanded under a subsidiary, Gaylord Broadcasting Corp., which now owns seven television stations and three radio stations extending from Florida to the Pacific Northwest, from the Mexico border to the Great Lakes. The company has expanded into offset printing, with acquisition of Oklahoma Graphics, which produces 400 million slick, color publications for clients throughout the U.S. each year, and into packaging with National Packaging, which converts plastics and cellophane to food bags, producing multiple millions annually. A company division is Publishers Petroleum, an independent oil and gas exploration operation with 150 producing wells in four states. In 1977, the company bought The Colorado Sun, and is constructing a new building and buying all new equipment as it upgrades news content. From the beginning, the company's newspapers have pioneered technological advances in publishing and have held several patents for a variety of inventions. A major breakthrough came in 1961, with development of the first computer to justify lines of type. The newspapers' accounting and production personnel perfected the method, working with International Business Machines. The newspapers have sponsored numerous reforms, civic improvements and conducted repeated exposes. Its staffs have won many national awards, and the papers have been ranked among the nation's outstanding dailies in Ayer competition, many times.
