The Friendly City Building and Jail is sited off State Route 2, known locally as Orchard Street. There is a long narrow lot that borders SR 2, and the small clapboard building is between two nearby houses. On the local maps a small street runs along the north side of the building called Union Street, but physically no street exits today.

The front or west facade has a gable end with a wide entablature board above the front single 2/2 double-hung wood sash window. The front door is on the north side of the building, and is a new stout metal replacement door. The south facade of the building has an original 2/2 double-hung sash window, and for the jail cell there is a small narrow opening. The building rests on a stone foundation and has a gable seamed metal tin roof.

The interior of the building has two rooms, the meeting room and jail cell. Both rooms are small with a carpeted wooden floor and beaded wood walls. The four walls of the jail cell have an interior cavity with actual 2 x 6 " boards stacked horizontally. The thick wooden walls were to deter escape by prisoners. The door between the two rooms is metal in a lattice pattern, with a lever locking system instead of a key. The jail cell was originally furnished with a cot and washstand.

On the north facade a small plywood shed addition has been added. The room connects with the former jail cell and has a rear exit door. The addition was added in the 1970s by the town Emergency Squad during their tenure in the building. There is a question if this addition will be removed in the nearby future.

Summary:

Although small for a city building, the two room structure has provided a monthly meeting place for the town board, office for the police and emergency squad, and provided a place for temporary prisoners or hobos.

Section number 8 Page 1

The Friendly City Building and Jail is significant under Criteria A for Government during the period of 1901 to 1949. The building is still used by the town as a meeting place for monthly town board meetings.

The community of Friendly was settled in 1785 by two brothers, Thomas and John Williamson. The area was called Fairview Landing and consisted of 27 acres. The town takes its name from the first given name of Friend Cochran Williamson, grandson of Thomas Williamson. The name was used for the first post office in 1883.

Although the area had been settled in the late 18th century, it was the late 19th century when the town developed. A ferry across the Ohio River had operated since 1830 and after 1883 the Wheeling, Parkersburg and Charleston Railroad and the Ohio Valley Railroad, which was a branch of the B&O Railroad, provided service. What is today's State Route 2 was a roadway along the bank of the Ohio, connecting all the river towns.

By the end of the 1890s, the town was booming with various businesses and industries such as a flour mill, lumber mill, and amenities like gas lights and board walks. The First National Bank of Friendly was constructed in 1895. Installation of the first phone service by WV Western was in 1898.

It was in 1898 that the town was incorporated, with the first town board meeting in May of that year. The property for the city building was deeded in June 1901 by A.T. and Mary Smith. The small city building was built during that year, located off Orchard and Union Street. Its use was for the town board to have a meeting room and a one room jail cell. The meeting room also doubled as a sheriff's office.

The construction of the building was simple, with frame construction on a stone foundation. Original 2/2 double-hung wood sash windows still light the meeting room. The jail cell had walls thick enough to stack 2 x 6" pieces of lumber from floor to ceiling in all four walls. A metal door with open lattice swings on large hinges, and locks with a lever mechanism. Close laced metal lattice near the lever prevented a hand from inside the jail cell to unlock the door.

Town records indicate various incarcerations for law breaking. The town also had a policy of offering housing for traveling hobos who wanted to stay overnight. A cot and washstand in the jail cell served this double purpose.

The town continued to prosper with a new grade school being built in 1900, having a two year high school program too. The Electric Railroad Company was constructed in 1903 and more stores continued to open such as hardware, feed stores, and a gasoline plant. The town survived a tornado in 1909 and various floods over the years, especially 1913 and 1936.

The first all women city government in the county was elected for office to serve between 1937 and 1939. The women became well known with a film documentary being made about their role in town government. The members were: Mayor Stella Eddy, Recorder - Elgie Rustemeyer, and Treasurers - Moude Livingston, Ella Williamson, Letatia Bowles, Gladys Knowlton, Clara Williamson, and City Police - Josephine Cline. During the women's tenure the town saw various improvements including new trees, a new town pump, new laws on animals and new steps up Friendly Hill to the area known as Home City. The women took office just a year after the flood of 1936, and may have had to deal with the aftermath of the destruction.

The jail cell was last used for prisoners in the 1930s. After that time prisoners were transferred to the Tyler County Jail in the Middlebourne Courthouse. For many years the building was used by the Police Department until 1980. During the 1970s, the local Emergency Squad kept equipment and had an office in the building.

Summary:

The small frame city building has a long history of serving the town of Friendly. While diminutive in size, the building has been a place of city government for over 100 years. Some fragile records still are housed in the building and the town board meets here monthly.
