SUMMARY

Constructed in 1910, the Humphreys-Ryan House is a one-and-a-half story wood frame residence with a gabled roof located at 137 Garland Avenue. The house is situated in one of the oldest residential neighborhoods in Hot Springs, called Jonestown. The streets surrounding the home contain diverse architectural styles, many of which are intact. The majority of the homes are Craftsman bungalows, but Tudor Revival, Queen Anne, and Colonial Revival structures can be found. The Humphreys-Ryan House rests on a continuous brick foundation, originally composed of brick piers and lattice-work, and is clad in hand-milled weatherboard. The overtly decorative historic elements on this otherwise very simple Colonial Revival house are the cornice detailing over each window and door, the scrolled applique on the front porch gable, and a slight bay on a side elevation. A stick balustrade borders the full front porch supported by four Tuscan columns. A short concrete retaining wall dating from 1910 borders the front and western side of the lot.

ELABORATION

Humphreys-Ryan House

The front or northern facade features a full front porch with a beaded ceiling supported by four Tuscan columns that are spanned by a simple stick balustrade. The balusters are not original but closely resemble those constructed in 1910. The end posts resting against the house wall are from the original porch but the current balusters are spaced farther apart than the original. Four centered concrete steps bordered by wrought-iron railings lead to the wooden porch floor (The original porch steps were wooden). A single, wide one-over-one double-hung wooden window lights the east corner of the house. The adjacent paneled single-leaf front door originally featured a single beveled light, however the current owner replaced it with a stained glass panel by Hot Springs artist Michael Garrett in 1999. A ribbon of three windows opens into the living room at the west end of the house. The center window is much wider than the other flanking pair and has been referred to as a "casket window." The porch roof is hipped with a slight center gable decorated with a wooden scrolled applique. A ribbon of three one-over-one windows in an off-center gable lights the upper story. Cornice returns and gingerbread trim applied to the apex of the gable in 1999 embellish the upper floor. At the peak of the roof is a flat surface of approximately twelve-by-fifteen feet.

The eastern elevation is lit south to north by a one-over-one aluminum window, and four evenly spaced wooden windows. A gabled dormer with a pent roof beneath the pediment opens into the upper level and contains a one-over-one window. The northeast gable end of the upper story contains a single window and features cornice returns.

The southern, rear elevation features one of the few alterations to the home since its construction. In the 1970s a small screened-in porch was removed for the enlargement of the kitchen which consists of a small gable-roofed wing. A single aluminum window at the west corner, a modern door and a second aluminum window at the east corner light the wing. The eastern corner of the main house wall is fenestrated by a single window. A single window fenestrates the upper story.

A pair of windows lights the western elevation at the north corner. These windows replaced an original rectangular window placed high in the wall in the 1920s. A slight bay in the center of this elevation contains a ribbon of three windows, the center one being slightly larger than the flanking two. A pair of short windows and a single aluminum window is placed at the southwest corner of the house. A single window is centered in the gable end of the upper story.

Interior

Although the interior of the Humphreys- Ryan House has been extensively altered through the enlargement and addition of rooms, it still retains original hardwood floors, moldings, and an oak mantelpiece.

Garage

A detached one-car garage was built on the back of the lot to the south of the house circa 1950s. It is an L-shaped building sheathed in board-and-batten siding. Due to its recent construction date the garage is considered noncontributing to this nomination.

SUMMARY

The Humphreys-Ryan House has maintained its original integrity throughout the years since its construction. Exterior alterations to the home have been inconspicuous and in keeping with the original architectural flavor of the home. The current owner has taken pains to interview the Ryan's daughter, Margaret Ryan Francis and has obtained information that has enabled her to be faithful to the 1910 appearance of the house. While the attic of the house has been modernized into living space, and the kitchen and bath have been enlarged and updated through the removal of a rear porch, the building retains the majority of its historic integrity.

ELABORATION

The Humphreys-Ryan House is located southwest of downtown Hot Springs in the Jonestown neighborhood. The area was named for Jennie Ward Jones the daughter of John H. Ward who began buying land in the area as early as 1850. Jennie and her brother Job, who was a lawyer, continued purchasing land and by the mid-1870s owned a large portion of that section of Hot Springs. Some of the streets in the addition bear Mrs. Ward's family name (Ward Avenue) and those of prominent state personalities such as; Garland Avenue for Arkansas governor Augustus H. Garland; and Rector Street for the Civil War governor, Henry Massey Rector.

In 1909, 137 Garland Avenue was a vacant lot. At that time Charles J. Humphreys borrowed money to build on the land. Mr. Humphreys is listed in the 1912 Hot Springs city directory as manager of the Southern Pharmacy, 262 Central. Mr. Humphreys sold the lot to the Earl family in 1912, who sold the to the Biggadikes in 1918. There was no significant information found on the Earl family or the Biggadikes. In 1920 attorney Richard M. Ryan purchased the home.

Mr. Ryan grew up in Mount Vernon, Missouri. He attended Mount Vernon High School and the University of Missouri Law Department and was admitted to the Missouri Bar in 1905. Football occupied Ryan's time outside of the law office. For six years he was coach for the Mount Vernon High School, a position he accepted with no pay due to his love for the game. He moved to Hot Springs in 1911 to serve as legal adjuster for the John Robinson Circus. He was admitted to the Arkansas Bar that same year in a ceremony before Circuit Judge C.T. Cotham. Mr. Ryan's love for football continued during his residency in Hot Springs. Considered a football authority, he practiced law four days of the week and was allowed to pick and choose officiating jobs on the weekends. For many years he officiated major Southwest Conference college and high school football games.

In 1915 Ryan's law office is listed in the Hot Springs city directory as being located at 126 Garland. The house he then shared with his wife of one year, Nelle, is listed as 1536 Central and his brother, George Ryan is listed as residing at 1525 Central. His daughter, Margaret indicated that they lived in the Frank Rowels Apartments, 110 Garland in 1917 down the street from her mother's dream house, 137 Garland Avenue.

Ryan never ran for public office but he was considered "Mr. Republican" in Garland County for more than a generation. In 1923 he was appointed Republican member of the County Board of Election Commissioners. In this capacity he helped to select judges and clerks for general elections. Ryan served as chairman of the Republican County Committee for twenty-three years. He voluntarily retired from both positions in 1950. Ryan became assistant attorney for the Missouri Pacific Lines in 1925, trying about four hundred civil cases. The attorney defended about fifty persons charged with murder and only one was sentenced to a twenty-one year term, however he was pardoned about two years later.

Ryan was active in the Masonic Lodge of Mount Vernon, the Masonic Chapter #47 of Hot Springs, Royal Arch Masons and the Commandery #5 of Hot Springs, Sahara Shrine of Pine Bluff, and was exalted ruler of the Hot Springs Elks. The Ryans occupied the Humphreys-Ryan House from 1920 to 1957, the date of his death. His wife Nelle lived there until her death in 1977. Their daughter, Margaret and her husband, Paul Francis, then postmaster of Hot Springs, lived in the home from 1977 to 1982. The next occupants were their son, Paul Francis Jr., and his wife, who lived there until 1989. The current owner has occupied the house since 1997.

Significance

The Humphreys-Ryan House is a largely intact example of a Colonial Revival cottage in the Jonestown neighborhood of Hot Springs. Constructed in 1910, the house continues to evince the early twentieth-century character of Jonestown and Hot Springs. The few exterior alterations are slight and do not disrupt the original lines of the house. As the most intact example of early twentieth-century Colonial Revival styling on Garland Avenue, the Humphreys-Ryan House is being nominated to the National Register with local significance under Criterion C.
